But, in spite of her disappointment and vexation, there was a smile upon her face as she ran down to join her father. She was not surprised to see seated by the window of their sitting room the plainly dressed girl whom Sir Roydon Garth had accompanied into the hotel before he drove away. The Major introduced her gravely, and, in spite of the discomfiture which she clearly expected for herself, Sabina could not help being secretly amused by the expression of her father's face as he did so.

"This is Miss Marvel, Sabina. Miss Marvel—my daughter."

Then, as the two girls shook hands, looking curiously at each other, the Major went on to explain.

"Miss Marvel has recently become engaged to our friend, Sir Roydon Garth, and the Baronet has begged that she may travel to England under my escort. She is paying a two-months' visit to Delverton Hall during our friend's absence on business in Nerada. He will join us at dinner this evening prior to his departure, which must take place by the night express; and he is so pressed for time that he has been obliged to leave Miss Marvel in our care at once while he transacts some necessary business in the city. He was sorry that he could not remain to introduce you personally to his fiancee, whom I am sure you will for his sake welcome as a sister."

The red-faced old soldier made the whole elaborate speech without a pause. Perhaps it was with the intention of giving his daughter time to recover from the shock that part of his information would naturally cause her. If so, his care was quite unnecessary.

Before his speech was finished Miss Sabina had thrown her arms affectionately around Lilac's neck and given her a dozen pecking little kisses.

"And so you are going to marry Sir Roydon?" she said enthusiastically, holding her hands. "I am so glad to know you, dear! We are very fond of your future husband, and we were dreadfully afraid that he would marry that rich ugly cousin of his, whom we do not like at all. Do you know Evangeline Garth?"

Lilac shook her head.

"No; I have seen none of Sir Roydon's friends. I shall be quite a stranger in England."

Sabina expected as much from the suddenness of her arrival, together with the cotton dress and the trace of a Californian accent; but the girl's voice disappointed her. She had jumped to the conclusion that the young baronet was marrying somebody very much beneath him; in spite of the accent however, Lilac's voice was the sweet, well modulated voice of a lady, and was in perfect harmony with the ladylike composure with which she answered. She went on speaking, while Sabina examined her face and figure critically, and unwillingly admitted to herself that Sir Roydon's fiancee was certainly very beautiful.

"I am afraid that you will think I have been thrown upon your kindness in a very unceremonious manner," said Lilac. "Sir Roydon has just been explaining to Major Emmott how it had happened."

"Yes—a most romantic story!" said the old soldier, speaking more easily now that he was assured that his daughter had no immediate intention of fainting or becoming hysterical. "Miss Marvel saved the Baronet's life at great personal risk, and in circumstances which rendered it impossible for her to remain longer with her relatives."

"Why, you are a real live heroine, then!" exclaimed Sabina, with a flutter of enthusiasm. "I have wanted to know a heroine all my life—haven't I, papa? You must tell me all about it."

"I do not think we can ask Miss Marvel to do that at present," interposed the Major, who had just heard the whole story from Sir Roydon— "Miss Marvel is very tired. You must remember that she has been travelling all night, and has only just arrived in the city. I will go and see whether I can engage a room for her near yours, dear."

The Major was glad to make his escape. He was feeling very awkward in the presence of the new charge that had been forced upon him so unexpectedly, and was quite undecided still as to whether he had done right in acceding so readily to the young Baronet's request, and giving his countenance to a course of conduct that did not altogether fit in with his ideas of strict propriety, especially when it gave such a death-blow to the hopes he had been indulging in on his daughter's account.

CHAPTER VII.

"Miss Marvel, Miss Marvel! Lilac dear!"

Lilac started up from a dreamless sleep and rubbed her eyes. For a moment she imagined that she was back at Deadman's Gulch, and that this was her uncle's voice rousing her in the morning. But her uncle would not have called her "Dear!" and the voice she heard was certainly not his. It sounded affected and unnatural, and as Lilac recognized it, she remembered suddenly where she was. She had fallen asleep soon after noon, and now it was quite dark. An appalling fear flashed into her mind that she had slept beyond the time of her lover's visit, and that she had lost the last chance of seeing him before she started for England.

"What is it?" she cried, springing out of bed in alarm at the thought; and Sabina Emmott's voice, which had been calling her, answered from the other side of her locked door—

"Sir Roy has sent me to wake you. He will have to leave soon. He would not allow me to disturb you before because you must be so tired; but he cannot go away without seeing you."

"What time is it?" Lilac was full of anxiety. She was relieved to find that her lover was still in the hotel; but the thought seemed unbearable that he had allowed her to waste in sleep the last opportunity of seeing him which she would enjoy for so long. Her heart sank when the reply came through the closed door—

"It is after ten o'clock. Shall I come in and help you to dress, dear?"

In her haste Lilac refused the offer almost curtly, and hurried across the room to make herself ready to go down and see her lover. It took her only a few minutes to put on the simple cotton dress in which she had made her escape from the ranch, and to bind her hair into a simple coil at the back of her shapely head. But the minutes seemed like hours to poor Lilac, who felt that each one of them was so much taken from her last meeting with the man she loved.

"Sir Roydon is waiting for you most impatiently," she said, as they walked down the broad stairs of the hotel together, "in the room where you first saw us when you arrived. I believe he would have had you waked for dinner, but we persuaded him that it would be very cruel after your having passed through so much. I did not like disturbing you now, but your ardent lover insisted."

Sabina ran on in the same chattering way as they went down the two flights that led to the Emmott's private sitting-room, and did not wait for her companion to make any reply. But, as they neared the room, Lilac stopped abruptly.

"Is Major Emmott with Sir Roydon?" she asked quietly.

Sabina shook her head in more-bird-like fashion than ever.

"I think not. He went down to the reading room when I came up for you."

Lilac had expected to hear this. The little she had seen of Major Emmott made her credit him with delicacy enough to allow her to meet her lover alone for the first time after their exciting adventures together. His daughter was different and Lilac turned to her.

"I would rather meet Sir Roy alone, then, if you do not mind," she said quietly; and only she herself knew what it cost her to say it.

Miss Emmott smiled sweetly.

"Of course, dear! I can understand your anxiety," she said; and the smile did not fade from her face until the door had opened and closed behind the girl to whom she spoke. Then a much less pleasing expression took its place as Miss Sabina shrugged her shoulders. "Dear me, Miss Marvel, you are quite a grand lady" she said to herself. "You will take more trouble to manage than I thought;" and she returned to her own room, to admire herself in the cheval-glass, and think of the contrast between her dress and that of the Californian girl.

A REMARKABLE ENGLISH SCHOOL.

Where Girls Are Taught to Play and to Become Physically Perfect.

Situated in the midst of a thick-spreading wood, about two miles from the pretty little Kentish village of Dartford Heath, is one of the most remarkable educational establishments in the world. It is essentially a ladies' college, no "male creatures" being allowed within its sacred precincts, except at certain stated and rare intervals. But this is not all. The point is that it differs from all other girls' schools, in that its pupils are taught, not the best way to work, but the best way to play.

The idea is to train up women who shall be physically perfect, and to this end everything else is subordinated. For instance, there are anatomical classes, that the students may know which muscles are brought into play in walking, driving, swimming, etc., classes in hygiene, that they may learn what kind of food to eat and what to avoid. But the be-all and the end-all of the whole curriculum is the attainment for women of that "sound mind in a sound body," which is justly esteemed so essential to men's well-being.

The founder and principal of this unique college is Mme. Bergman Osterberg, a Swedish lady, who is rightly regarded as the foremost living authority upon physical culture for women.

The foundation of the physical culture taught at the college to the thirty or forty "sweet girl graduates" there assembled is Ling's Swedish system of gymnastics. By constant practice in a series of beautiful and rhythmical movements, the whole body is made lissome and strong. Then, as soon as the pupil is "fit," all kinds of games are indulged in. Cricket, hockey, tennis, croquet, jumping and vaulting, racing, cycling and almost every other form of sport is pursued, with an eagerness and an anxious desire to excel such as would put to shame the boys of many of our public schools. Swimming is also part of the regular college course, a natural swimming-bath being formed out of a private part of the River Darenth, just where it runs through and is dammed up in an old, secluded and romantic garden.

The college is intended mainly for the training of lady teachers of gymnastics, but there are many pupils, the daughters of wealthy people, who are undergoing the course for their health's sake. A girl goes to the training college pale, anaemic and listless, and in the course of a few months is transformed into a rosy, healthy woman, fit to "go anywhere and do anything."

Between eighteen and thirty is the usual age of admission, but the closer candidates approach the former age the better. Before a pupil's name is placed on the books she has to submit to a medical examination, in order to make sure there is no organic disease present; and she must also certify her willingness to abide by the college rules and regulations.

The life, though healthy, is far from an easy one. Professors and pupils alike go bareheaded, no matter how inclement the weather may be, and "early to bed and early to rise" is a precept that is rigidly enforced. Then the diet, though liberal, is plain, and must not be privately modified without permission. The wearing of the uniform is also obligatory. It consists of a sort of loose-fitting blouse of dark-blue cloth, with a pleated kilt of similar material falling to the knees, black woolen stockings and low tan shoes. Corsets, or any substitute therefor, are strictly forbidden. In this costume, unless it is actually raining, the girls spend practically the entire day in the open air.—Answers.

At a church in Lenox last summer the pulpit was supplied by an assistant clergyman. One Sunday in the course of his sermon this minister told how a man had amassed a large amount of money simply by prayer, going on to give the incidents of the case. A titter ran through the congregation when the minister, after dwelling on the fact that prayer alone had brought about this man's fortune, placed his hands together, and, looking upward in a very prayerful attitude, said, "Lord, teach us how to pray!"—Troy Times.

A MODERN ROMEO.

She had coasted down a steep hill which turned two sharp corners. She had an escort, but he was a young man with discretion and a brake, and while he would do a good deal to save her he couldn't see the pleasure in perishing with her. So when she whirled around the first corner he resigned himself to losing her and wondered how he would take the body home. The thought came to him that the situation would be less complicated if she should be dead than if she should be seriously wounded, but he put that idea aside hastily, and hoped that she wouldn't suffer much before he could get aid.

When he cautiously turned the second corner he saw the victim sitting on a stump beside the road and tapping the ground with her foot.

"Come by freight?" she asked scornfully. Her protector dismounted and looked her over.

"You aren't hurt?" he said anxiously.

"Of course not. What could hurt me?"

"You really oughtn't to do that sort of thing, you know," he protested. "Nobody has any business coasting that sort of hill."

"I hope you don't think that a bad hill!"

He did, and registered a mental oath that the next time he should take a girl wheeling she wouldn't be able to ride better than he, but he smiled feebly, and then the girl relented.

"I guess it is a nasty hill," she said, sweetly. "But I'm never afraid of coasting. They say the best way to teach a boy to swim is to throw him into deep water and let him scramble for life. If he finds he can take care of himself, then he'll never be afraid again. I learned to coast something after that fashion. I don't believe I could ever have screwed up courage enough to try it deliberately, the way that you men do."

"How did it happen?" he asked. Her hand was a nice soft little one, and he concluded it made little difference if a girl did ride well. There were other things to be considered. On the whole, he thought he wouldn't change girls for his next ride.

"We were up at Magnolia," she said, "and I had been riding all summer, but I used a brake, and back pedalled down hill, and if the place was a bad one I got off and walked. People said I didn't have proper pride about wheeling, but I wasn't taking any risks, and the very thought of coasting made my blood run cold. One day we started for Annisquam, and about half way ther we struck an awful hill. It was frightfully steep and long, and was full of gravel. Then there were springs in the woods, so that little streams ran across the road diagonally and had washed out deep hollows. At the bottom the road turned a sharp corner in sand and ran down almost to the beach, but finally it divided, one path going on to the beach and the other turning along the shore.

Then some difficulties with regard to staying on the stump were arranged and she went on with her story.

"Several swell carriages were coming up the hill, and I didn't want to look like a 'fraid cat, so I pedalled ahead and started down. I tried to use my brake, but the wretched thing wouldn't work, and by the time I found that out I had struck the first washout. My wheel gave a jump—you know how—my feet flew off the pedals, I flew off my seat, but I came down on the saddle, and away we went. My, how we did fly! I didn't know what to do with my feet, so I tried to curl them up out of harm's way and gripped the handle bars and wondered who would feel worst about my death. What? Oh, but you see you didn't know me then, so you wouldn't have known what you were losing.

"The people leaned out of their carriages to watch me go by, and I heard one old gentleman say 'Crazy fool. She deserves——' but I was too far away by that time to hear the rest of it. I suppose he thought I was doing my little stunt for fun. Tom was ahead of me, and I couldn't turn out for anything, so I screamed, 'Look out, Tom. I'm coasting!' He said 'Jerusalem,' and scrambled to the side of the road, looking as scared as I felt. He thought I was doing it all on purpose, too.

"My wheel made flying leaps over every little stream, and I stayed on, but I knew about that sand at the bottom of the hill and thought I could see my finish. It took something more than sand to stop me in my mad career. I flew around the corner and on down the road, but I didn't have sense enough to turn the second corner.

"The wheel tore along the path, over the pebbles and stones, and into the water. When we met the surf we went down. I wasn't surprised at that. It seemed to me nothing but the end of the world would stop that wheel. I grabbed the bicycle and waded out. By that time Tom was on the beach waiting for me."

"Wasn't he relieved?" asked the young man, tenderly.

She looked indignant.

"Relieved? He howled! He said when he took a girl bicycling he was prepared to save her from some kinds of death, but that he wouldn't swim to her rescue. He couldn't afford to shrink his bicycle togs.

"Now, when I'm going riding with a man, Tom always advises him to wear his bathing suit."

SPORTING.

GOLF.

A large number of the members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club have been playing golf on the links of the Park Golf Club, of late, and they are loud in their praise of the course.

On September 24th the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will play the regular monthly handicap, and on October 1st the Harbor Hill Golf Club will come to Plainfield for a return match.

A golf team match is scheduled for next Saturday between the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club team of this city and the Harbor Hill Golf Club team of New Brighton. The match will be played at New Brighton.

It would be well for golf players who enter the various events on the local links to preserve their scores. It is impossible for the local papers to keep any sort of a record of the season's play if the players are so careless in this particular.

The officials of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club would like to have it stated that caddies are in demand at the links. The club has engaged a man to look after the boys, and parents can feel perfectly safe in allowing their boys to do this kind of work. The boys are paid 12 cents an hour.

AROUND THE BASES.

Next Saturday the Riverdale Field Club, of this city, will play a game with the Woodbridge team. The game will be played in this city.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

William Ford, of the Fifth Light Artillery, U. S. regulars, is home from Matauk Point for a forty-eight hour furlough.

Mrs. E. R. Pope, of Park avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pope, of West Fourth street, have gone to Atlantic City for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Mills, of Summit avenue, have returned home after spending five weeks visiting relatives in Western New York.

Wrecked at Sea.

Friends and relatives of Wilbur Chamberlain, who formerly lived in this city, and who has been reporting the progress of the Spanish-American war from Cuban waters, for the New York Sun, were alarmed Sunday morning to hear that the press boat of which he was in command sailing from Porto Rico to Havana, was wrecked September 8th. The brief cablegram only stated that the vessel was lost, but that the captain and crew were saved. No further particulars have been learned, and the whereabouts of the correspondent and the crew are unknown.

G. O P. MEET BY SEA.

UNION COUNTY REPUBLICANS ENJOYING THEIR CLAMBAKE.

A Big Shore Dinner the Essential Feature, But Political Booms Will be Given a Good Push—Plainfielders Who are There.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, September 13—From the most insignificant election district leader to those who control the political destinies of the county there was a gathering of the G. O. P. forces at the Republican headquarters in the Dix building on Broad street this morning soon after 9 o'clock. It was the assembling of those who were bent on attending the annual clambake of the Union county Republicans, which is being held at Neptune Heights, near Avon-by-the Sea, today. A party of a hundred or more started in due time for the scene of the festivities, and many a political boom will be launched there today. The politicians were conveyed to the Heights by a special train on the Central Railroad. Each member of the party was furnished with a cane and badge and an imposing array they made.

Though sociability and indulgence in a big shore dinner is primarily the object of the gathering, an impromptu menu of politics will undoubtedly be served up in steaming shape. Some aspiring ones may have their political hopes badly burned, but out of the clambake there will be some booms that will be cooked just right for serving at the conventions later on.

Among those from Plainfield who joined the party were: J. W. Murray, Amos Moffett, Captain Hubbard, W. J. Drayton, Hon. Roger Murray, George Tobin, Andrew McArdle, Alonzo Ayres, City Clerk MacMurray, William Newcorn and Councilman Runyon.

A Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to Charles L. Force, of Duer street, last evening, the occasion being the thirty-first anniversary of his birthday. The affair was arranged by Mr. Force's wife, and the playing of all sorts of games was the feature of the evening. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. VanHorn, Miss Matie VanHorn, Miss Ada VanHorn, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Krewson, Mr. and Mrs. David N. Force, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stein, Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, Miss Minnie Force and Miss Fenner.

Gave His Parishioners a Surprise.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, who has been spending the summer in Europe, returned very suddenly last Sunday morning and gave his people a surprise. He walked into church during the morning service and received a glad ovation from the congregation. Dr. Snodgrass is looking well and hearty and his trip did him lots of good.

Plaintiff Taken Suddenly Ill.

The contract case of George Miller against Mrs. Phœbe Marshall was to have been tried before Justice Mosher this morning. Because of the feebleness of the defendant, the parties agreed to try the case in W. S. Angleman's office. After both parties, witnesses and lawyers had made ready to proceed, the plaintiff was taken suddenly ill, and the case had to be postponed again.

Visited an Elizabeth Lodge.

Twenty members of Columbia and Central Lodges, A. O. U. W., visited Memorial Lodge at Elizabeth last night. About 300 guests were present altogether, and a social evening was spent. The secret work of the order was demonstrated by a team from Camden, after which singing, speaking and refreshments followed. E. H. Collyer, of Newark, presided over the meeting.

NOT ENOUGH HOT WATER

THAT'S WHY DAVID MIODOVNIK WON'T PAY FOR THE BOILER.

But A. B. Thorn Says That He Has Fulfilled His Contract and He Wants $85—Case Being Heard in Justice Nash's Court.

It is not pleasant for a jury to understand that if they do not arrive at a verdict by a certain hour they will be locked up until after midnight, but under just those circumstances a jury undertook to try the contract case of A. B. Thorn against David Miodovnik yesterday afternoon in Justice Nash's court. However, they were not obliged to undergo this trying ordeal, or to come to a verdict without sufficient deliberation, for court adjourned at 6 o'clock, to be resumed today at 2 o'clock.

The suit was one brought by Thorn against Miodovnik for payment for a boiler and heating apparatus which the former placed in Miodovnik's barber shop on West Front street. The sum sued for is $85, and the excuse given by the defendant for not paying the bill is that the boiler does not fulfill the requirements.

The case is an interesting one from several standpoints. As the sum of $85 is involved, twelve men compose the jury. A large amount of testimony was given yesterday for the plaintiff and defendant, and there is nothing for the lawyers to do this afternoon except to sum up. W. S. Angleman represents Thorn, and William Newcorn is counsel for the defendant. William K. McClure acts for him in court.

The plaintiff claims that the contract made with Miodovnik calls for a certain make of boiler of such a size. The contract was fully performed, he claims, and he asks for his money. Miodovnik, on the other hand, claims that the contract has not yet been finished. He says that the boiler was to be an instantaneous heater, and was to be used to heat water for his baths, in the rear of his barber shop. Miodovnik says that the boiler does not supply as much hot water as is needed, and that the agreement was that if the Acme, No. 8, the first boiler to be put in, was not satisfactory, it was to be replaced by one that would be. The evidence given did not satisfy the jury without a close examination of the boiler, so they were taken to the shop by Constable Mattox and given an opportunity to look at it themselves. They were then allowed to go until this afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the case was resumed.

Allan Laing, the electrician, is seriously ill at his home on Craig place.

A DANGEROUS POSITION.

Of all on board, the man who stands in the greatest peril is the captain. In the battleships and cruisers his position is in a cylindrical box of steel, placed just under the bridge, well forward, which is called the conning-tower. The armor of it is thick enough ordinarily to resist the penetration of heavy projectiles. It contains the speaking tubes and electrical wires whereby he communicates with the guns, engines and helm, and sometimes apparatus whereby he is enabled to fire the guns himself after they are laid upon the enemy. His field of vision is limited to what he can see through a little horizontal slit on about the level of his eye. In point of frightful responsibility no situation in the world can compare with that which is occupied by the man who stands in that tower and directs the movements of his ship. After the conflict once begins the din about him will be something infernal. Upon him the fire of the enemy will be concentrated, and upon the exterior of that steel drum in which he is shut up there will be a continuous hail of iron and steel. Shells will burst everywhere about it, and to that babel will be added the roar of the force blast under the engines, the tremendous reports of the heavy guns, and the din of the quick fire and machine guns in chorus. In such circumstances as this, aided by such knowledge as he can get by looking through the little peep-hole in front of him as well as the smoke will let him the captain must control the tremendous forces under his command, and his decisions are matters of seconds.

Nobody now believes that a captain who finds his vision through the slits of the tower cut off by smoke, will stay thus shut up. It is extremely doubtful if it will be physically possible for him to remain there after the shells commence to hammer its sides and burst against it, and, in any event, the intense anxiety to see and know clearly what the enemy is doing will inevitably lead him to take his chances in the open. Conning-tower or no conning-tower, his duty is to place himself at whatever point he can manage his ships to the best advantage, and this he will certainly do. Lord Charles Beresford, with grim humor, has suggested that the captain's safest place is not in but behind his conning-tower, "because then he has two thicknesses of steel between himself and the enemy, don't you see?" but while conning-tower armor may resist penetration, it is by no means certain that the whole structure will not be swept away by the first heavy projectile which squarely hits it.—Independent.

REMEMBER THE MAINE? CERTAINLY HE WILL.

Alfred Johnson, Survivor of Ill-fated Ship, is in Town.

MISS CLUM'S SWEETHEART.

He was in Forecastle of the Maine When the Vessel was Blown Up in Havana Harbor—Afterwards a Gunner's-Captain on the Marblehead—He is a Civilian Now. But Will Enlist Again Soon.

Back from scenes of war and carnage, from the fever stricken coasts of Cuba, and from a horrible experience in Havana harbor the night of February 12th, 1898, comes Alfred Johnson, first gunner's-captain on the Marblehead, and formerly able seaman of the ill-fated battleship Maine. Although Johnson is not a Plainfield boy, and is hardly known here outside of a small circle of friends, the fact that he is acquainted with Miss Bertha Clum, of LaGrande avenue, and, as rumor has it, intends soon to make her Mrs. Johnson, the people here look upon him as their own.

Johnson was seen yesterday by a Press reporter, and consented to tell some of his experiences the night of the 12th of February, when so many gallant American sailors went down to a watery grave. Johnson has just been discharged from the service, having completed his time and spent twelve years on men-of-war. He left his vessel, the Marblehead, in Boston, and is now free to follow whatever occupation he chooses.

But as with all of Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors Johnson wouldn't be content with any other life, and intends going to Washington soon to see about getting a commission and joining the navy again.

On the night of the terrible catastrophe, Johnson says he was "stealing a smoke" in his hammock in the forecastle. To this slight violation of the rules Johnson owes his life, he says, for while every one else around him was wrapped in slumber, he was wide awake, had his senses about him, and was ready to cope with whatever danger came up.

The first intimation Johnson had of the explosion was a great noise, and simultaneously he felt himself going down deep into the sea. He was in a trap, with no way to escape, except through some opening that might be left. When the part of the vessel which he was on settled on the bottom, Johnson gathered his energies together, and crawling out, found a small hole through which he crawled and coming up to the top of the water, filled his lungs with deep draughts of air.

Johnson found that he hadn't escaped unhurt. A sharp pain in his left foot, and an ache under his ribs told him that he had been injured in the wreck. Fortunately a small boat from a Spanish man-of-war had been sent out to pick up any stragglers, and Johnson was one of those picked up. He was rowed to the battleship and later taken to Havana where his injuries, which were not serious, were attended to. He was the only one in the forecastle saved.

Johnson entered the navy when seventeen years of age. He was on the Kearsage when she was wrecked off Central America several years ago, and spent eight days on a reef, 320 miles from land, waiting for provisions and help. When the Maine was first commissioned Johnson went aboard of her and, like all good sailors, fairly loved his ship.

The first shot he fired, as gunner, was at Cienfuegos. Johnson is staying for the present at W. H. Clum's, and is being greeted everywhere he goes. He is a modest young man, but appreciates the feeling everywhere expressed. And he is one of those who will long "Remember the Maine."

Came Highly Endorsed.

Dr. and Mrs. A. F. VanHorn, of West Fifth street, were received into the membership of the Congregational church last Sunday. The Doctor's letter, on which he was received, was accompanied by a resolution passed by the session of the church in Titusville, speaking in the highest terms of his character as a man and of the efficient service he had rendered as an officer in that church.

Vacation Experiences.

At the Congregational church the subject of the mid-week service this evening will be "Vacation Experiences." A part of the hour will be taken by F. O. Bristol, who will speak of his experiences in connection with the army Y. M. C. A. work at Camp Alger.

BADGER BOYS WORRIED.

MUSTERING OUT PROCESS IS COMING IN A SLOW MANNER.

Governor Voorhees Sought Out to Hurry up Their Discharge—The Men May be Compelled to Serve a Whole Year.

Commander Washington Irving, of the Battalion of the East, New Jersey Naval Reserves, who is a lieutenant on the auxiliary cruiser Badger, passed through Hoboken late Monday night en route for Boston to rejoin his ship. His mission in coming home on furlough was to call on Governor Voorhees and enlist him in an endeavor to have the Navy Department order the reserves mustered out.

"The Governor was very kind," the lieutenant said to a friend in Hoboken, "and promised to do all he could for us. He said he would write to Secretary Long, and would also try to interest Vice-President Hobart in the matter. I hope they will be successfull.

"Officers and men alike on the Badger are anxious to get back to civilian life. The Badger is at the Boston Navy Yard. We would like to be mustered out here in Hoboken," the lieutenant added.

Word reached Hoboken yesterday that Gov. Voorhees has written to Secretary Long urging that the reserves be mustered out.

The Governor received a reply that no order to muster out the New Jersey Reserves had yet been issued. Since then reports have been abroad that the order for the muster out had been or would shortly be given.

Hoboken, Sept. 14.—A petty officer on furlough from the Badger visited the United States ship Portsmouth here yesterday and explained the case of the delay in mustering out the crew. He said that the enlistment papers were wrong, having been made out for a year and not "for a year unless sooner discharged." He was reticent as to who was to blame for the blunder.

It was stated on the Portsmouth yesterday that even if such a mistake has been made, the men will be discharged, but that an error of the kind would doubtless cause considerable delay. No one could tell when the men will be let come home.

RETURN BROWNED AND BURNED.

Jolly Tars of the Yacht Teal Come Back Looking Very Ruddy.

The cruise of the yacht Teal is over. Late Monday evening Walter B. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, and Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, returned from Bay Head, where the Teal went out of commission that afternoon. The party returned well-browned and burned as a result of their life on the water. The cruise proved a very successful one despite sundry exciting adventures.

Yesterday they, with a party of friends, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse, of Franklin place, were the guests of Frank W. Edwards, of Bayonne, on his steam yacht Irene. They enjoyed a sail down New York Bay and paid a visit to the battleship Indiana, besides viewing the other warships now at anchor in the harbor.

SMALL FORCE ON STREET WORK.

Appropriation for Repairs and Improvement is Getting Low.

Only a small force of men are working now on the streets as the heavy work is all done. There is still some money left and work is progressing slowly. A gang is relaying the crosswalk at Westervelt avenue and East Front street, and also putting down the new walk there ordered by the Council.

The property owners along Park avenue are still agitating an asphalt pavement and a storm sewer for that street, and the matter will probably come up at a Council meeting in the near future.

No Decision Reached.

A meeting of the Independent Scheutzen Corps was held Monday evening to decide whether the members should consolidate with the Gesang and Turn Verein. No decision was reached, however, as some of the members opposed the scheme. Another meeting will be held next Monday evening to settle the matter.

Services in English.

Rev. Frederick C. Grapf, of Elizabeth, conducted services in the English tongue in the German Lutheran church on Craig place Monday night. In a few weeks a meeting will probably be called to decide whether to organize another Lutheran church or not.

A Cheap Trip.

The Christian Endeavorers have decided to reduce their price for the round trip to Asbury Park, to attend the convention the last of this month, from $5.50 to $5. This will include board and all other expenses.

JURY COULDN'T AGREE.

Case of Thorn Against Miodovnik Will be Tried Over Again.

The contract case of A. B. Thorn, the plumber, against David Miodovnik, the West Front street barber, for the collection of a bill of $89, was resumed yesterday afternoon in Justice Nash's court. All the evidence was given in the case Monday, and there was nothing for the lawyers to do but to sum up. The case was given to the jury, and after considering the evidence they couldn't agree.

Counselor W. K. McClure, for the defendant, consumed and hour. The jury was out for two hours, when Justice Nash discharged them. At first they stood 8 to 4 in favor of the plaintiff, but toward the last shifted and when they were discharged were 8 to 4 for the defendant. The case will be re-tried next Tuesday.

The jurymen were J. V. D. Dilks, Hezekiah Hand, Drew Mattis, Noah W. Pike, R. Mattis, J. B. Fowler, John Sullivan, C. Woods, W. W. Coriell, H. Mallinson and Thad Doane, Jr.

PAID HIS DUES JUST IN TIME.

E. E. Marshall Heirs Will Receive $2,000 Insurance on His Life.

Among the resources of Mrs. E. E. Marshall, whose husband died in Buffalo, as told in yesterday's Press, is a claim for $2,000 in the A. O. U. W. Mrs. Marshall had a narrow escape from losing this, and had it not been for Justice Nash, would probably not be entitled to a cent insurance in the lodge.

Mr. Marshall joined Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., five years ago. The rules of the lodge are very strict, and if a member is in arrears and does not pay his dues promptly, he is suspended. On August 8th Mr. Nash, who is recorder in the lodge, received orders to send Mr. Marshall's name to Camden for suspension, as he was ten days in arrears. Instead of doing that, the Justice jumped on his wheel, rode around to see Mr. Marshall, and urged him to pay up his dues and still keep his name good on the books. Mr. Marshall did this, and today his widow has a good life insurance.

Addressed the Soldier Boys

F. H. Martin, of West Front street, addressed the soldier boys at Pompton Lake Sunday. Mr. Martin speaks well of the boys, many of whom are from this city. He says they are healthy, well fed and well housed, have plenty to eat, but suffer a little from cold at night because of the sudden appearance of the cool spell and the lack of blankets. The boys are anxious to get home again, but Mr. Martin was told by a staff officer that it was probable that the Pompton Lake volunteers would be sent out to do garrison duty somewhere at Porto Rico or somewhere in Cuba, and would not be mustered out at all.

Attending a Firemen's Convention.

Today the annual State convention of the New Jersey Firemen's Relief Association is being held at Atlantic City. The delegates from this city include Chief T. O. Doane, Wm. Townley, Councilman Newman and Wm. Newman. From the borough the delegates are Chief Fairchild, Councilman Woolston, J. J. Stahl and Wm. Demarest.

Rough Rider is Home.

George Moncton, formerly of Plainfield, but late of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, who was wounded in Cuba, is now at the home of his mother in Newark. He came home on the steamship Obdam, one of the transports, and has been honorably discharged. His wounded arm is about well, but a wound in the leg still troubles him.

To Present a Flag.

Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., is making arrangements to present the Borough Public High School with an American flag. The one now in use by the school was presented by the above Council, but it is now worn out. The presentation will take place at an early date.

Secured a Non-Suit.

In the contract case of W. H. Ruckman against Mrs. Nelson, which was tried before Justice Mattison Monday afternoon, the defendant secured a non-suit. She was represented by Codington & Swackhamer, while the plaintiff was reprsented by J. P. D. Kirch.

Debating Society to Organize.

An Approaching Wedding.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Alice Louise Needham, daughter of former-Mayor H. E. Needham, of North Plainfield, to James Herbert Case, Wednesday afternoon, September 28th.

THE BIG G. O. P. TIES DID NOT ATTEND.

The Union County Republicans Met Yesterday.

ANNUAL OUTING HELD THEN

TWO HUNDRED WORKERS GATHERED AT NEPTUNE HEIGHTS.

Plainfield Sent a Small Delegation Headed By Her Assemblyman—Mayor Fisk and Sheriff Kirk Didn't Go—The Governor Kept Away—William N. Runyon Was a Great Favorite.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Avon-by-the-Sea, September 14.—Down at Neptune Heights, close by, there was a gathering yesterday afternoon of the Republicans of Union county. The second annual outing it was called. Now the most remarkable thing about the affair was the entire absence of the leaders of the G. O. P. Plainfield sent a small delegation from which many of the leading workers in that city were absent.

While the outing last year was considered a grand and glorious success, the affair this time fell rather flat. Politics played no part at all in the day's happenings for, when it was learned that all the big men were to be away, the politicians went in to enjoy the pleasures of the shore without much regard for the future of the Republican party in Union county. And when the news of the sudden death of Former Judge McCormick came it threw a gloom over the gathering that the efforts of Chairman Chas. Codding and the rest of the committee could not shake off. The guests gathering in little knots and talked it over while politics were forgotten.

The bake itself was a good one and Neptune Heights had all its usual attractions. There were some two hundred staunch Republicans out. Then there were some twenty telegrams from various noted folk, including one from Governor Voorhees. The Governor expected to come until the last moment when his duties at Sea Girt were found to be too great to allow him to go. Assemblymen Roger Murray, of Plainfield, George Squire and Robert G. Houston, of Elizabeth, where on hand but John Kean, Congressman Fowler, Mayor Fisk, and Sheriff Kirk, of Plainfield, were missing. The State bench was not represented.

Probably one of the most popular men at the outing was Councilman William N. Runyon, of Plainfield. Early in the day, there was a demand that Runyon should sing and sing he did. He entertained them for part of the morning before the bake began and then afterwards there were many calls for Runyon and his songs. He had a long list of the popular melodies but the crowd was not satisfied until he had sung them all several times.

Among the other Plainfield politicians who turned out for the outing were Under Sheriff Kirkner, Amos Moffett, Judge William Newcorn, J. W. Murray, Jr., George J. Tobin, William H. Drayton, Alex Mallison and a delegation of ten from the leaders among the colored voters.

Warden Dodd, of the county jail, was there with a goodly delegation from Elizabeth. Rahway carried off the honors for the largest delegation of prominent workers. They came headed by Mayor Holmes.

Fanwood was represented by Former Sheriff Kyte. Nathaniel Gardner and Editor Pearsall came down from Westfield.

The only political work of the day was the opening of the boom of Freeholder Farrell for Sheriff by the Rahway delegation.

Rev. Mr. Gardner to Take a Wife

Rev. and Mrs. Chamberlayne Phelps, of Perch River, N. Y., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Charlotte May Phelps, to Rev. George Willis Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield. The ceremony will take place Thursday evening, September 22d, at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Adventists' putting Up a Tent.

The Adventists' are pitching their tent today on the lot corner of Linden avenue and Somerset street and will have an introductory meeting tonight, Elder S. B. Horton being the speaker.

Attending Biennial Conclave.

Monday evening about twenty members of Stone Square Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., left this city for New Haven, Conn., to attend the biennial conclave of the order.

No Connections Now.

The 9:58 a. m. and 2:07 p. m. trains to New York do not now make connections at Elizabethport for the Long Branch Railroad.

BURGLARS CAUGHT AT WORK.

Dunellen Man Arrived Home Just in Time to Prevent Looting His House.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Sept. 14.—Early yesterday morning burglars forced an entrance to Edwin Teel's house just off of North avenue, but were discovered by Mr. Teel and frightened away before they ransacked the house. The only things missing are Mr. Teel's briarwood pipe and case, and a bag of tobacco.

Mr. Teel is a conductor on the Central Railroad and never gets home until some time after midnight. His run is a late one, and he leaves his train at Somerville then takes the chances of getting a train back. Tuesday morning he was lucky and reached home earlier than usual, shortly after 1 o'clock.

As he came up the street Mr. Teel noticed a bright light burning in his kitchen. Mrs. Teel always leaves a small lamp lighted, but this lamp seemed to be turned up very high. Mr. Teel thought it must be his wife who had come down stairs on an errand, and as he opened the front door called to her.

Instead of receiving an answer, Mr. Teel heard some one rush out of a window. Then Mr. Teel knew that burglars were inside.

He hurriedly searched through the house, but could find no trace of any one, neither was anything disturbed except the pipe and tobacco. It is thought that the burglars had just got in, and were getting their bearings before starting in to work.

BUSINESS RIVALS FIGHT.

And Now They Air Their Troubles in a Justice's Court.

Two Hebrew peddlers are in trouble. One is named Barney Eifenstein, the other Michael Cronly. The first lives on Harmony street, the other on West Third street.

The trouble occurred Monday and led to the arrest of Cronly. Both men carry similar lines of goods and there is considerable rivalry between them. Monday Eifenstein went to a house on West Third street to collect a bill. Cronley was there, too, and the men began to quarrel. At last Cronly grew so angry, Eifenstein says, that he kicked the latter several times, driving Eifenstein away from the house.

Eifenstein then came down town and made a complaint before Justice Mosher. A warrant was drawn, and Constable Rockafellow set out on a search for Cronly. He was arrested yesterday, taken before Justice Mosher, and his hearing set down for tomorrow at 9 o'clock.

BURGLARY AT RAHWAY.

Thieves Broke Into Freeholder Farrell's Store and Carried Away Edibles.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, September 14.—The store belonging to Freeholder John Farrell in this city was entered by thieves last evening and robbed. The burglars helped themselves to a quanity of cigars and tobacco, appropriated several hams that hung in the back room. They also broke open the money drawer and took a quantity of change.

The thieves gained entrance through the front door which was forced open. There was no clue to the identity of the burglars.

Surprised on Her Return.

It was a very happy affair that was held at the home of Overseer of the Poor Christian Hansen, of West Second street, last evening. Mrs. Hansen has only recently returned from a visit with relatives in Canada and a surprise party was arranged in her honor. The surprise was a complete one. There were a number of guests present who dropped in without warning and spent the evening in a very enjoyable manner. Games and dancing occupied most of the evening.

Back From a Summer Cruise.

F. H. Ball and family, of Myrtle avenue, have returned from their cruise in Long Island Sound in the house boat, Sommerheim. They have had three months of cruising, and have put the Sommerheim in winter quarters at Patchogue.

Hirsute Adornment Scorched.

While assisting at the fire on West Fifth street, yesterday morning, Roundsman Flynn had his hands and moustache badly scorched. He was trying to close the shutters on the adjoining house when the flames got in their fine work.

His Talk Was Too Loud.

John Carey was arrested last evening on Park avenue by Patrolman Totten for being drunk. His loud talk was disturbing the neighborhood and so the officer took him in. He was fined $3 this morning.

—Gospel services will be conducted by the Christian and Missionary Alliance in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., East Front street, tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock.

PASTOR WELCOMED HOME

REV. C. E. HERRING GIVEN A PLEASANT RECEPTION.

The Affair in the Sunday-school Room—A Great Facial Change by Absence of Beard—Informal Programme Rendered.

The members and friends of the First Presbyterian church turned out in full force last evening to give their pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, a right royal reception in honor of his return from foreign lands, where he spent his summer vacation. During the entire evening the Sunday-school room of the church was crowded with people who welcomed the pastor heartily.

The rooms were tastily decorated with flowers and plants of various kinds, and altogether the scene was a very attractive one. A large table was arranged in one corner of the large room from which refreshments was served by those in charge.

E. M. Cave, who is always equal to any occasion, was called upon to make an address of welcome to the pastor, and in doing so he spoke the sentiments of everyone present. In reply the pastor thanked his parishioners for the kind manner in which they had extended their feelings of appreciation, and he hoped that the work during the coming fall and winter would be zealously carried on. In the near future the members hope to hear more of his trip through Ireland, which he took on his wheel.

One thing very noticeable about the appearance of the pastor is the absence of his beard. The removal of this adornment makes him look much younger, and he is as brown as a berry, the result of traveling under the rays of the sun in foreign climes.

The latter part of the evening was devoted to an informal programme which was furnished by Miss Petrie, Miss Blanche Fellows and Miss Mary Luckey, and consisted of recitations, piano and vocal solos. The committee in charge of the reception consisted of Mrs. Risley, Miss Remsen and Miss Blanche Fellows, and those who served refreshments were Miss Mamie Dunham, Miss Marion Englehardt, Miss Hammond, Miss Florence Martin, Miss Belle Williams, Miss Boice, Miss Cave, Miss Emma Line, Miss Mary Line and Miss Margaret Abbott.

LINCOLN'S FIRST FIRE

Flames Gutted the Interior of a Factory Storehouse this Morning.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, September 14.—Lincoln had its first experience with a fire this morning when one of the storehouses of the Franklin Paint and Graphite Company was found to be on fire. The alarm was sounded by the factory whistle and in a few minutes the Lincoln Hose Company was at the scene of the conflagration. Hose was laid from one of the hydrants of the Watchung Water Company and a stream of great pressure turned on to the flames.

The fire gutted the interior of the structure, but the efficient work of the firemen prevented a spread of the flames to the other buildings in the vicinity.

BICYCLE RIDER'S LEG BROKEN.

Philip Neider's Wheel Slipped as He Was Crossing Street Railway Tracks.

Philip Neider, a young lad, living at Fanwood, and a student at Leal's School, fell off his wheel in front of Randolph's drug store this noon while crossing the street railway tracks and fractured his left leg. He was taken into the drug store and Dr. Probasco was called. He learned that the leg was fractured, and made arrangements to send the boy home. The leg will be put in plaster of paris at once, and it will be sometime before the use of the leg is regained.

Wilbur J. Chamberlin Safe.

O. E. Chamberlin, of Madison avenue, has heard that his son, Wilbur J. Chamberlin, the New York Sun correspondent who was wrecked near Cuba last Thursday while on board The Sun press boat, is safe. He and the crew are in quarantine at Key West, and Mr. Chamberlin expects to be home in two weeks. No further details have been received, and how he and the crew got to Key West is not known.

No Word About E. E. Marshall's Funeral.

As yet no word has been received in Plainfield regarding the funeral services and interment of the late Edgar E. Marshall, who died so suddenly at Niagara Falls Monday evening last. It has been reported that the body will be taken to Brooklyn, the home of relatives, where the services will be held, and that interment will be in the family plot at Hempstead, L. I., but this cannot be verified as true.

—Mrs. K. H. Marsh has resumed her business for the fall and winter season.

WHY, OH WHY DON'T HE SEND THE KEYS!

SECRET WORK LOCKED UP.

NUMEROUS LETTERS HAVE NOT BEEN HEEDED BY ABSENT MAN.

John Hand Camp Worried Over the Situation, Because No One Knows How the Goat Should be Ridden by New Members—Thatcher's Resignation as Captain is Also Wanted by Camp.

The officers and members of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, are just at present wrestling with a difficult problem, and just how they are going to come out is a question.

Several months ago H. S. Thatcher, captain of the camp, left the city and took up his residence in Chicago, or at least he told his friends that he was going to that city. He did not have a definite idea that he would remain in the "Windy City," and therefore did not resign his position in the camp, although he was urged to do so. As time went on no word was received from him in reply to several letters that was written. He took with him certain keys for boxes that contain the private work of the camp, and the officers have been unable to use this private work. One of the officers wrote to Captain Thatcher and on the envelope he placed his address so that if the letter did not reach the party to whom it was addressed it would be returned to the writer. The letter did not come back, and it was taken for granted that Mr. Thatcher must have received the letter.

As Mr. Thatcher was captain of the camp, and still holds the position, no one has been elected to fill his place. During his absence the position has been occupied by First Lieutenant George Bedford, and during the latter's absence by Second Lieutenant Raymond McVoy. Mr. Bedford is employed at the Walter Scott Press Works, and is at present in Chicago working for his employer. He knows the circumstances concerning the camp's troubles and will make an effort to find Captain Thatcher and secure from him such things in his possession belonging to the camp. The members are wholly unable to tell why Captain Thatcher has acted in the way he has.

A few days ago the officers communicated with the divison officers and laid the facts of the case before them. They are in hopes that Captain Thatcher may be deposed and that he may be compelled to return to the camp its belongings, so that they can elect a member to the head office and continue with the work

If nothing is heard very soon from Mr. Thatcher the members will have the office declared vacant, and the State authorities will be asked for a proper dispensation to elect another member to the chair. There is no doubt but what Mr. Thatcher will be compelled to return the camp's property and give an account of himself, and he may also be suspended from the order for gross negligence. The local members certainly feel incensed at his actions and are now determined that the trouble shall be quickly settled satisfactorily to all concerned.

TO DECIDE ABOUT A BRIDGE.

Special Committee Appointed by Somerset Freeholders to Adjust the Matter.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, September 14.—At the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, held at the Court House yesterday, a committee, consisting of Director William Logan, Augustus Mobus and Andrew Lutkins, was appointed to meet with a committee from the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders, of which Freeman Randolph is the chairman, for the purpose of deciding about a bridge over Union avenue at Bound Brook. The committee will meet next week Tuesday at Bound Brook. This is the bridge that the Brunswick Traction Company is anxious to have built, so that they can run their tracks through from Dunellen to Bound Brook, and the chances are that it will be built.

NO MORE MUSTER OUT

Army Is as Small as Present Conditions Will Allow.

ALREADY 96,000 ARE OUT

The Situation at Manila Rather Than Cuba and Porto Rico the Reason for Keeping Volunteers in the Service. Possibility of Trouble With Germany.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Tremendous pressure is still being brought to bear on the war department to have more troops mustered out of the service. Efforts in this direction, however, are of no avail. It is announced, however, with increased emphasis, that there will be no more troops mustered out.

The situation does not admit of any further reduction in the army, and efforts are being made to put those volunteers who are retained in the service as near as possible on the footing of the regulars in the matter of drill and discipline. An effort is being made to eradicate the amateurish idea of independence among the troops and to bring them down to the strictest discipline.

The purpose at the outset was to muster out one hundred thousand volunteers. A little over ninety-six thousand have already been mustered out, and it is announced positively that there will be no more mustered out, no matter what influence is brought to bear.

This ninety-six thousand, it is understood, includes many regiments ordered to be mustered out, but which have not yet actually left the service.

The principal concern of the administration is with respect to the Philippines. It is denied that any army official reports have been received concerning the attitude of the insurgents, although, of course, there is no pretence that the administration is entirely free from concern on that score. The general feeling in the war department is that General Otis will be able to deal with Aguinaldo and his followers. At the same time it is cautiously acknowledged in certain high official circles that the possibility of trouble with Germany on account of the Philippines is still before us, and has not been diminished by the recent information concerning the German attitude in the Philippines.

The retention of the volunteers now in the service and the efforts to improve thte morale of the army, has in view the Philippine situation, more than that of Cuba and Porto Rico, although there is a great deal of vagueness as to the danger apprehended there.

SPAIN VOTES FOR PEACE

Cortes Passes the Bill Sanctioning the Protocol.

Madrid, Sept. 14.—Both houses of the Cortes have passed the bill sanctioning the signing of the peace protocol.

The vote on the bill sanctioning the signing of the peace protocol was 171 to 43.

The government has decided to suspend the session of the Cortes to prevent a repetition of the violent scenes that have occurred in the Senate.

Replying in the Senate to an attack by Senor Gonzales, Prime Minister Sagasta said that neither Canovas del Castillo nor himself had been in power long enough to change the character of the Spanish race, which was the true cause of the country's disasters. He added:

"We, an anaemic nation, were attacked at a time when we were acting as honest men would have acted, and we defended ourselves. I have sacrificed my prestig, but I have done so because I believe that the path I am following is the best."

General Linares, formerly the commander of the Spanish troops in Santiago, and the governor of the province, has arrived in Madrid, and was met by a number of generals and a few junior officers. General Linares is the most unpopular man of the returned Cuban troops.

The New Battleship.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 14.—The new battleship Kentucky, has been towed to the wharf of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company to receive her armor plate. Each section weighs thirty-eight tons, and six hundred men are at work on the vessel. A like number are hurrying work on the Kearsarge.

The builders of the Illinois yesterday received notice that on October 2 and 3, three heavy excursions would leave Springfield and Chicago to attend the launch. Governor Tanner and Miss Leiter, who will name the ship, will leave on the latter day. Ten thousand invitations will be sent out.

The Troops Remaining in Porto Rico.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The troops still remaining in Porto Rico are:

Troops B, Second United States cavalry; A, Fifth United States cavalry; H, Sixth United States cavalry; Batteries C and F, Third United States artillery; B and F, Fourth United States artillery; D and G, Fifth United States artillery; C and M, Seventh United States artillery; Eleventh and Nineteenth nited States infantry; Third Illinois, First Kentucky, Sixth Massachusetts, Fourth hio, Sixteenth Pennsylvania and Third Wisconsin, volunteer infantry, and thte First United States volunteer engineers.

The Pago Pago Coaling Station

San Francisco, Sept. 14.—Healey, Tibbitts & Co. of this city have been awarded the contract for constructing the coaling station at Pago Pago, Samoa.

Their bid of $142,900, while not the lowest, was considered the most satisfactory, and Commissioner Tanner, United States navy, who came to the coast to pass upon the matter, decided to accept it.

Suicide of Ex-Judge McCormick.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 14.—Thomas F. McCormick, a former judge of the common pleas court, was found dead in St. Mary's Roman Catholic cemetery at Elizabeth at noon yesterday, with a bullet hole in his head and a revolver in his hand. He was seen going into the cemetery an hour before.

ITALIANS SUFFER IN AUSTRIA.

Six Persons Killed in a Riot at Trieste.

London, Sept. 14.—Dispatches from Vienna say the entire Austro-Hungarian empire is infuriated against the Italians, as a result of the assassination of the Empress Elizabeth and that violent anti-Italian demonstrations have taken place at Trieste, where the Italians and natives have been fighting in the streets with sticks and stones, sometimes using revolvers. Six deaths are reported to have occurred there, and the troops were called out to suppress the disturbances.

At Gratz an Italian peddler has been lynched, and at Vienna fully 1,500 Italians employed on the municipal works have been summarily dismissed in order to avert a popular revolt, and the Italian embassy there is guarded by a strong body of infantry.

Rome, Sept. 14.—The anti-Italian demonstrations in Austria have made a deep impression here. The newspapers urge the government to see that Italians are protected from unjustifiable attacks. Numbers of Italian workingmen are returning to Italy owing to the threats of the Austrians.

An Anarchist manifesto, signed by "The Revolutionary Committee," has been distributed in Milan during the last few days. The police yesterday arrested an Italian who was engaged in distributing the manifesto. The prisoner, who had just arrived from Switzerland when he was seized, shouted, "Long live Anarchy! Death to the king!" Some of the persons in the crowd at the time of the arrest interfered with the police ocers who made the capture, and several were injured on both sides before the Anarchist was lodged in the police station.

The newspapers here declare that the recent riots in Milan began in a similar manner.

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 14.—It is asserted here that Luccheni, the Anarchist assassin of the empress of Austria, being a foreigner, may be extradited to Austria.

NAVY YARD APPROPRIATION.

Increased Appropriations to Be Asked for New Docks and Improvements.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The bureau chiefs of the navy department are preparing estimates of appropriations for navy yards for the next fiscal year.

These are in excess of the usual estimates on account of the increased needs of the naval administration, and although Congress will probably be more liberal than usual, there will doubtless be a cutting down of the original figures.

The estimates submitted by the bureau chiefs are subject to revision by the secretary of the navy before they are transmitted to Congress.

As they stand at present, provision is to be made for the New York yard in the amount of $1,000,000. This sum is intended to provide, aside from routine expenses, for the quay wall extension, for buildings and for brick sidewalks. The navy department will ask for $500,000 for the Boston yard, to provide for an electric plant, extension of piers and buildings.

Not less than $300,000 is desired for the expenses of the League Island yard at Philadelphia.

Besides these expenses, appropriations will be asked for to build the dry docks at Boston and Portsmouth. The Boston dry dock will be of granite and the Portsmouth dock of timber. Bids will soon be invited for building these docks.

The Sickness Among Porto Rico Troops

Washington, Sept. 14.—The following cable dispatch has been received at the war department:

Ponce, Sept. 13.

Adjutant General, Washington:

The number of sick among troops in Porto Rico is 1,886, about 18 per cent.; 177 typhoid, 447 malaria, 1,262 other diseases.

Investigation of two deaths at Ponce shows them to be yellow fever, which originated in the quartermaster's hospital. One more case has developed since.

All troops at Ponce have been removed to camps. General Henry has taken precautions to prevent disease spreading.

GEN. GOMEZ RESIGNS

Dissatisfied with Our Control in Cuba.

FEARS FOR FREE REPUBLIC

A Stir Caused at Santiago by the Report. The Disbandment of Cuban Troops Continuing. Col. Rowan is Making a Tour of Inspection Through the Island of Cuba.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 14.—An uncontradicted report has been received by General Lawton saying that General Maximo Gomez, the insurgent commander-in-chief, had tendered his resignation of the command of the Cuban army, to the Cuban government at Camaguey, and that it has been accepted.

Gomez, it appears, has been protesting against the Cuban government yielding the control of the affairs of the island to the Americans. His explanation for resigning was his disapproval of "passive submission to conditions tending to the practical discrediting and retirement of the Cuban republic, as such, and the establishing of the absolute dominion of the United States."

The Cubans at Santiago were much excited by the report, and there was an animated scene at the San Carlos Club yesterday when the matter was discussed. The report was disbelieved by many, who say that General Gomez's resignation at this time is utterly improbable.

Others, however, say that Gomez resents the putting of the Cuban army under the authority of the American general and claims that the Cubans should resist, even by force of arms, if necessary.

Generals Cabrea, Cactillo, Pedro, Perez and other insurgent leaders have turned over their commands to General Lawton.

MAXIMO GOMEZ.

General Perez has eight thousand men in the vicinity of Guantanamo, which he will disband this week by order of General Castillo. There is now a general desire on the part of the Cuban army to disband, as the insurgents have learned that the question of their back pay will not be considered by the Americans.

Lieutenant Colonel Rowan and Captain Parker, accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel Carlos Garcia, son of General Garcia, and two other Cuban officers, arrived here Monday on horseback from Gibara, on the north coast. Colonel Rowan was sent here by General Miles from Porto Rico. He will make observations in Cuba, geographical, climatic and military, for the government. He was fitted out with guides, horses and provisions by the Cuban commander, Foria, at Gibara, and visited Holguin, which is garrisoned by twelve thousand Spaniards under General Luque.

Good health generally prevails among both Cubans and Spaniards in the northern part of the island. The Spaniards entertained Colonel Rowan and his Cuban companions hospitably.

Ninth New York Coming Home.

Chickamauga Park, Sept. 14.—The Ninth New York left for home yesterday, and only one regiment, the Sixth United States volunteers, now remains at Chickamauga. The departing New Yorkers occupied four trains, the first leaving about noon.

General Breckinridge and his staff are expected to leave for Lexington, Ky., to-day.

The majority of the sick in the hospitals are improving rapidly, and in a few weeks the last patient is expected to be able to be moved. As soon as the hospitals are emptied the Sixth regiment will be moved elsewhere.

Swept Over the Falls at Niagara.

Buffalo, Sept. 14.—Peter Schemm, a brewer from Philadelphia, jumped from the Goat island bridge at Niagara Falls this morning and his body was swept over the American falls.

He arrived at the falls last night and registered at the New York Central hotel. This morning he engaged a carriage and went out for a drive. At Goat island bridge he told the driver he would walk to get a better view of the rapids, and when in the middle of the bridge he shouted "Good bye!" and leaped over the bridge.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich Sails.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 14.—The Royal steamship Empress of China has sailed for Hong Kong and Yokohama. Among her passengers was Thomas Bailey Aldrich of Boston, who, with his family, is making a trip around the world. Mr. Aldrich will spend a month or two in Japan before he returns, and will also make a trip into the interior of India.

Money for the Crops.

New York, Sept. 14.—The shipments of currency to the West and South Tuesday through the sub-treasury from Washington for local banks here, in exchange for gold, were only $225,000 up to 3 o'clock. The sub-treasury, however, supplied New York city banks for their own use with $70,000 in small notes.

CUBAN COMMISSION AT WORK.

Spanish and American Conferrees will Communicate Only in Writing.

Havana, Sept. 14.—The Spanish commissioners held a private conference yestetrday morning to draft a reply to the note of the American commissioners sent to them Monday.

The nature of the reply decided upon by the commissioners could not be ascertained.

It now seems that the work of the two commissions will be done by an interchange of notes, rather than by joint sessions, as was at first expected.

All propositions and replies from either commission must be submitted in writing.

By order of the commander of the Resolute the commissioners and attaches of the commission must be on board every evening at 5 o'clock. This regulation is designed to prevent yellow fever from being taken on board the vessel.

The United Statets transport Comal will probably be compelled to return to the United States without discharging her cargo of provisions, as the Marquis de Montoro, minister of finance, insists upon a duty of $60,000 being paid before the cargo of the vessel can be discharged.

The matter has been referred to the American commissioners, but they refuse to take up an affair which is not in line with their business in the island.

MILES SUBMITS PLANS.

Feeling Exists that Army Should Not Be Scattered

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—General Miles has submitted to Assistant Secretary Meikeljohn plans for sending the regular troops to their proper stations; also for garrisoning points in Cuba, Porto Rico and Manila with regulars.

He recommends a force of ten thousand regulars for Cuba, four thousand for Manila and four thousand for Porto Rico.

The commanders of regulars he recommends be sent to their regular stations. The approach of winter makes this arrangement very desirable. Comfortable quarters await them at their home stations.

Quartering them at posts will not only add to the comfort of the troops, but will materially decrease expenses. But one drawback to this plan has been presented. This comes in the way of a suggestion that it is not well to go too fast.

It is argued by some that it will be well to keep a large force of regulars near the coast until something is heard from the Havana and Porto Rico commissions.

The matter will probably be laid before President McKinley for a decision.

ARRIVAL OF THE MANITOBA.

Gen. Garretson and Illinois Volunteers Brought from Porto Rico.

New York, Sept. 14.—The United States transport Manitoba, Captain Gates, arrived yesterday from Ponce, Porto Rico, which port she left on September 7. On her were General Garretson and staff, and the Sixth Illinois volunteers, Colonel Fouter; also the Danville, Ill., Battery A, Captain Yaeger. In addition, there were J. J. McKinley and John Barber, nephews of President McKinley, and two newspaper correspondents.

The Manitoba had a fine passage up from Porto Rico, and very few suffered with seasickness. Seven of the soldiers were ill of malarial fever and slight ailments; otherwise the troops are in fine condition.

A small government tug came from Governor's island, with Mrs. Garretson and several women and children, and took off General Garretson and several other officers. It is understood that the Manitoba will go to the West Shore railroad dock in Weehawken.

A Western Guess.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 14.—The Times prints a special dispatch from its Washington correspondent stating that the president's instructions to the peace commission regarding the Philippines are:

1.—The cession of the island of Luzon, on which the city of Manila is located.

2.—Equal trade facilities with Spain in the remainder of the islands.

3.—None of the islands to be disposed of to any foreign power.

4.—Severance of existing relations between church and state in the entire Philippine group.

While these are the demands made on Spain, it is stated that the commissioners are authorized to accept only Manila, Manila bay and sufficient surrounding territory on Luzon island to support them as a naval base.

Possible Personnel of the Commission.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The selection of ex-Secretary of War Endicott, ex-Senator Ransom of North Carolina and Charles Denby, ex-minister to China, for places on the war investigation commission, naturally excites renewed gossip on the subject. The inquiry is still viewed without approval by army officers.

Turkey and the United States.

Constantinople, Sept. 14.—The United States, it is announced, has replied to a recent note of the Turkish government, declining to accept Turkey's repudiation of the responsibility for American losses during the Armenian troubles.

Currency Convention.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 14.—The national currency convention was called to order in this city yesterday morning. Yesterday was known as "Gold day." J. Sterling Morton, who presided, delivered the opening address.

Brooklyn to Go to Newport.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Acting Secretary Allen has given orders for the cruiser Brooklyn, now at New York, to proceed to Newport, R. I., "to accept the hospitalities of the citizens of that place."

New Hampshire Republicans.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 14.—The Republican state convention was held here yesterday. Senator Gallinger presided. Frank W. Rollins of this city was nominated for governor.

ANARCHIST CONSPIRACY

Said to Have Been Found Against European Monarchs.

FUNERAL OF THE EMPRESS

The Assassin of the Empress Elizabeth May Be Handed Over to Austria for Punishment. Preparations for the Funeral. Demonstrations Against Italians Suppressed.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—A dispatch from Berne to the Frankfurter Zeitung says the Swiss Federal government is satisfied that Luccheni, the assassin of the empress, belongs to a band whose purpose is to assassinate the rulers of European countries.

The Cologne Gazette, in a leading editorial, declares that Anarchists will no longer be tolerated in Germany, where they have been harbored upon their pretext that they were paupers or persons fearing political persecution in their own countries. They must be made to carry their evil purposes to foreign lands.

The Gazette recommends a prompt understanding between the police all through Germany, so taat the free transportation of Anarchists out of the country may be accomplished by simple discretionary action on the part of the police.

Vienna, Sept. 14.—According to statements made in the Swiss press, Luccheni, the murderer of the Empress of Austria, was the instrument of an Anarchist plot. The French police knew of the conspiracy, but did not know against whom it was directed.

A dispatch received this morning from Laibach, where anti-Italian demonstrations took place yesterday, reports that order has been restored and everything is quiet.

Emperor William of Germany has notified Emperor Francis Joseph, through the German embassy here, that he will attend the funeral of the empress.

The body of the empress will lie in state in the Hofburg church on Friday and the funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon. The body may be seen by the public in the chapel of St. George's on Saturday.

After the funeral the coffin will be laid in the vault of the Capuchin church. It will occupy a position in the center of the vault until the next member of the house of Hapsburg dies, when it will be removed to another place.

Geneva, Sept. 14.—The Tribune says it is possible that Lucchini may not escape the death penalty. As a foreigner, the paper says, he may be delivered over to Austria under the law of extra territoriality, to which the empress was subject at the time of her death.

Trieste, Sept. 14.—Anti-Italian riots were renewed in this city last evening. The mob was dispersed by the police and the troops, who arrestetd twenty of the rioters.

Rome, Sept. 14.—A dispatch from Milan says that copies of a revolutionary manifesto have been circulated in that city for the past few days. One man, arrested in the act of distributing them cried: "Death to kings! Long live Anarchy!"

In pursuit of their repressive measures against Socialists and Anarchists the police last night dissolved a so-called musical society, believing it to be a Socialistic club in disguise.

THE DREYFUS CASE.

Further Discussion by the French Cabinet Postponed Until Saturday

Paris, Sept. 14.—The Rappel and the Matin say that at yesterday's cabinet council the minister for war, General Zurlinden, explained his reasons for opposing a revision of the Dreyfus case. The premier, M. Brisson, and the minister of education, M. Bourgeois, urged General Zurlinden to change his determination, but the president, M. Faure, sided with the minister for war, and an excited discussion followed. The council was adjourned until the afternoon, when calmness was restored.

M. Bourgeois then pointed out the consequences of the crisis, and further discussion of the matter was adjourned until Saturday next.

The newspapers here are unanimous in expressing the opinion that the situation is serious. They say that temporizing will only delay the decision, which, if favorable to a revision of the case, will cause the resignation of General Zurlinden, and which, if hostile, will lead to a withdrawal from the cabinet of M. Brisson, and will result in a general crisis.

It is rumored that in view of the possible resignation of General Zurlinden, M. Brisson has sounded General Brugere, who, it is said, is disposed to accept the portfolio.

Three Whalers Lost.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 14.—The secretary of the treasury has received the following telegram from Captain Tuttle of the revenue cutter Bear, at Noah Bay, Wash., September 12:

"The Bear will reach Seattle 13th inst., relief expedition and ninety-one shipwrecked men on board. Rosario was crushed by ice on July 2. The crew were all saved. The Jeannie, Fearless, Newport, Belvidere, got out safely. All well."

Jockey Sloan Sails

New York, Sept. 14.—Tod Sloan, the well known jockey, sailed for Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse yesterday.

While Sloane goes chiefly for a vacation, he will ride in some of the English races. He has already been engaged to pilot the Lorillard-Beresford horses. He has made no contracts to ride in this country next year and his plans are not settled.

Sending Supplies to Our Forces

Washington, Sept. 14.—Army subsistence ocers continue to send supplies to Manila in vast quantities. Regular weekly shipments by the army line of transports are now made to Santiago and Ponce. The supplies shipped to these points are not in great bulk, as the forces in Cuba and Porto Rico are comparatively small.

ROUGH RIDERS MUSTERING OUT.

Interesting Presentation Ceremony to Col. Roosevelt.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 14.—The mustering out of the Rough Riders began yesterday. The regiment turned out to a man, and first formed in a hollow square, in the middle of which was Colonel Roosevelt. Then the men presented to their leader a handsome bronze replica of Remington's "Bucking Broncho."

The gift was purchased by popular subscription on the part of the officers and men alike, each giving precisely the same amount, and they were all proud of the fact that it took less than an hour to raise the whole sum.

The ceremonies began when the men marched out of quarters and formed the square at parade rest. Colonel Roosevelt was conducted from his tent by Lieutenant Colonel Brodie, preceded by the company color bearers carrying the colors.

He took his station beside a rough wooden table, upon which was placed the statue covered with an army blanket.

Private William S. Murphy, a lawyer from Indian Territory, and a member of Troop M, stood beside the table and in presenting the gift made a brief speech.

Then he raised the blanket, while the troopers cheered and howled. Colonel Roosevelt, turning to the group of his officers, standing behind him, said:

"Nothing could have been selected which would please me more."

Then he spoke very feelingly to his comrades. At the close he asked that the men be passed before him single file that he might take each one by the hand.

Colonel Roosevelt knows personally every man in the regiment, and without exception called them by their first names. The ceremony occupied more than an hour, and when that was over the paymaster got out his tables and strong boxes and began paying off. As the men sign the final muster call they are practically mustered out, but in this case they prefer to wait and be declared out by their commanders.

PROPOSED WAR INQUIRY.

The Difficulty Caused by the Commission's Lack of Authority.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The difficulty which is being experienced in the construction of tthe proposed commission for the investigation of thte conduct of the staff branches of the army during the war with Spain, has excited some discussion in military circles as to the possibility of the practical failure of an investigation by a commission.

It develops that there is a decided disapproval among army officers of the proposition to have the conduct of the war investigated by a civil commission which cannot be clothed with any judicial authority.

The objection is not on account of any prejudice against civil authorities interfering in military matters, but is due to the fact that testimony before a commission not possessing judicial authority, would be in a manner voluntary, and would, it is said, put officers in the attitude of gratuitously giving testimony which might be damaging to individuals or to the administration of the war department.

Army officers say that it would be no trouble to get all the information there is concerning the campaign at Santiago, the management of the war through the department, and the operations of the medical, the quartermaster's and the commissary departments, if a tribunal or board were organized with authority to compel testimony, but that officers will not jeopardize their own interests, nor put themselves in the attitude of being voluntary informers when the composition of the commission making the inquiry is not such as to make it compulsory upon them to tell what they may know.

Seven Thousand Fed.

Long Island City, L. I., Sept. 14.—Since the Red Cross Relief Station was opened opposite the Long Island Railroad depot in this city over seven thousand soldiers have been fed by the managers, while over half that number have been given sleeping accommodations for one or more nights, as well as medical attendance. The station was started on August 31.

A Daring Robbery.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 14.—A daring robbery was committed yesterday in the heart of a big business building. Two men entered the office of Real Estate Agent Raeder, gagged his clerk and took $460 from the safe. It was an hour later before the robbery was discovered. There is no trace of the thieves.

The Bridgeport Murder.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 14.—The mystery surrounding the discovery Monday afternoon near the Sea View avenue bridge of the trunkless head of a murdered woman was further complicated yesterday by the finding of the missing trunk in almost the same spot which marked the grewsome find of Monday.

Newsdealers' Convention.

New York, Sept. 14.—The annual meeting of the Booksellers and Newsdealers' National Association opened yesterday morning at the Grand Central Palace, at Forty-second street and Lexington avenue. There were about one hundred delegates present from all parts of the country.

Appointed by the President.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The president yesterday appointed Frank C. Ramsay of Idaho, marshal of the United States for the district of Idaho; and Charles H. Senseney of West Virginia, surveyor of customs for the port of Wheeling, W. Va.

Thanks for Miss Gould.

New York, Sept. 14.—At yesterday's meeting of the city board of aldermen Councilman Wise introduced a resolution thanking Miss Helen Gould for her patriotic and generous conduct in relieving the wants of the suffering soldiers.

Ex-Secretary Bayard's Condition

The Senatorial Situation.

In an editorial The Elizabeth Journal yesterday reviewed the Senatorial situation from the Republican point of view, and casting an eagle eye over the broad expanse of Union county stirred up enough candidates to fill the office for a generation. The Journal is the authority for the statement that Mayor Fisk, of Plainfield, is not anxious to succeed Senator Voorhees, though his friends hope that he will change his mind and make a hustle for the nomination.

Westfield looms up with the gentleman of the pure white smile—the Hon. Charles N. Codding—while Springfield trots out the august personage of J. Martin Roll, he of trolley fame in the State Legislature. Cranford looks to James H. Ferguson as the man to carry the Union county banner in the upper house of the State Legislature. Strange as it may seem Rahway hasn't got a candidate as yet, but Rahway was always a little behind the times at the start and may yet spring one of her favorite sons.

And Elizabeth! Last, but not least, by any means. Did anyone ever hear of an office to be filled that was not aspired for by some Elizabeth statesman? If there was ever such an instance it was before the present political set was born. What The Journal says will accurately describe the modest feelings of Elizabeth:

The situation seems to necessitate a call of the roll of popular, capable and available men in Elizabeth. Judge Cross has already been referred to, and no man could be selected who enjoys the confidence and respect of the people to a greater degree. Former Mayor Rankin has been spoken of as a possible candidate. Frank Bergen has been suggested. Hon. Wm. H. Corbin would make one of the ablest Senators this county has ever had. C. Addison Swift would be a very capable official and there are several others who would do credit to Union county, though they are not prominently named in this connection.

The other towns are yet to be heard from.

Death of Judge McCormick.

The death of former Judge McCormick by the act of his own hand casts a pall not only over Elizabeth but as well throughout Union county, because he was a citizen of distinction and worth. The details of his untimely end are harrowing, indeed.

Holding a place high in the esteem of his acquaintances, fresh from a long and creditable service on the bench, supplied with a competence sufficient to ensure him the comforts of the world for a life time, and surrounded by a happy family, his rash act is one of those inscrutable things which we of the world are unable to solve. But the very mystery of his death makes it all the more sorrowful.

Judge McCormick was regarded as an upright judge, and was fearless in his administration of justice in criminal cases, passing sentences during his term on many noted criminals.

Judge McCormick was a courteous gentleman, and of fine personal appearance. He had very many friends socially, and was frequently called to preside at banquets of Irish organizations and at celebrations of a patriotic character.

The Cretan Turmoil.

The outbreak in Crete is in perfect logic with the whole situation. That it has not occurred before is a marvel. That such eruptions will keep recurring until Crete is either a separate principality under a ruler of its own or annexed to the Hellenic kingdom is the conviction of all unprejudiced observers familiar with the history of southeastern Europe. From time immemorial the Cretans have been a turbulent and indomitable race. As much as they have suffered at the hands of the Turk, their miseries have been less than those of other Mohammedan dependencies. They have retaliated with strokes of savage vengeance and inspired a wholesome fear. The heritage of hate between Mussulman and Christian is incurable. Nothing more absurd than the arrangement of the powers, which agreed to govern Crete at arm's length by military rule without any unity of authority, can be conceived. The intense dissatisfaction of both factions was inflamed to the highest pitch. The immediate cause of the outbreak was one of many likely to occur. The Turk, jealous of any concession shown to the Christian, the Christian boiling with rage at the least favor to the Turk, a hundred time ripened questions lying loose in Cretan life like dynamite ready for explosion, a race temperament which is in itself a smoldering firebrand—what can be anticipated at any time but the emeute.

Europe could scarcely have been expected at the close of the Greco-Turkish war to have turned over Crete to the defeated country. But it was perfectly practicable to have erected a principality with perhaps Prince George at its head. This plan was debated and rejected. A similar solution has worked well in Bulgaria. There today Christian and Moslem live peaceably side by side. Why should it not serve in Crete, that mother of Greek civilization now reduced to a semibarbaric status? As Crete is today it is a threatening volcano, smoking when not in eruption.

THE DEGRADATION OF CAPTAIN DREYFUS.

Recent developments in the celebrated case of Captain Dreyfus have recalled to mind the dramatic scene of his public degradation on January 5, 1898. He had been convicted by a court martial of selling military secrets to Germany. As his sword was broken he cried: "Vive la France! You have degraded an innocent man."

Where Is Andree?

Hope takes years to kill in the case of arctic explorers or African travelers. The justification is sometimes so startling as to turn the mind from despair in all other cases. The chances of Livingstone's death at the time when Stanley found him so easily were regarded almost a certainty. The feeling embodied in Browning's poem of Waring is common in estimating the probabilities under such conditions. It took many years to quench all hope of Sir John Franklin's return. True, the failure of three arctic expeditions, which had search for his traces an object, in whole or in part to obtain some light on his fate, had been reported. Yet no one familiar with the extraordinary facts in Andree's plan feels disposed to despair. The very novelty of the plan, to reach the pole by balloon, inspires the imagination, in spite of the recollection that the method precluded the safeguards of final resource, which have saved other explorers. The balloon gone, and we may reckon on that, nothing was left but the last savage fight of primitive man with savage nature. That battle, too, would be under one sided conditions, which even the modest Eskimo or Samoyed savage rarely needs to undergo. Judged by all the rules of human evidence, Andree and his gallant companions have been martyrs to their own enthusiasms. But even hard hearted scientists express some confidence that the chapter of accidents will yet give back the lost. Perhaps this is the effect of the novelty of his adventure. Perhaps it is the habit of mind, which looks so cheerfully on the best side instead of the worst in such matters, even when the logic of probability can yield only a shake of the head.

The railway employees of the country, starting from an initiative given in Chicago, are organizing nontreating societies in all parts of the land. This, it is scarcely needful to say, aims to do away with one of the most pernicious habits of barroom drinking, perhaps as prolific a source of alcoholic excess as any single feature in American custom. That it grows out of pure kindliness makes it all the more dangerous. It would be difficult to name one trait in American life more destructive to the purse, to health and to good morals. That so powerful a class of men as railway employees, numbering hundreds of thousands of intelligent and reputable persons, have taken hold of this reform is a happy omen. One can only hope it will extend to every branch of business.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

D. V. L. Schenck, of Delaware township, Hunterdon county, picked up a tortoise on one of the fields of his farm a day or two ago which was marked "D. K.—1834." "D. K." are the initials of David Kline, who was employed by Major Oat as a laborer on the farm many years ago. This tortoise must be at least seventy-five years old, for tortoises are too young to be marked before they reach the age of ten or twelve years. Mr. Schenck also recently came across a tortoise marked "C. R., J. E. S., D. V. L. S., 1869." He remembers putting his initials on the tortoise, and says he did it about the same spot in the field where he last found it. It is said that the tortoise rarely wanders far away from the place of its birth.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 14—Adam Herlich has had a shingle roof put on his house.

Workmen have been busy on North avenue during the week, macadamizing it, and yesterday afternoon the street was in a rough condition. But when the men leave it it will be a fine stretch for wheeling.

Bert Snowden and family have moved into the house formerly occupied by J. H. Cramer and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swackhamer spent yesterday with relatives in Plainfield.

Mrs. Lewis Tinsman, who has been very ill, is reported to be somewhat better.

Mrs. Ann Dunham and son Irving spent yesterday visiting in New York.

Mrs. James McElvare is entertaining her sister from Glen Gardner.

Mrs. Vydelle Pyquette has rented her house to out-of-town parties.

George Hoffman has returned from a visit with High Bridge friends.

Saturday afternoon will be devoted to bowling on Schepflin's green.

Rev. A. I. Martine and wife spent yesterday out of town.

Mrs. C. M. Bowyer spent yesterday visiting in Plainfield.

George Farley and family have moved out of town.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of the Daily Press.)

New Market, September 14.—The Board of Education held a meeting last night.

Mrs. A. G Nelson has a new piano.

Several will attend the fair at Somerville today.

Miss Annie Leveredge, of New Providence, spent yesterday with friends.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, September 14.—Mrs Nathan Marsh, one of Scotch Plains' oldest residents, died at her home on Westfield avenue yesterday morning. Mrs. Marsh has been ill for a long time and for several weeks her family and friends have known that the end was near. Mrs. Marsh leaves two children, Mrs. Wm. D. Johnston and Miss Jennie Marsh. She was one of the oldest members of the Baptist church, and up to a few years ago always took an interest in the church work. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon.

The ladies of the Baptist church have arranged an "at home" for Rev. J. S. Braker and his wife, in the chapel of the church this evening. An interesting programme has been arranged and refreshments will be served. The congregations of the Episcopal and Methodist churches have been invited and a very pleasant evening is promised all who attend. Mr. and Mrs. Braker have lately returned from their European trip and the ladies of the church wish in this way to show their appreciation of their pastor and his wife. A general invitation is extended to all.

Several local politicians enjoyed the Union County Republican clambake at Neptune Heights yesterday.

Miss Winnie Clark led the Epworth League meeting in the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Miss Hattie Wilcox, who has been visiting her mother, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Mr. Barros, of Camp Alger, was the guest Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Braker.

John F. Collins spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in the borough.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 14.—The Methodist chapel at Mountainside was the scene of a very pretty wedding this morning when at 11 o'clock Miss Minnie Meyers, the handsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Meyers, of that place, became the bride of Rev. Earle Titus French, of Arsabie, N. Y. The wedding ceremony was preformed by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the Westfield Methodist church. After the ceremony had been performed the wedding party adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where, after receiving the congratulations of their many friends, a bountiful dinner was served. The newly-married couple took an evening train from Westfield for a short wedding tour before going to their new home in New York State.

The following new members have been taken into the Westfield Club: W. R. Baldwin, John A. Brunner, M. A. Dewey, E. R. Perkins, A. A. Smith, J. Ris, Jr, A. A. Moody and E. C. Moody.

The Township Committee meets tomorrow evening for the purpose of further considering the petition of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railroad Company for their trolley franchise.

LINCOLN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Lincoln, September 14.—Mrs. James Donnelly and lady friend, of Plainfield, were visitors in this town Monday.

The Steel Works Company have recently purchased from the Moore Cycle Company nineteen automatic monitor machines, which are expected to arrive this week.

Miss Emma Egel, president of the Town Council, who has been on the sick list for a few weeks, is able to be about once more.

Andrew Polak and family have moved from Bound Brook to rooms in the Smalley homestead.

worth of amusement and instruction for 50 cents. It costs us the larger figure; you the smaller. We get enough of the half dollars yearly to enable us to spend the fifty thousand for your entertainment. That's business.

One of the reasons for the extraordinary success of the Great Inter-State Fair is its broad business foundation. It's largely a question of honesty, as any successful business involves. We have always played fair, and the people know it. When we say that we shall give as good, if not better, exhibition this year, we know we are believed.

Come and bring the children.

The dates: September 26 to 30. The place: Trenton.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

Edward White.

The Tailor Made Gown.

The new tailor made gowns are very feminine in appearance. The extreme mannish effect has almost completely disappeared and only the style and neatness of cut remain to mark the old departure.

A smart gown of dark green cloth has the skirt made perfectly plain with the seams stitched. The jacket is a natty affair opening at the top over a yoke of finely tucked green taffeta and turning back with two small revers.

How to Test the Oven.

There are many methods of ascertaining the temperature of the oven without a thermometer, and the following, which was always resorted to by a very celebrated French cook, is certainly a reliable one. Put half a sheet of white kitchen paper on the shelf of the oven on which the cake is to be placed, and shut the door. If at the end of five minutes the paper is charred, the heat is too great. Cool the oven by leaving the door a little way open for a minute or two, and then test again with another sheet of paper. If it is dark brown after being in for five minutes, the oven is right for baking small pastries and thin cakes. The temperature a few degrees below this—tested by a piece of paper turning a light brown—will be suitable for baking ordinary pound-cakes, pie-crusts, &c. When the paper turns only a dark yellow the heat is suitable for pastry, sponge-cake mixtures, and meringues.

Colored Statues.

Tinted statues are among the latest things in the French artistic world. This is not, however, nearly so original as it appears at first sight, for excavations in the Acropolis at Athens have proved the fact that the Greeks employed color in the treatment of marble, just as it has always been known that they used gold for the adornment of the statues of the Olympian deities.

The modern French practice is, therefore, unquestionably a return to the ideas of the pastmasters of the higher form of art. It does not, however, by any means commend itself to a great number of modern sculptors, who regard the purity of the white color of the marble as essential to the production of the effect intended by the artist, and though here and there specimens may be found in our galleries, the custom is unlikely to have a very extended practice.

A Ridiculous Fashion.

The ridiculous fashion of making the edge of the dress skirt on the front and sides an inch or two longer than the height of the wearer grows apace. The train at the back is worrying, but it is quite possible to lift it with grace and keep it from the dust. It is not so easy to dispose of undue length in front. To avoid an embarrassing stumble every now and then, a certain very upright mode of gait is imperative—well enough in a school, but rather prim and stiff in a physical-culture promenade, for the perpendicular has to be overdone in a manner which in no way tends to grace of movement.

Cremation in Norway.

The Norwegian Parliament has passed a law dealing with cremation. According to the Act, every person over fifteen years of age can be cremated after death, if he or she has made a declaration in the presence of two witnesses. For those under fifteen a declaration on the part of the parents is necessary. The police, the medical registrar, and the doctors in attendance on the deceased have also to furnish written testimony as to the cause of death before a body can be incinerated.

Corn Gems.

It is, perhaps, not generally known that gems may be made from fresh sweet corn as well as from Graham flour or corn meal. To the grated pulp of about three ears of corn, a cup of milk, two eggs, well beaten, a little salt, and a cup and a half of flour may be added. The mixture is baked in gem-pans for half an hour.

The greatest distance that a shot has been fired is a few rods over 15 miles, which was the range of Krupp's well-known monster 130-ton steel gun, firing a shot which weighs over a ton and a quarter.

Queer Notions.

Kissing is unknown to the Australian aboringines, the Maories, Papuans, and Eskimo.

Among the Kols of Central India a sham fight always accompanies a wedding ceremony.

Suicide at one time was very common among the Brahmins of India, who held the body in contempt, regarding it merely as a covering for the soul.

Census-taking in Japan is simple, but the results are utterly untrustworthy. The houses are counted, and an average of five persons is allowed for each house.

The Papuans of the Malay coast of New Guinea are still in the most primitive state. They are wholly unacquainted with metals, and make their weapons of stone, bones, and wood.

The laws of Mexico provide that a Mormon who wishes to take a second wife must present a certificate, signed by his first help-meet, to the effect that she is willing; and he must also have the express consent of the second wife and her parents.

A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man loses his cattle or other property, he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up, and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In return he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow, or sheep, or a sum of money.

A regular slave-mart still exists in many country districts of Finlan. Once a year such paupers, lunatics, and aged people of each parish as cannot support themselves are put up at public auction, and consigned to those families or farmers who will board them at the lowest price offered by the parish authorities. The helpless creatures are made to work as much as possible by their owners, who have the right to chastise them.

Dressy Accessories.

For the woman who may possess but few changes in the way of bodices, the perfectly plain corsage is the best style to select. There are any number of little accessories which may be used to give the effect of having quite a number of pretty waists. Dainty over blouses, fichus, small boleros and pretty neck fixings tend to brighten up the plainest gown and gives a stylish finish as well.

A pretty model for freshening up a waist is portrayed in the illustration. The fichu of lace comes over the shoulders, crossing in front and tieing in a graceful bow at the back.

Protecting Expensive Tables.

Expensive dressing tables are frequently provided with a plate-glass top, which fits over them perfectly. This protects not only the finish of the table itself, but as it can be lifted off, often the exquisitely embroidered drawn-work mats and doilies are placed between the glass and the top. In this way they show through and are yet protected. The plan, however, is scarcely an artistic one. The glass top is not a bad idea in itself, but the plastering of doilies beneath seems unsuitable. The same objection applies to the elaborately ornamented dressing-table utensils. It is a common thing to have these tables set out so elaborately that a second set of everything for real use is kept in one of the drawers, such a course being actually necessary because of the elaboration in the show set. Fewer of these show implements and a selection made of rich, plain ones, if cost is desired, that may have the careful use which belongs to refined ways, would seem to be in better taste.

Obstinacy or Determination.

How often do we speak of a child as obstinate and pig-headed when he is merely determined. We fail to see what we take to be obstinacy to give up some pet project, is really a courage and tenacity of purpose which will prove a successful shield in years to come when fighting the battle of life. What a terrible mistake we make then when we try to subdue the child, and, as we say, "break his spirit."

A Chafing Dish Recipe.

A chafing-dish dainty served at a recent Sunday night tea was chopped Little Neck clams salted in a little butter. Just before they were ready to serve two or three eggs were broken into the brazier and the mixture tossed lightly with a fork until the eggs had cooked to the consistency of a soft scramble, when it was turned out on squares of toast, a little paprica sprinkled over it, and the dish served.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Mülhausen. Der Backsteinfabrikant Manari wurde, wie es heißt wegen Lohnstreitigkeiten, von einem seiner Arbeiter erstochen. Der Tod trat sofort ein. Der Thäter wurde verhaftet.

Neckingen. Dieser Tage fiel ein Arbeiter in eine Masse glühender Schlacke und verbrannte bei lebendigem Leibe. Der Körper war entsetzlich verstümmelt, als man ihn herauszog. Der Verunglückte hinterläßt eine Frau mit einem Kinde.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Am Abend vor dem Kaiserfest wurde ein Mann bemerkt, wie er am Stephansthurme mit Hilfe des Blitzableiters in die Höhe kletterte. Man benachrichtigte telephonisch die Feuerwächter, die ihn in halber Thurmhöhe anhielten und zum Fenster hineinzogen. Er hatte zwei große schwarzgelbe Fahnen am Rücken, die er anläßlich des Kaiserfestes an der Thurmspitze befestigen wollte. Außer diesem Kletterer wurden noch vier Personen verhaftet, die Fahnen auf der Spitze der Votivkirchenthürme anbringen wollten, darunter auch ein Dienstmädchen, das angab, sie wollte durch den Versuch erreichen, daß ihr Großvater im nächsten Jahre zur Fußwaschung zugelassen werde. — Vom Traunstein bei Gmunden ist der Official Johann Käßhofer von hier abgestürzt und todtgeblieben.

Budapest. Der Tatra-Führer Blascsekovics stürzte bei einer Krivan-Tour ab und blieb in einer Felsspalte mit zerschmetterten Gliedern liegen. Der Wiener Tourist Heinisch entkam lebend und irrte dann zwei Tage im Gebirge umher, bis er dann Hilfe für den Abgestürzten requiriren konnte.

Innsbruck. Vom hiesigen akademischen Alpenklub wurde auf der Spitze der Frauhitt eine große schwarze Fahne anläßlich des Todes Bismarcks gehißt. — Im Weitenthal ist ein Knabe in Folge einer Wette um acht Kreuzer, wer sich in den kleinen Gebirgssee daselbst getraue, ertrunken.

Lemberg. Durch eine Feuersbrunst wurden in Skalat 300 Häuser eingeäschert; 1800 Personen sind obdachlos.

Schweiz.

Bern. Dieser Tage ereignete sich an der Jungfraubahn ein Unglück. Bei den Sprengungen im Tunnel war eine Mine nicht explodirt. Als die Arbeiter, welche einige Zeit auf eine allfällige nachträgliche Explosion vergeblich gewartet hatten, an die Arbeitsstätte zurückkehrten, in der Meinung, daß jetzt keine Gefahr mehr sei, explodirte diese Mine doch noch. Dabei wurden neun Arbeiter verwundet; einer wurde schwer am Kopf verletzt und wird wahrscheinlich das Gesicht einbüßen. Er wurde sofort in's Thal und nach Bern in das Spital transportirt. Die übrigen acht kamen mit Bein-, Arm- und Rippenbrüchen davon.

Zürich. Die Kantonspolizei verbot dem Züricher Volkstheater die Aufführung des Stückes „Prinzessin Chimay" auf Einsprache der Prinzessin selbst. Direktor Lange, der für den Verzicht auf die Aufführung von der Prinzessin 3000 Francs beansprucht hatte, wurde wegen Erpressungsversuchs verhaftet und acht Stunden in Haft behalten.

Graubünden. Ueber die Saison verlautet nur Gutes. Engadin, Prättigau, Davos, Oberland und seine vielen Seitenthäler, sowie Bergell haben seit Wochen einen noch selten dagewesenen Fremdenzufluß zu verzeichnen. Auch Disentis, Brigels und Vals erfreuen sich guten Besuches. Aus Seewies, Tenigerbad, Andeer und Tschiertschen werden vollbesetzte Hotels gemeldet.

Aargau. Adeline Patti ist aus England in dem Bade Schinznach zu längerem Kuraufenthalte eingetroffen.

Wallis. Dr. John Hopkinson, ein englischer Elektrotechniker, sein Sohn und zwei Töchter sind beim Versuch, die Dents de Veisonnaz, welche zu den höchsten und unwirthlichsten Alpenspitzen gehören, von wüthenden Stürmen umbraust sind und häufig verderbenbringende Lawinen zu Thal senden, zu erklimmen, abgestürzt und todt aufgefunden worden. Die Gesellschaft hatte den gefährlichen Aufstieg ohne den Beistand wegkundiger Führer unternommen.

GOOD JOB WORK.

The job department of THE DAILY PRESS office is the largest and best equipped in Plainfield or vicinity. The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.

If you need job printing at all you need the kind that reflects credit for neatness and style on you. You can get that kind

AT THE DAILY PRESS.

Big fight on

We open Fall season with a pitched battle—competition will be beaten in the worst way—our splendid $100,000 stock now covering 3 acres floor space will be scattered all over this state at low prices no one can match—no one will need to leave our store because of too thin a pocketbook or obnoxious terms. Protect yourself by finding out how low are our prices and easy our terms before you buy elsewhere.

Fall's Carpets—"Fighting Prices"

On every single weave—that means a lot, for this carpet store of ours can not be "overtoppled" by any other house in point of size, variety or true novelty—an immense floor from Market Street to Campbell through to Bank devoted to the stock.
Heavy Ingrains, 39c; Body Brussels, 90c; all wool Ingrains, 65c; Moquettes, Axminsters, Tapestry Brussels and Mattings—heaps of new colors, large and small effects.

$11.75 is the "Fighting Price"—it's an $18 Sideboard. You mustn't think we've no other kinds—for we've 50 sorts at least. China Closets, too.

$2.95, the "Fighting Price"—$4.00 what others get—it's a sturdy, brass trimmed bed, not flimsy sort.

$5.95, the "Fighting Price"—$8 is cheap for such a couch.

$29 for $40 Parlor Suits

$25 Bedroom Suits at $10.50
—bought 'em at a snap for you—you can have them at $10.50 'stead of $15.

CHAPTER VIII.

Meanwhile all thought of the Major's daughter had fled from Lilac's mind. For, as she opened the door of the private sitting-room, Roy, who had been waiting full of impatience for her arrival, crossed the floor towards her with outstretched hands, and drew her to him. For some time neither of them spoke. For the girl it was an interval of more complete happiness than any she was to know for many months.

Roy was the first to speak.

"What a long while it seems already since I saw you, darling!" he said, holding her at arm's-length to look into her beautiful face. "I do not know how I shall manage to get on without a glimpse of you for ten whole weeks!"

"Will it be for so long as that, Roy?" she asked, with a note of pain in her voice.

"I am afraid so, sweetheart, although you may be sure that I will hurry my business as much as ever I can to get back to you. But, whatever I do, I fancy the time needed will be two months at the mines and a fortnight to get home."

"And you have to go very soon? Why did you let me sleep so long, Roy? I could have cried when I found that it was so late."

"But you needed the sleep—"

She interrupted him.

"I can sleep at any time; but I can see you only to-night. How much more time is there for us to be together?"

"I suppose I shall have to go in an hour; and part of that little interval your new friends will waste. How do you like the Emmots?"

Lilac answered carelessly—

"I think I shall like the Major. He appears to be gentlemanly and considerate."

"And Miss Emmott?"

Lilac did not answer for a few moments. Then she asked, slowly, as though the question was troubling her—

"Is Miss Emmott a type of an English lady?"

"Well," laughed Roy, "it would hardly be kind to English ladies to say 'Yes.' Miss Emmott is rather affected and vain—isn't she? But I think you will find her very kind and friendly."

It did not occur to him that the young lady might be in the habit of reserving her kindness and friendliness for young baronets and other "eligibles"; and Lilac, afraid that the instinctive dislike she had conceived for her new companion might be unjust, said no more about her.

"It was lucky that the Emmotts happened to be here, and just on the point of returning home, too," Roy went on. "They have always been kind and obliging, so I expect you will be pretty comfortable with them. They start in two days; and you will have first a week's ride in the cars right across the Continent of North America, and then a sea-voyage of about a week from New York to Liverpool, from which place it will take you half a day to get to Delverton Hall. Major Emmott has to stay for a day in Liverpool, which will give my mother time to receive the letter I am sending her before she sees you. I have already sent her a cablegram, telling her that we are engaged, and that you are coming over in Major Emmott's charge. During the two days you have left before you start, Miss Emmott will help you to select all that you want for your journey, and you can get in Liverpool all the other things you will need during your visit. In case I did not see you long enough alone to arrange all these matters, I have put down all I wanted to say; so you can look at it, little prairie-flower, when I am gone." He handed her a sealed envelope as he spoke, and the girl took it almost mechanically, while the Baronet ran on in a cheerful business-like tone, "I have already booked your passage by the cars and boat. That is part of the business that has employed me all day."

"But, Roy"—the girl's face had reddened painfully, and she spoke with difficulty—"I never thought, when I agreed to do what you suggested, that you would spend money on me. I have two hundred dollars of my own which I brought away with me. Will that be enough to pay for everything?"

"I should not think of your spending it if it were, sweetheart," he said "You are taking this journey for my sake. It is only right that I should bear the expense of it; and, besides in a few more weeks you will be my wife. You will not object to my buying you dresses and paying your railway-fares then, will you, sweetheart?"

"It would be different if I became your wife."

"Of course you will become my wife darling; and you are my wife now in heart, as I am your own loving husband. If you raise a single word more of objection, I shall insist upon marrying you here in San Francisco before you start, so that you cannot make any demur!"

Lilac shook her head.

"I would die, Roy, rather than marry you before you have seen me with your own people, and have had time to forget a little the romantic circumstances in which we met!"

"Well, we will not waste these last sweet moments by talking of ways and means, sweetheart," Roy said, drawing her to him fondly once more. Like the tactful young man he was, he spoke only of his love for her, of the hardship of being parted from her for so long, of the eagerness with which he would look forward to his return to England to find his bride-elect waiting for him.

As far as Sir Roydon Garth was concerned, there was nothing tentative in their engagement, and nothing of a test in this visit that Lilac was to make to his home. It was a happy reflection that while his business at the mines made it impossible for them to be together his fiancee would be making the acquaintance of his people and obtaining an insight into the new life that was to be hers when they were married.

Lilac could not forget however that she might be compelled to sacrifice her love, and she disengaged herself from her lover's arms to say something that was in her thoughts.

"Roy dear," she said, "there is something I wished to ask you."

"Well, little woman?"

She went on slowly, as if thinking out what she had to say—

"You have told Lady Garth, I know, and the Emmots that we are engaged. Of course I could not go to Delverton Hall like this if you had not. But I want you to promise me that as few people as possible shall know of it. I do not want you to feel bound to me in any way should you change your mind when you come back."

"You think me a very changeable individual."

"Indeed I do not, Roy! But out here I am sure you forget many things, such as your mother's prejudices, the opinion of your own circle, and so on. You will promise me what I ask?"

"Anything to please you, prairie-flower. I am as certain as I live that I shall love no woman but you, and that I shall never marry a woman I do not love. So you may take any means you like of assuring yourself of the fact."

Roy and Lilac were here interrupted by the Major and his daughter and the lovers were soon obliged to take leave of each other in their presence much to their regret.

CHAPTER IX.

"Poor auntie—and poor Lilac Marvel!" said Evangeline, as she read Sir Roy's cablegram from San Francisco.

Sending Lilac visit you in S. S. Genoni with Emmotts. Marry on my return."

It took Evangeline some moments to make out the meaning of the rather obscure message. Then, as she divined its true import, her thoughts flew at once to her aunt, to whom the news would come as a great shock, for which her son's letter and its enthusiastic praise of the girl who had nursed him through his illness at Deadman's Gulch could only partly have prepared her.

In ordinary circumstances even Evangeline would scarcely have dared to approach Lady Garth after such a sign of her displeasure as she had just shown, but with news like this, of course the girl went in search of her at once, the flimsy sheet which told so little and at the same time so much in her hand.

Lady Garth was nowhere to be found in the house. Her niece entered almost every room, from the library to her ladyship's sitting-room, without finding a trace of her, and it was not till she thought of looking out upon the sunny lawn at the back of the drawing-room that she caught a glimpse of the stately and erect figure of which she was in search.

Her ladyship's back was towards the house as her niece ran through the large French windows and down the few stone steps that led from the drawing-room; but, as the girl hurried across the lawn, Lady Garth must have heard the rustle of her dress, for she turned suddenly to confront her.

"Aunt Gwen," said Evangeline, "this is a message which has just come from Roy!"

The old lady's face changed instantly.

"My poor boy is dead!" she cried with apprehension. And Evangeline smiled to reassure her.

"No, auntie; the message is from Roy himself, so I should think he is quite well again."

"Then what has he wired about? It must be something of great importance. Let me see what he has said."

She held out her hand eagerly for the paper; but Evangeline did not give it her.

"Although Roy is alive and well, I am afraid the news will be a great shock to you, auntie."

"Nothing can be a shock if my boy is well. Tell me what it is. It is cruel of you to keep me in suspense like this!"

"Well, Roy is going to marry," said Evangeline—"somebody whom we have heard about but have never seen. She is coming here to visit us previous to the marriage."

"Coming to visit us? Then she is in England?" asked her ladyship, showing by the question and the eagerness of her tone in what direction her fears lay; and her face fell when her companion answered gravely—

"No, auntie. It is somebody whom Roy met abroad." She waited for the old lady to put the question she expected.

"Not the squatter's girl?"

"Yes—Lilac Marvel. From Roy's description I think we shall like her very much. The message tells very little. Of course the cost of sending a message is very great. I expect we shall have all the particulars from Roy by the next mail."

She handed the cablegram to her aunt at last, and Lady Garth raised her gold eye-glasses to read it through.

"But is this all?" she asked when she had stared at the sheet for a full minute in silence; and, when Evangeline nodded assent, she went on in her severest tone of displeasure—

"Then I think you have been very rash in jumping to conclusions, Evangeline."

"But what else can it mean, auntie? And how can Roy send Lilac unless they are engaged?"

"There is no necessity for thinking so," persisted her ladyship stubbornly, "and I shall refuse to believe that a son of mine would do this wrong to me, to his family and to his position. As you say, we shall have a letter from Roy by the next mail, explaining what his incomprehensible message really means."

"But, if Lilac has started, auntie, she will be here as soon as the letter," said Evangeline; "so we shall have to get ready and expect her."

"You may do as you please, dear. I shall do nothing until I hear from Roydon."

"And I," said Evangeline hotly, for her ladyship made her angry, "shall make every preparation to receive as a sister the beautiful and refined girl whom Roy has thought worthy of his love!"

Her aunt waved her aristocratic hands expressively, as if the girl's decision was of no interest to her, and abruptly changed the subject. She began talking about the garden, and seemed startled when Evangeline suddenly threw her arms around her neck and kissed her.

"Poor aunt Gwen! You ought to trust to Roy's judgment," she said; "he is very good and very sensible;" and then she ran indoors, half afraid of the impulsive pity which she could not help showing to the proud aristocratic woman who so helplessly was hoping still against hope, and began hunting for the morning's newspaper to see if it contained any mention of a ship called Gemini.

CHAPTER X.

"Oh, Lilac, do look! Isn't he handsome?"

Sabina spoke in an excited whisper, and her companion put down her magazine reluctantly, because current publications were a new and enjoyable luxury to her. She had delighted in books all her life. But her books had been old ones, chiefly written by men who were long since dead and gone, and she was experiencing all the charm that lies in modern magazines and the newest novel—the charm of reading something newly written by men and women of her own period, whose minds were affected by what affected her own, and whose ideas were being enjoyed by the world at the same time that she enjoyed them.

It was their first day at sea after their week's railway ride from San Francisco, and a good many admiring glances had been cast at the two girls, whose appearance contrasted so strongly as they sat on deck by the side of the handsome old Major, with his white hair and fierce military moustache.

"Do look, Lilac!" she said again. "Isn't he a handsome fellow—that man writing in the bamboo chair?"

"What—the little fat man with the black moustache?" asked Lilac.

Sabina almost forgot to whisper.

"Not that fright! The Adonis at the other side, with the golden moustache and the rough artistic-looking hair. I think he is the handsomest man I have ever seen!"

Lilac followed the direction of her glance, and her eyes suddenly met a pair of the bluesa and sunniest that she had ever seen. The stranger, whose attention must have been attracted by Sabina's movements, had looked up from his writing and their eyes met so directly that Lilac dropped hers at once, and blushed with annoyance to think that the man had caught her staring at him. She took up her book again, and was trying to find her place, when she found that the Major was speaking to her.

"Impertinent fellow," to stare in that manner!" he was saying, angrily. "I suppose he is not a friend of yours, Miss Marvel?"

Lilac knew that the Major's eyes were directed to the other side of the deck where the handsome stranger sat, but her own did not travel thither again.

"I know so few people, Major Emmott, that it would be very remarkable if I met an acquaintance here," she said. "I have certainly seen no familiar faces so far."

"Well, the fellow seemed to stare very much," said the old soldier irritably. "I almost think it would be better if English ladies adopted the Turkish custom when travelling."

He resumed his reading as he spoke, leaving Lilac with the unpleasant impression that he considered her in some way to blame for the stranger's attention.

Lilac returned to her book wondering what Sabina would propose to do when her father strolled away to enjoy a cigar. But the story she was reading was so interesting that the wonder soon died out of her mind, as well as the fact of Miss Emmott'e existence, for the tale was about a ranch on the prairie, and all her thoughts went back to the life that she had left, and from which she seemed already so completely severed.

She did not notice when Major Emmott left them. Her mind was following the heroine of the story as she went about her duties on the ranch; and even when Sabina left the chair on which she had been sitting Lilac did not perceive that she was alone. She went on reading interestedly, for the girl of the prairie-tale was being made love to by an Englishman. She sighed when it ended sadly, for the Englishman in the story was faithless, and the poor little prairie-girl died broken-hearted.

There were tears in her eyes when she closed the book, and she brushed them away hastily as Sabina's voice sounded in her ear.

"Let me introduce Mr. Mark Mowbray to you, Lilac. Miss Marvel—Mr. Mark Mowbray.

Lilac could scarcely hide her surprise when she looked up to find that the gentleman who was being introduced to her was the stranger of the drooping golden moustache and the sunny blue eyes. She held out her hand almost mechanically, scarcely hearing the conversational phrases with which Mr. Mowbray took it. Sabina was running on volubly.

"Isn't Mr. Mowbray like Lieutenant Cardew, dear? It is a remarkable likeness. But I forgot—of course you do not know him. Travelling is so wretched when you know nobody! Don't you think so, Mr. Mowbray?"

"It is undoubtedly much more enjoyable if you know nice people," admitted the new acquaintance, with a glance at Lilac as well as Sabina, and a trifling emphasis on the adjective.

The Californian girl could not get over her astonishment. Miss Emmott certainly seemed to be well acquainted with the handsome stranger, and just as certainly she had spoken of him a little while before as if his face were quite new to her.

"I did not know that you were acquainted with Mr. Mowbray when you pointed him out to me," she said in surprise; and Sabina answered hurriedly—

"No; I only thought that I did. He is so much like Lieutenant Cardew, whom I met last summer in London, that I expected him to recognize me. I can scarcely believe now that it is not he."

"And Miss Emmott was good enough to allow me to take the lucky lieutenant's place in her circle of acquaintances," explained the stranger rather vaguely; and Lilac was left as puzzled as before.

She could not believe that Sabina had actually started an acquaintanceship with an entire stranger by deliberately pretending to mistake him for a friend who did not exist. Sabina crept round to Lilac's side as the Major, who had smoked his cigar, returned from below, and she whispered in her ear—

"For goodness' sake, do not let papa know that I introduced myself to Mr. Mowbray! Pretend that he is a friend of yours. You had better introduce him."

Then, as if fearful of being seen in the stranger's company, she hurried to tell her father that their charge had unexpectedly met an old friend on the boat. She hung behind Mr. Mowbray till the necessary introduction had been given by the girl who had remained involuntarily talking to the handsome stranger.

"I thought that you must have recognized Miss Marvel," said the Major to Mr. Mowbray as he shook hands, "when I saw you looking so hard at us from across the deck just now."

The stranger, warned by an imploring glance from Miss Emmott, merely smiled in reply, and Lilac said nothing. She was burning with indignation at the manner in which Sabina had dragged her into the deception she was practicing on her father, but was too generous to make an exposure of her to him. The very enormity of her offence—as it would appear in the eyes of the strict old soldier—made her hesitate for his sake more than Sabina's, and, before she could decide on anything to say, the chance of disclaiming any previous acquaintance with Mr. Mark Mowbray was lost.

Major Emmott remained for a few moments exchanging conventional commonplaces with the man who had just been introduced to him, in which Sabina joined modestly. Then father and daughter wandered to the side of the ship and leaned over the taffrail, to admire some maritime wonder that the old gentleman had discovered in the water, and on which he wanted to found a lecture on zoology for the benefit of his daughter's mind.

Mr. Mowbray did not allude to the acquaintance that Sabina had invented, although there was an amused twinkle in his blue eyes. He looked down at the magazine which Lilac still held open in her hand at the story which she had been reading.

Lilac found it easy to talk enthusiastically to Mowbray of the tale that she had read, and which had interested her so much.

"I am a child of the prairies myself," she said, and, for Roy's sake, she was glad of the look of surprise that flashed into his blue eyes. "Until a few days ago I was living on just such a ranch as this story describes, therefore it was full of interest to me."

"I expect, then, that you will be able to detect any mistakes that the author has made," said Mowbray; but Lilac shook her head.

"I think that the author himself must have lived in a Californian ranch."

"That is high praise from one who knows," said he. "As a matter of fact, the author stayed only for a fortnight at a farm on the prairies."

"Then you know him?" Lilac's beautiful face was full of interest, and Mr. Mowbray smiled as he answered—

"Yes. You have not looked at the author's name?"

The girl turned to it, full of excitement, and her face flushed when she read underneath the title, "By Mark Mowbray."

"Then you are an author?" she said, with awe in her voice. "It has always been one of my great ambitions to meet an author."

Major Emmott, glancing round from where he stood, noticed the girl's flushed face and animated manner as she spoke.

"Sir Roydon Garth's fiancee seems to be much taken up with this friend of hers," he said to his daughter. "I wonder where they have met before."

"I wonder papa!" said Sabina innocently. "Lilac did not say."

She too had noticed the animated manner in which the two were talking, and, although she felt considerably jealous because of the readiness with which Mr. Mowbray had attached himself to her friend, still the sight was not altogether displeasing to her, for already it had caused a plan to flash into her mind by which a previous offence of the Californian girl's might be punished.

"She need not think that she has 'landed' Sid Roydon yet," she said to herself. "Who knows?" And the thought enabled her to bear the apparent preference of their new friend for Lilac with something approaching equanimity.

[TO BE CONTINUED.

THE DOG UNDERSTOOD.

Knew Uncle George by Name and a Lot of Other Things.

The animal in question was a brown and white cocker spaniel named Hector, says a lady correspondent.

On one occasion my husband was taken very ill in the night and, as morning came, I saw that he would be unable to go to his office. I knew that I must convey the information to his brother, who is his assistant in business, as early as possible.

Now this brother was very fond of the dog, and at his house the family often had at breakfast a certain kind of Indian cake, which Hector was very fond of. Regularly every morning, as soon as he was let out of doors, he would steer straight for the house, that he might wheedle them into giving him his beloved cake.

On this particular morning I called him to me, and told him his master was sick, and I was going to send him to the express office to tell Uncle George. He was very fond of carrying parcels in his mouth, but for fear of some other dog confiscating the note, I said to him:

"I am going to pin this paper to your collar so you won't lose it, and now, this morning, you must not go after your cake; but I want you to go straight to the office, and go to Uncle George and ask him to take this note from your collar."

He looked at me, drinking in every word. I let him out, and went to a window, from which I could see the office, to note what he would do.

The office is in exactly an opposite direction from the house of the cake. Straight on toward the office went the faithful dog, and when he passed the corner, where the roads diverge, he gave one longing look up that street, but he never stopped, and I saw him put up a paw and knock at the office door, and be admitted.

My husband's brother told us that he came straight up to him and turned himself round, to have the note taken off his collar, and seemed delighted to think all our plans had been so well carried out.

McKinley and Roosevelt.

Some time before the war began, while he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Roosevelt could hardly restrain his impatience over what he considered too deliberate progress of the Administration in bringing on the crisis with Spain. In one of his occasional vocal explosions he let out such a curdling declaration as this:

"The blood of 250,000 murdered Cubans lies at the door of the White House."

The statement that Mr. Roosevelt had employed such language about the Administration of which he was a part was laid before the President, with the suggestion that it called for some rebuke.

"No," said the President, "I don't think we had better pay any attention to it. We may need this hot young blood later on."

And so it turned out.

Too Many Changes.

"It's hard to tell just what to do," said the man who was sitting on the back porch in his shirt sleeves.

"Yet one ought to get a start with such brilliant prospects opening up all over the world," remarked the next door neighbor, who was mending a hole in the fence.

"Yes. But supposing I had gone to the Klondike? I'd be so far away now that I couldn't go and help develop Cuba. And if I go to Cuba I'll miss a chance to go when the next rich territory opens up. There's no use of trying to deny it. This is a hard life."

And then he tilted his chair back against the wall and went to sleep.—Boston Transcript.

Sixteenth Century Miracle.

A sixteenth century traveller visited a French monastery, where he was shown what was asserted to be the skull of John the Baptist. With some surprise the traveller said:

"Why, the monks of —— monastery showed me the skull of John the Baptist yesterday."

"True," said the exhibitor, not a whit disturbed, "but those monks only possess the skull of the saint when he was a young man, while ours is his skull when he was well advanced in age and wisdom."

GOLF.

Morris Dumont and Olaf Saugstad, of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, rode their wheels to Morristown yesterday and witnessed the golf championship play.

Next Saturday morning there will be a golf contest on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club between a team from Leal's School and the Stay-at-Homes of the Hillside Club.

A number of golf enthusiasts would like to play on the new course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club if there were means of reaching the grounds. These members do not ride wheels, neither do they keep a horse and carriage. There should be some means provided for easy access to the grounds.

AT THE TRAPS.

The fourth shoot in the series of eight that are being held under the auspices of the Central New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League, will take place next Saturday afternoon at New Brunswick. The Peters Cartridge Company's trophy, which is being contested for by the various clubs, has now been won twice by the Climax Club, of this city, and once by the Dunellen club. The members of the above clubs would like to see Bound Brook or New Brunswick score a win for the trophy. The formation of this league has created quite a boom for trap-shooting in this vicinity.

—Bridgeton officials take possession of the new City Hall property tomorrow. The City Council will hold its first meeting in the new quarters tomorrow night. The building is a handsome structure, and cost about $20,000.

WILHELM HELPED THE ARTIST.

Granted a Privilege in a Decidedly Pleasing Way.

A year or so ago Prof. Menzel, one of the most famous of German artists, applied to the proper government official for the privilege of lighting up the music room at Sans Souci, the summer place of Frederick the Great, in order to make sketches for a historical picture he desired to paint. The official refused permission. He explained that such a liberty could not be allowed; that it never had been and never could be. A few weeks later the emperor accidentally learned of the incident, and at once sent an aid-de-camp to inform Prof. Menzel that instructions had been given to the custodian of Sans Souci to light up the music room for his benefit on a certain evening, and that if he could make it convenient to bring his sketching materials at that time he would have the liberty to make as many studies as he liked. The artist expressed his thanks and accepted the invitation.

When he drove up to the portico of Sans Souci on the evening named he was met by a gentleman wearing the costume of the favorite aid-de-camp of Frederick the Great, who escorted him into the palace, where, to his amazement, he found a party of twenty or thirty ladies and gentlemen dressed in the costume of the golden age of Germany, when Sans Souci was the center of social gayety and the artistic and literary life of Europe. He was presented to them one after another in the names of the historical characters each represented, and was then informed by the aid-de-camp, whom by that time he had recognized as the emperor himself, that they would sit as his models, in order that his sketches might be accurate and complete. At the close of the evening a supper was served in the dining room of Frederick the Great in a manner that was not only picturesque, but absolutely accurate. Before supper, however, at the orders of the emperor, the ladies and gentlemen posed in the ball room to represent a party of Frederick the Great's guests dancing the minuet. The artist made elaborate sketches, which are being worked into a historical picture that will have great value. —Cor. Chicago Record.

WOUND ONCE IN FORTY YEAR.

A Clock Which is Constructed to Run That Length of Time.

Two years ago a South Chicago jeweller did some figuring. He calculated he would in all probability live forty years. He knew it takes at least two minutes to wind the ordinary house clock. At that rate he figured he would, during the rest of his life, spend about sixty days, of his valuable time winding the clock. Then he decided to make a clock that would have to be wound but once in forty years.

This forty-year timepiece is fifteen inches in diameter, and weighs seventy-five pounds. The movement is geared so that the barrel-wheel containing the mainspring revolves once in two and a half years.

When this wheel has made fifty-six revolutions somebody will have to give the key seventeen turns. The clock will then be wound up for another forty years. The first wheel from the barrel-wheel crowds around at the rate of one turn a year. The dial-plate is six inches in diameter.

A writer in the Boston Globe furthermore says the making of the work took most of the jeweller's leisure for twenty-four months. The movement is full-jewelled. The clock will be put in a hermetically sealed glass case, and it will work in a vacuum, thus lessening friction and preventing the oil from drying.

Why the Shah was Killed.

The late Shah of Persia, according to a recent story, was assassinatd not for political purposes, but through revenge. His murderer, Mahomed Riza, was a theological student, but was compelled to become a trader by the confiscation of his property. He sold some of his goods to the son of the Shah, and in due time presented his bill. For this he was thrown into prison and his wife transferred to the Prince's harem. After seven years he was released and fled to Constantinople. At an opportune time he returned, disguised, to Teheran, and, waiting a chance, shot the Shah, crying: "The tree that bears bitter fruit must be cut down."

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT P. AINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The theatre-patronizing public of this city is fickle. It is foolish. It is capricious. It is unreliable. It is a hundred other things. And why? It utters fanciful sentences about wanting to see the best shows "on the road." One of them came last night —"At Piney Ridge." It should have had a packed house. The performance deserved it. It was the best seen here this season. But a slim half of a house greeted it. Manager Edwards was smiling as ever, as genial as ever. But he knew down in his heart that Music Hall should not have had so many empty chairs for the performers to gaze at. But what can't be cured must be endured, and so on went the play.

"At Piney Ridge" is a romantic southern play, which has the substituted infant for a theme, and around it is woven a sympathetic picture of life in the Tennessee mountains. David Higgins is both the author and the principal actor of the piece. He displays skill in both parts and has achieved deserved success. In his role of "Jack Rose," the mountaineer whose land has developed immense mining wealth, which causes him to visit Chattanooga and come in contact with a banker's daughter whom he very naturally falls in love with, he is homely and heroic to an entertaining degree. As he is about to receive the banker's daughter for his wife, "Dagmar," an octoroon, with a deep-seated revenge for the banker, steps in at the behest of one "Briarson," the villain, and falsely declares "Jack Rose" her own son, his father having been the white master of "Dagmar" in slavery days. The essential incident of the plot is the relation of an episode by "Dagmar," who claims that during a battle in the Civil War she was commanded by "Col. Briarson" to take his legitimate and illegitimate sons to the mountains for safety. After the battle "Dagmar" claimed that she left her illegitimate son under a bush at Piney Ridge, and subsequently this child became "Jack Rose." Of course, the marriage of a banker's daughter to a "white nigger" was simply out of the question. "Jack Rose" was immediately ostracised from society and deprived of the girl that his honest and picturesque love had won. From the time that this situation developed on the stage in a thrilling scene, the skill of a thorough playwright was brought out forcibly in a number of climaxes that made the performance intensely interesting. "Jack Rose" strove honorably to erase the black-mark that had been made against his character while "Briarson" and "Dagmar" worked like fiends to perpetuate the falsehood. "Cindy Lane," a girl of the mountains, had been wronged by "Briarson," and the father of the girl had sworn to kill the guilty man on sight. "Cindy," in her love for "Briarson," refused to tell who the father of the child was. The baby showed indisputable evidence of black blood in its veins, and the charge made by "Dagmar" against "Jack Rose" fixed the blame on him. After many vicissitudes "Jack" finally received a confession from "Dagmar" as to his true birth and her deception in substituting an illegitimate child as a rightful "Briarson." The brand of guilt was soon after placed on "Briarson" by "Cindy," and then things were righted in "Jack's" favor and he married the banker's daughter, while "Briarson" disappeared at an opportune moment.

The acting of Mr. Higgins is a style of his own. It was quaint in its way but graphic enough at times to stir the audience to a wild pitch of enthusiam. In the staid movement of his body, the large blue eyes and the majestic waves of his arms when emphasizing a sentence he was a picturesque character.

As "Cindy" Georgia Waldron was sympathetic in the character of the wronged girl, though at no time emotional. She dressed and acted the part of the mountain girl in keeping with the scenes in which the play was set.

The supporting company was good in every character, the work of Lydia Knott, as the banker's daughter, Van Kinzie, as "Briarson," and Lottie Wade, as "Dagmar," being especially comendable.

The greatest success achieved in the last decade by any farce-comedy organization is that won by Gilmore and Leonard's "Hogan's Alley," which will be seen at Stillman Music Hall Friday night. This season it is in a new form, being the third edition with all the new and latest features added, with the original company and headed by "Ireland's Kings," Gilmore and Leonard, and their star cast. Its various characters are taken from real life and was well-known when "Hogan's Alley" was the talk of the city of Gotham; among them the Yellow Kid, Hogan, and Brogan, Liz, Luke, Alex. and George, the Parrot and Goat who create all the disturbance, etc. The play is typical of the happy-go-lucky life of East Side, New York, and there is not a dry line in it, keeping the audience in a continual roar of laughter from curtain to curtain, causing smiles to cross the countenance at each recollection for months afterwards. "Hogan's Alley" is a play that one never tires of.

Prof. B. Benton Barker, of Schnectady, N. Y., will give an exhibition of pictures and dissolving views of the the late American-Spanish war at Stillman Music Hall Thursday night of next week. These views are said to be perfect in every particular and are up to date. A lecture will also be delivered on the several subjects by Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the First Church of Christ of this city, together with other features of a musical nature. Admission tickets will be sold at 25 cents and reserved seats are to be 35 and 50 cents respectively.

The Royals in "Captain Impudence," Jones, Grant and Jones, in their negro eccentricities; Charles T. Ellis, the German comedian, and A. O. Duncan, the expert ventriloquist, are some of the many clever entertainers in this week's bill at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre.

The public has taken tremendously to "The Turtle," despite the fierce denunciation of the New York critics, some of whom are inconsistent enough to privately confess their personal enjoyment of the piquant French farce that is attracting enormous houses at the Manhattan Theatre. Brady & Ziegfield have very shrewdly combined players of much skill and distinction in "The Turtle," and have mounted it lavishly. A more superb stage picture than the nuptial chamber has never been disclosed in this country. Sadie Martinot has made the acting success of her life. She wears some exquisite gowns, and her daring disrobement is managed deftly and daintily. Leo Ditrichstein, the new Adolphe, reveals the same vivacity and humor that made his Zou-Zou in "Trilby" so memorable. There is also admirably artistic work by W. J. Ferguson, Henry Borgman, M. A. Kennedy, Harry Allen, Mrs. McKee Rankin, Grace George, Merri Osborne and Agnes Findlay.

INTENSE SUFFERING

FROM DYSPEPSIA AND STOMACH TROUBLE.

Dr. Redwell relates an interesting account of what he considers a remarkable cure of acute stomach trouble and chronic dyspepsia by the use of the new discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He says: The patient was a man who had suffered to my knowledge for years with dyspepsia. Everything he ate seemed to sour and create acid and gases in the stomach; he had pains like rheumatism in the back, shoulder blades and limbs, fullness and distress after eating, poor appetite and loss of flesh; the heart became affected, causing palpitation and sleeplessness at night.

I gave him powerful nerve tonics and blood remedies, but to no purpose. As an experiment I finally bought a fifty cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a drug store and gave them to him. Almost immediate relief was given and after he had used four boxes he was to all appearances fully cured.

There was no more acidity or sour watery risings, no bloating after meals, the appetite was vigorous and he has gained between 10 and 12 pounds in weight of solid, healthy flesh.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are advertised and sold in drug stores yet I consider them a most valuable addition to any physician's line of remedies, as they are perfectly harmless and can be given to children or invalids or in any condition of the stomach with perfect safety, being harmless and containing nothing but vegetable and fruit essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal.

Without any question they are the safest, most effective cure for indigestion, biliousness, constipation and all derangements of the stomach however slight or severe.

AUTUMNAL WEDDING A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Truell-Johnston Nuptials Celebrated Last Night.

1,000 GUESTS PRESENT.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED.

Ceremony Performed by Rev. A. E Main, and Was Very Simple and Pretty—Beautiful Musical Programme Rendered—Bride Looked Handsome in White Satin—Reception Held Afterwards

A social event of the autumnal season was the marriage last evening of Miss Violet Thatcher Truell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Truell, of 326 Central avenue, to Robert Taylor Johnston, superintendent of the Campbell Printing Press Works, with offices in New York.

The wedding took place in the Seventh-Day Baptist church on Central avenue, at 8 o'clock, in the presence of about one thousand guests, including Plainfield's best society people, together with many prominent guests from out of town. Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony, which was admired for its simplicity and beauty.

The church decorations were unique and beautiful in many respects. On the platform there was arranged palms, corn plants and hydrangeas, while broad bands of white and pink satin ribbons were displayed to great advantage. In the main part of the church on either side of the various aisles there were arranged hydrangeas, tied with ribbons at the end of each seat next to the aisle. The effect of this arrangement was pleasing.

Long before the appointed hour the guests began to arrive, and while they were being escorted to seats by Edward Fancher and Samuel Hollingsworth; of Fanwood; Harry McGee and William Burdick, of this city, who were ushers, the following musical programme was perfectly rendered on the organ by Arthur L. Titsworth:

March of the Priests, from Athalia. Mendelssohn
Serenade.....Frank Taft
Offertoire in Ab.....E. M. Read
At Evening.....Dudley Buck
"They at the trellised window loiter
Deferring their good night with blissful words."
Allegro Pomposo.....C. M. E. Harriss
Cavalleria Rusticana (Intermezzo.) Mascagrin
Marriage Fanfare.....S. G. Gilbert
Silver Spray Gavotte.....A. Messenger
Grand Offertoire de Concert.....E. Thayer
Overture to Lohengrin.....R. Wagner
Bridal March from Lohengrin.....
Pastorale in G.....Munro
Wedding March.....Mendelssohn

The bridal party arrived at the church promptly and the first notes of the wedding march announced their entrance. On the left of the church entered the bride leaning on the arm of her father, and accompanied by the maid-of-honor, Miss Maymie Irene Fieles, cousin of the bride, of Lawrence, Mass., and the flower girls, Sadie and Eleanor Johnston, nieces of the groom, of Netherwood.

On the right side of the church the bridemaids, Miss Florence A. Whitney, of Gloversville, N. Y.; Miss Marie Reed, of Newark; Miss Ethel Titsworth, of Plainfield, and Miss Edith Howland Manchester, of Providence, R. I., made their appearance and met the bride and party attending her. In doing this they made a circle of the church, and as the party met the bridemaids preceded. They then proceeded up the aisle nearest them and were met by the ushers, who preceded. In returning through the next aisle to the front of the church, the entire party were met at the altar by the groom, his best man, Langdon Bartlett Wood, of New York, and the officiating clergyman.

While the ceremony was being performed, soft strains of music were heard coming from the organ. In the ceremony two rings were used. One was the gift of the groom to the bride, and the other was the gift of the bride to the groom. Both rings made a circle of the wedding party and were finally placed on the fingers by the clergyman officiating.

As the party was leaving the church, the bride and groom preceded and were followed by the others who assisted in the marriage, while the Mendelssohn wedding march was being played. Immediately after the marriage a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Central avenue, and about two hundred guests were present to extend hearty congratulations to the happy couple and wish them success and happiness through life.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

MISS MAUDE IRENE MOSHER BECOMES MRS. GEORGE L. HOMAN.

The Event Celebrated Amid a Wealth of Flowers and Pleasant Circle of Friends Last Night—The Wedding Party.

The first house wedding of the fall season was celebrated last evening, the bride being Miss Maude Irene Mosher, daughter of John P. Mosher, of East Fifth street, manager of The Sabbath Recorder, and the groom, George Laing Homan, son of Councilman Homan.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock. The bride looked charming, and the maid-of-honor, Miss Bernice Cottrell, of Alfred, N. Y., is an acknowledged beauty. The bride and groom entered the front parlor from different directions, and took their places in a bower of palms and smilax.

The groom and best man, George Rockfellow, came from upstairs, and the maid-of-honor and the bride, leaning on the arm of her father who gave her away, entered from the library. Rev. I. L. Cottrell, of Shiloh, N. J., an uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

After the wedding a reception was held, after which the bride and groom left on a honeymoon to be gone until October 1st. When they return they will take up their residence with the groom's parents on Hillside avenue.

The bride wore a gown of white taffata made en train, with pearl trimmings. She wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses The maid-of honor wore white mousline over yellow silk, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The entire lower part of the house was handsomely decorated with greens and flowers. In the front parlor was a pretty little bower of palms and smilax, in which the couple took their places. The mantle was banked with clematis. The front parlor was in green and white. The back parlor was in green and yellow, smilax, golden rod and yellow roses being used in the decorations.

The bride presented the maid-of-honor with a ring set with turquoise, and the groom's gift to the bride was a diamond ring set with turquoise. His gift to the best man was a pearl stick pin.

The couple were well remembered with presents, which were displayed in an upper room. One hundred and thirty invitations were issued, and guests were present from Brooklyn, New York, Alfred and this city.

NO TRACE OF THE HORSE.

Councilman Hetfield's Steed Galloped Away in the Twilight Two Months Ago.

It is now nearly two months since the sorrel mare belonging to Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, of East Front street, went cantering away in the twilight in the direction of Scotch Plains. The search instituted by Mr. Hetfield was a thorough one but it has failed to reveal the presence of the missing equine. The horse has vanished as completely as if it had trotted off into space.

Yesterday Councilman Hetfield and Chief of Police Grant spent a greater portion of the day in driving all through the country in the direction of Morristown, scattering circulars advertising for the horse and making inquiries as to the discovery of any stray equines. They went to Morristown for dinner and then returned.

During the day they learned of two sorrel mares that had been found in the neighborhood, one over beyond Morristown and the other near Summit. A more careful inquiry showed that they neither answered the description of Mr. Hetfield's lost one.

To Present a Flag.

Next Tuesday morning Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., will present a handsomo flag to the Board of Education of the North Plainfield Public School. The presentation will occur at 8:30 o'clock, and Rev. C. C. Woodruff, pastor of the Methodist church at Scotch Plains, will make the speech. Eighteen months ago this Council presented the school with a flag, which has become worn out. This flag is a little smaller than the first one.

Next Monday evening in the basement of the Borough Public High School the Republicans will hold their primaries to elect three delegates to attend the county convention to be held at Trenton, September 23d.

INTEREST IN RACING IS NOW REVIVING.

Another Race Meet to be Held at the Oval.

HARRY K. LISTER IN CHARGE

CRESCENT OVAL TO BE THE SCENE OF MORE CONTESTS AWHEEL.

Riverdale Field Club Will Conduct More Bicycle Races Saturday Afternoon, September 24th—Five Events—One For Tandems—The List of Prizes to be Contested For—List of Races.

The impetus given to bicycle racing in this section by the Riverdale Field Club has started a healthy growth in the interest in the sport. The success of the first attempt at track racing since the demoralization of the Crescent Wheelmen has given Mr. Wood, the head of the Riverdale Field Club, much encouragement to continue the good work. As a result he has announced another race meet at the Crescent Oval for Saturday afternoon, September 24th.

This time, there will be only one attraction and that will be bicycle racing. The baseball season is practically over and it is probable that the Riverdales, as a baseball team, will not make many more appearances here this season. So on that occasion the baseball game will be given up and the entire afternoon devoted to bicycle racing.

As at the first meet, Harry K. Lister is in charge as secretary of the race committee. His success as a race promoter has been excellent and Mr. Wood has done well to put the affair in his hands. He has already secured the sanction of the racing board of the L. A. W. for the meet and it will be conducted after the fashion of the usual L. A. W. meets.

The programme as now arranged will include five events. They will be a one-mile novice, a one-mile open, a five-mile handicap, a one mile handicap and a two-mile tandem scratch. The last event will be the great one of the day. There is also a prospect of a match race between Ray Poole, of this city, and Nick Fifer, of Elizabeth.

Excellent prizes will be given in each event. They will be as follows:

One-mile novice—First, gold medal; second, kodak; third, racing suit.

One-mile handicap — First, silver fruit dish; second, solid gold stick pin; third, gold link cuff buttons.

Two-mile tandem, scratch—First, two silver watches; second, two kodaks; third, two racing suits.

The races are scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock promptly. The track is being looked after and will be in better condition than it was for the last races. The number of entries was very satisfactory on that occasion and there is every prospect that there will be even more starters this time. Now that the racing men are beginning to learn that there is a track in Plainfield again, they are very anxious to ride here. All were well pleased with the treatment they received at the last race and are willing to come again. The tandem race is by far the most spectacular event of the programme and always finds favor with the crowd. Several well-known teams from this vicinity have announced their intention to compete.

Homœopathists in Session.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Asbury Park, Sept. 15.—The forty-fourth semi-annual meeting of the New Jersey State Homœopathic Medical Society was held here today. Thirty members of the society were present. Edwin J. Howe, of Newark, presided, and papers on medical topics were read and discussed by several members, among them being Dr. Cooley, of Plainfield. Dr. T. S. Davis, of Plainfield, is also in attendance.

Funeral of E. E. Marshall.

The funeral of the late E. E. Marshall was held this afternoon from the chapel at the Greenfields cemetery, Hempstead, L. I. The interment took place in the cemetery. A delegation of three members from Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., viewed the remains this morning in the interests of the lodge.

Realty Changes.

TROLLEY KING WANTS TO BE A SENATOR.

J. Martin Roll Wants The Republican Nomination.

BOOM STARTED AT OUTING.

E. R. ACKERMAN MAY ENTER THE RACE THIS FALL.

Roger Murray Will Probably Be Renominated For The Assembly—Has Not Said That He Would Not Run—Republicans Favor Long Terms for Representatives in Both Houses.

The absence of Governor Voorhees and Congressman Pitney, with the other leaders, from the annual outing of the Union county Republicans at Neptune Heights Tuesday, was the principal reason for the lack of interest in political topics. It had been expected that on that occasion several new candidates for the various nominations in this county would announce the fact that they were in the field. As it turned out, there was no formal beginning of any boom. The gathering brought out the fact, however, in an informal manner, that former Assemblyman J. Martin Roll, familiarly known as the "Trolley King," was after the senatorial nomination.

There have been several prominent Republicans of this county who have been mentioned as probable seekers for the nomination for State Senator to fill out the unexpired term of Acting-Governor Voorhees, in case Voorhees stands for the Governorship. Judge Cross, of Elizabeth, has been one of the first to be mentioned. He had a strong backing from some of Elizabeth's most powerful Republicans and was considered as a likely man for the place. He has always stood high in his party, while his record on the bench was a satisfactory one.

It was whispered about at the gathering of the G. O. P. men Tuesday that there was a new man in the field who was going to make a strong fight for the nomination. J. Martin Roll, of Springfield, formerly Assemblyman, and now a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, was pointed out as the one who had decided to enter the race. Freeholder Roll has been an active worker in the Board and has taken a prominent part in pushing through the Bergen county trolley scheme. He is known to be ambitious to rise in his party and may be expected to take a lively part in the race for the coveted position as Voorhees' successor.

It was early in the season that the name of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, was mentioned in connection with the senatorial nomination. The Mayor has shown no disposition to try for it, however, and it can be stated with accuracy that Mr. Fisk will not enter the race.

Plainfield is likely to have one citizen who will take a place in the contest. The leading Republicans of this city, or many of them at least, are very anxious to see Ernest R. Ackerman in the State Senate. There is a possibility that there will be no attempt to put up the name of the Plainfielder this time. The election will only be to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Voorhees and therefore will last but for a year, when a new Senator will have to be elected. It may be that the supporters of Mr. Ackerman may delay until then their attempt to place him as the Republican nominee for the Senator from Union county.

Of course, there has been lots of talk about the next Assemblyman who is to go from Plainfield, as the term of Roger F. Murray expires this year. There has been some talk that Mr. Murray did not want to stay in the Assembly for another term. It cannot be ascertained, however, that he has made any statement to that effect, so it may be expected that he will be named at the next county convention as one of the three Assemblymen from Union.

There is a strong feeling among the G. O. P. men of this city and other parts of Union county as well, that the county would be better represented in the Legislative houses of country and State if the representatives were continued longer in office. They believe that if Congressman Fowler was sent to Congress for as many successive terms as Speaker Reed, of Maine, he would take a prominent part in National affairs and thus bring New Jersey more to the front.

It is this same feeling that will lead many to wish to keep Murray in the Assembly for several terms so that he will become thoroughly accustomed to the work there, and give Union a better representation there than any man of equal ability but with less experience.

AUDACIOUS THIEVES AT SOMERSET FAIR.

Attempts to Steal Costly Diamonds From Shirt Fronts.

AN EXCITING CAPTURE.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT ON THE TRAIN LEAVING AT 6:05 P. M.

Thieves Threw an Overcoat Over a Jersey City Man's Head and Grabbed the Diamond Out of His Shirt Front—Andrew Love, Sr., of Plainfield, was Too Quick for Light Fingered Gentry.

Somerville, Sept. 15—The county fair was the indirect cause of it all. There was a great gathering from miles around and all the crooks as well as the good people came. When these crooks attempted to operate, Somerville was shaken to its very foundations at the audacity of the performance. Even if the police were not at hand, the crowd was there and took an active part in the operations. Now two of the crooks repose in the county jail waiting for a hearing.

There were a great many people in Somerville yesterday and it is not surprising that some of them came with intentions that were anything but the best. There is not much doubt but that they were successful in some cases but those have not been reported as yet. In the fair grounds only one adventure has been learned as yet.

Andrew Love, Sr., of Plainfield, was the first visitor to encounter the crooks. Now Somerville is such a mild-mannered town that no one expected any really violent times even if there was a crowd. A pickpocket or two might be expected, but nothing more exciting.

Mr. Love is an elderly man who has seen enough of the world to be able to take care of himself. He is by no means an easy game for any sharper. In that the naughty visitors to the fair made their mistake for they evidently thought that he would prove easy prey to their wiles. Mr. Love was with a party of friends when a stranger came up and started to converse with hime. With the stranger were two other men.

On the spotless shirt front of the Plainfielder sparkled a diamond. From his vest pocket hung his watch chain. Sir Stranger had a light overcoat which he rubbed up against Mr. Love, chatting the while on commonplace topics.

Suddenly, Sir Stranger made a quick movement with his hand, hidden by the overcoat, in the direction of the diamond. But the eagle eye of Mr. Love was upon him and the Plainfielder made a sudden move that took the brilliant beyond the reach of the crook. Then the stranger turned upon his heel and disappeared in the crowd. Mr. Love sought out Sheriff Wyckoff and told him of the circumstance, and the Sheriff promised to keep an eye on the gang.

There were five in the gang and they wandered about the fair grounds, but no other encounter has yet been reported there.

With many of the crowd, the sharpers went to the station to take the 6:05 express eastward. They climbed aboard and soon the cars were well-filled.

G. V. Brinkerhoff, of Jersey City, went to Somerville yesterday to attend the funeral of a friend. He afterwards went over to the fair and then prepared to return home. Mr. Brinkerhoff wore his handsome diamond shirt studs. He is a large man, with more than the average muscular development. As he entered the door to one of the cars of the 6:05 train he met two men coming in the opposite direction down the aisle. Mr. Brinkerhoff drew to one side to allow them to pass.

As one passed by he neatly swung his light overcoat over the head of the astonished Jersey Cityite. There was a muffled roar. The other stranger grabbed the sparkling diamond from Brinkerhoff's shirt bosom and fled.

The next instant there was a great hubbub. The thief made a flying leap from the car with Brinkerhoff, who had shaken loose from the overcoat, in full pursuit.

"Stop thief," yelled Brinkerhoff and the crowd took up the cry. The man with the light overcoat dove out of the doorway on the other side to land soon after in the arms of a fat man who promptly embraced him. The crook remained there until an officer was found and led him away half strangled by the embrace of the stout passenger.

Meanwhile the thief was speeding along the track in the direction of the Flemington train. There was one

CUPID IN PRESS OFFICE.

CHAUNCEY F. STOUT UNDER THE MATRIMONIAL HALO NOW.

The Little God of Love Gradually Taking Away the Bachelors of The Press Staff—Miss Leona Hoffman the Happy Bride.

In every regulated newspaper office it is imperative to have a bachelor on the staff who is fancy free to perform diplomatic duties with irate members of the fair sex when they call, but if Cupid pursues the young men in The Daily Press office with the same amount of fervor for the next year that he has in the past, it is feared that there won't be anything but benedicts left to conciliate indignant women subscribers with a cold shoulder.

Last evening at 6 o'clock Chauncey Fields Stout, the energetic manager of the circulation department of The Daily Press, received the matrimonial halo. The happy bride was Miss Leona Bertha Hoffman, daughter of Mrs. Jennie A. Hoffman, of 29 Park place. The nuptials were celebrated quietly at the Methodist parsonage in Somerville, Rev. J. R. Bryan officiating. The young couple were accompanied by two friends. The announcement of the marriage came as a great surprise this morning, but the numerous congratulations for a bright and prosperous future evidenced their popularity.

Mr. and Mrs. Stout will take up their residence at 29 Park place.

The groom is one of the most valuable employes of The Daily Press office, possessing business qualifications and personal popularity that augurs for his success in life, while the bride is a winning little woman whose pleasant ways make her a favorite with all acquaintances.

JUDGE M'CORMICK'S DEATH.

The Union County Court Adjourns—The Bar to Meet Today

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, September 15. — The Union County Court of Common Pleas adjourned yesterday out of respect to the memory of the late Judge McCormick. Remarks eulogistic of the dead Judge were made by Judge Vail and Surrogate Parrot. There was a special meeting of the Union County Bar at 10 o'clock today, to take suitable action and make arrangements for attending the funeral, which will take place tomorrow morning, and burial will be in the Cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre, at Newark.

Won a Prize for Drilling.

There was a big delegation of colored Masons from this city that returned Wednesday morning after attending the big time at New Haven, Conn. Cypress Commandery, Knights Templars, went in full regalia and took part in the big parade. They also contested in the prize drill, winning second prize, a handsome silver clock, which they brought back to Plainfield with them. They were only defeated for first prize by the narrow margin of two points.

Examined the Bridges.

J. Frank Hubbard, John H. Tier, Sr., of this city; John Robison, of Fanwood, and Mr. Scudder, of Westfield, met in this city yesterday with Freeholder Mobus, of Somerset county, and made an examination of the bridges on Elm place and Norwood avenue. They decided that repairs should be made and the material was ordered for the same. The work will be done at once.

Borough School Overcrowded.

The overcrowded condition of the Borough Public High School is something to be regretted. Children have been turned away, and it is only possible to hold one session in some of the grades. In the High School there is not one vacant seat and many are waiting to attend. Until the new school is completed there will probably not be any relief.

Charged With Assault.

Michael Cronby, of West Third street, who was to have had a hearing this morning before Justice Mosher for an alleged assault on Barney Eifenstein, will come up tomorrow, as Eifenstein had to appear in the New Brunswick courts today.

Chaplain Jones Talks Tonight.

At the Casino this evening Chaplain Jones, of the Battleship Texas, will deliver a lecture and will tell about what he saw in the great fight at Santiago. The chaplain is a very entertaining speaker and no one should miss this treat.

Hurt in a Fall.

FATHER STANDS IN WAY OF ARDENT LOVER.

Vaughn Declares That His Life Has Been Threatened.

MORE OF VAUGHN'S WOES.

NOW HE HAS TURNED THE TABLES ON JOHN STEWART.

Another Thrilling Chapter in the Love-making of Oscar Vaughn to Hattie Stewart, in Which the Prospective Groom Claims That the Girl's Father Has Threatened to Kill Him—Another Tale.

Another chapter in the life of Oscar Vaughn, of Harmony street, in his discouraging attempts at lovemaking, has just come to light. Oscar and his sweetheart, Miss Hattie Stewart, daughter of John W. Stewart, of West Front street, have made up their differences, are fast friends again, and are going to get married November 23d.

Their plans are to have a church wedding. The girl's father's plans, though, differ somewhat, for he sturdily opposes the match and has determined that the young couple shall not marry under any circumstances.

Vaughn is now a night watchman in the borough. He has been courting Miss Hattie a long time, but the friendship between the two was rudely broken off six months ago by Stewart, who had Vaughn arrested for threatening his life, and annoying the girl. Hattie and her father were both loud in their denunciation of Oscar at that time, and persisted so in their stories of persecution that Oscar was held in $50 bonds to keep the peace.

Since that episode Oscar and his troubles faded out of the ordinary line of conversation until this morning, when Vaughn had Stewart arrested on a charge of threatening his life. During the summer Hattie and Oscar have made up, and have set the date for their marriage. Vaughn says that Stewart has been following him around, urging him to keep away from his house and to cease his attentions to his daughter. Yesterday Vaughn says he was in the postoffice reading a letter from Hattie, when Stewart came in and made such a disturbance that he was requested to leave.

Stewart denied all this. He admits that he is opposed to the match, and says that he and his wife have separated all on account of Oscar. Stewart secured bonds for his appearance tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, when he will be given a hearing. Some sensational testimony will be given on both sides.

W. S. Angleman is Stewart's counsel, but as he was away today, W. G. DeMeza represented him in court.

Elected New Members.

The trustees of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club last night elected the following active members: Henry M. Humphrey, Cary S. Rodman, William H. Truman, Charles A. Stover, John P. Stevens, Rev. Floyd Appleton and Roger F. Murray; also the following associate members: Mrs. John P. Stevens, Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Mrs. Reuben Knox, Mrs. William H. Truman, Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Mrs. John P. Benson, Mrs. Charles L. Wright, Howard De P. Wright, Miss Elsie F. Rodman and Lawrence Tweedy. They also elected Henry D. Brewster, of New York, as a non-resident member.

Another Wire Breaks.

A trolley wire broke from the switch at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street Tuesday. No damage was done, neither was travel on the road interrupted.

Miss Maggie Linahan, of New York, who has been visiting in this city, returned home today.

Christopher Young, the well-known bar-keeper at the City Hotel, has given up his position and gone to Elizabeth to accept another.

Arthur Titsworth, of Seventh street, is suffering with a painful boil that is growing on his left arm near the wrist joint, and it is with difficulty that he is able to play the organ.

Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, of Grandview avenue, have returned from their summer outing on Long Island. Mrs. McKelvey is much improved from a recent illness.

Mrs. David M. Demarest has rented her house, where she now resides on Crescent avenue, to Dr. Knight, the veterinarian, and Mrs. Demarest and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Abbott, will remove to New York the latter part of this month.

GEN. SHAFTER'S REPORT

Official Description of the Campaign About Santiago.

PLANS FULLY EXPLAINED

He Tells How the Fleet Cooperated With Him. Commends Gens. Wheeler, Hawkins and Others. Miles' Name Mentioned Only Once. What the Cubans Did.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The report of Major General Shafter on the Santiago campaign has just been given to the press. The expedition under his command, he says, sailed from Tampa with 515 officers and 16,072 enlisted men.

His orders were given by telegraph May 30 and were as follows:

"Admiral Schley reports that two cruisers and two torpedo boats have been seen in the harbor of Santiago. Go with your force to capture garrison at Santiago, and assist in capturing harbor and fleet."

On the morning of June 20 we arrived off Guantanamo bay and about noon reached the vicinity of Santiago, where Admiral Sampson came on board my headquarters transport. It was arranged between us to visit in the afternoon the Cuban general (Garcia), at Aserraderos, about eighteen miles to the west of the Morro. During the interview General Garcia offered the services of his troops, comprising about four thousand men in the vicinity of Asserraderos, and about five hundred under General Castillo at the little town of Cujapabo, a few miles east of Daiquiri. I accepted his offer, impressing it upon him that I could exercise no military control over him except such as he would concede, and as long as he served under me I would furnish him rations and ammunition.

Ever since the receipt of my orders I had made a study of the country surrounding Santiago, gathering information mainly from former residents of the city, several of whom were on transports with me. At this interview all the possible points of attack were for the last time carefully weighed and then, for the information and guidance of Admiral Sampson and General Garcia, I outlined the plan of campaign, which was as follows:

GENERAL SHAFTER.

With the assistance of the small boats of the navy, the disembarkation was to commence on the morning of the 22d at Daiquiri. On the 21st 500 insurgent troops were to be transferred from Aserraderos to Cujababo, increasing the force already there to one thousand men. This force, under General Castillo, was to attack the Spanish force at Daiquiri, in the rear at the time of disembarkation. This movement was successfully made. To mislead the enemy as to the real point of our intended landing, I requested General Garcia to send a small force (about 500 men) under General Rabi, to attack the little town of Cabanis, situated on the coast a few miles to the west of the entrance to Santiago harbor, and where it was reported the enemy had several men entrenched, and from which a trail leads around the west side of the bay to Santiago.

I also requested Admiral Sampson to send several of his warships with a number of my transports opposite this town for the purpose of making a show of disembarking there.

In addition I asked the admiral to cause a bombardment to be made at Cabanis and also at the forts around the Morro and at the towns of Aguardores, Siboney and Daiquiri. The troops of General Garcia remaining at Aserraderos were to be transferred to Daiquiri or Siboney on the 24th. This was successfully accomplished at Siboney.

These movements committed me to approach Santiago from the east over a narrow road, at first in some places not better than a trail, running from Daiquiri through Siboney and Sevilla, and making attack from that quarter. This, in my judgment, was the only feasible plan, and subsequent information and results confirmed my judgment.

On the 23rd General Lawton's advance reached Siboney and the disembarkation of Kent's division on that date enabled Shafter to establish a base eight miles nearer Santiago and to proceed with disembarkation at both these points. Shafter continues with the details of movements up to the battle of ElCaney, on July 1, concerning which he says:

These preparations were far from what I desired them to be, but we were in a sickly climate; our supplies had to be brought forward by a narrow wagon road, which the rains might at any time render impassable; fear was entertained that a storm might drive the vessels containing our stores to sea, thus separating us from our base of supplies, and, lastly, it was reported that General Pando, with eight thousand reinforcements for the enemy, was en route from Manzanillo, and might be expected in a few days.

Under these conditions I determined to give battle without delay.

The disposition of the several bodies of troops is given, their formation under fire (in which Colonel Wikoff was killed) and the results of their movements are set forth in detail and General Shafter adds:

"After completing their formation under a destructive fire, and advancing a short distance, both divisions (Kent's and Hawkins's) found in their front a wide bottom, in which had been placed a barbed wire entanglement, and beyond which there was a high hill, along the crest of which the enemy was strongly posted. Nothing daunted, these gallant men pushed on to drive the enemy from his chosen position, both divisions losing heavily. In this assault Colonel Hamilton, Lieutenants Smith and Shipp were killed, and Colonel Carroll, Lieutenants Thayer and Myer, all in the cavalry, were wounded.

"Great credit is due to Brigadier General H. S. Hawkins, who, placing himself between his regiments, urged them on by voice and bugle calls to the attack so brilliantly executed.

"In this fierce encounter words fail to do justice to the gallant regimental commanders and their heroic men, for, while the general indicated the formations and the points of attack, it was, after all, the intrepid bravery of the subordinate officers and men that planted our colors on the crest of San Juan hill and drove the enemy from his trenches and blockhouses, thus gaining a position which sealed the fall of Santiago.

"In this action, on this part of the field, most efficient service was rendered by Lieutenant John H. Parker, 13th infantry, and the Gatling gun detachment under his command.

"The fighting continued at intervals until nightfall, but our men held resolutely to the position gained at the cost of so much blood and toil.

"I am greatly indebted to General Wheeler, who, as previously stated, returned from the sick list during the afternoon. His cheerfulness and aggressiveness made itself felt on this part of the battlefield, and the information furnished to me at various stages of the battle proved to be most useful.

"My own health was impaired by over exertion in the sun and the intense heat of the day before, which prevented me from participating as actively in the battle as I desired, but from a high hill near my headquarters I had a general view of the battlefield extending from El Caney on the right to the left of our lines on San Juan hill.

"My staff officers were stationed at various points on the field, rendering frequent reports; through them by the means of orderlies and the telephone I was enabled to transmit my orders.

"During the afternoon I visited the position of Grimes's battery on the heights of El Poso, and saw Sumner and Kent in firm possession of San Juan hill, which I directed should be intrenched during the night.

"My regular officer, Lieutenant Colonel Derby, collected and sent forward the necessary tools, and during the night trenches of very considerable strength were constructed."

The cessation of firing at noon, July 3, practically ended the battle of Santiago. General Shafter says it is doubtful if he had more than 12,000 men on the firing line on July 1, when the battle was fiercest, and when the important and strong positions of El Caney and San Juan were captured. He continues:

"A few Cubans assisted in the attack at El Caney, and fought valiantly, but their numbers were too small to materially change the strength as indicated above. The enemy confronted us with numbers about equal to our own; they fought obstinately in strong and intrenched positions, and the results obtained clearly indicate the intrepid gallantry of the company officers and men, and the benefits derived from the careful training and instruction given in the company in recent years in rifle practice and other battle exercises. Our losses in these battles were 22 officers and 208 men killed and 81 officers and 1,203 men wounded; missing, 79. The missing, with few exceptions, reported later."

"The information of our naval victory was transmitted under flag of truce to the Spanish commander in Santiago on July 4, and the suggestion again made that he surrender to save needless effusion of blood.

"On the same date I informed Admiral Sampson that if he would force his way into the harbor the city would surrender without any further sacrifice of life.

"Commodore Watson replied that Admiral Sampson was temporarily absent, but that in his (Watson's) opinion the navy should not enter the harbor."

The history of the negotiations with General Toral for the surrender of Santiago is given, with the facts of the renewal of firing on the 4th and 11th instants.

The only mention General Shafter makes of General Miles occurs in the narration of the preliminaries to the surrender of Santiago. He says:

"July 12 I informed the Spanish commander that Major General Miles, commander-in-chief of the American army, had just arrived in my camp, and requested him to grant us a personal interview on the following day. He replied that he would be pleased to meet us. The interview took place on the 13th and I informed him his surrender only could be considered, and that as he was without hope of escape he had no right to continue the contest."

Hoar for Embassador to England.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The ambassadorship to Great Britain has been tendered to Senator George Frisbie Hoar of Massachusetts. This is the first offer President McKinley has made of the position vacated by John Hay in order to serve on the peace commission. While Senator Hoar has been from the beginning most favorably considered, the president has taken particular pains not to sound him, and all reports to the contrary are pure invention.

To Drive Anarchists Out.

Berlin, Sept. 15.—The Cologne Volkszeitung understands from a Berlin source that Germany has decided to take the initiative in resuming diplomatic action designed to institute international measures against Anarchists. The confinement of Anarchists within the limits of their respective countries will be proposed.

FAURE OPPOSES REVISION.

As to Whether He Will Resign on Account of the Dreyfus Affair.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The Paris newspapers agree in noting a comparative calm in ministerial circles yesterday, though there was a renewal of the discussion of the phases of the Dreyfus case which were the subject of debate just prior to the resignation of M. Cavaignac from the ministry of war.

The Figaro says that the hesitation of M. Sarrien, minister of justice, to decide upon the question of revision hinges upon certain documents, the authenticity of which is vouched for by General Zurlinden and which M. Brisson desires to submit to proper legal examination.

According to most of the morning papers, while President Faure sided with General Zurlinden in opposition to a revision of the Dreyfus trial at the cabinet council on Monday, he did so in a less positive and irreconcilable manner than was represented yesterday.

The Gaulois and the Journal, on the other hand, assert that rather than allow Premier Brisson to initiate a revision, President Faure will tender his resignation to the chambers in a message stating his reasons and will ask the suffrages of the national assembly.

A TERRIBLE HURRICANE.

Winds Carry Death and Destruction in West Indies.

London, Sept. 15.—Advices were received here late last night saying that a terrible hurricane swept over Barbadoes, in the Windward group of the Lesser Antilles.

Two hundred persons have been killed and forty thousand rendered homeless.

Shortly after this dispatch was received cable communication was interrupted.

St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, Sept. 15.—According to the latest reports from St. Lucia, the storm which broke upon the island Sunday night developed almost unprecedented violence, being accompanied by a tidal wave and tremendous rains. Numerous landslides were caused, and many houses, bridges and cocoa estates have been destroyed. At least twelve lives have been lost.

Guadaloupe, the French island in the Windward group, has experienced heavy weather. Nineteen deaths are reported and there have been destructive landslides.

TROOPS AT CAMP MEADE.

Liberality About Furloughs. Gen. Young's Arrival.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Sept. 15.—Major General Graham has modified the army regulations to allow ten per cent. of the officers and men of the various regiments to be away on five days' leave at one time.

Ordinarily the number on furlough at one time is five per cent., and it is thought that this change will relieve much of the discontent among the men who want their discharge.

General S. M. B. Young has arrived in camp from Camp Wikoff with his staff, and assumed command of the First division.

The Two Hundred and Second New York arrived in camp yesterday and will be followed to-day by the Thirty-fifth Michigan and the Fifteenth Minnesota.

Major Charles R. Parke of Scranton, who is under arrest for neglecting to furnish descriptive lists of patients sent to Philadelphia hospitals, has retained General Gobin to manage his defence.

Elections in Japan.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—State department advices show that the general election in Japan for members of the lower house of the Diet, returns of which have just been made, resulted in an overwhelming majority for the Constitutional party, as the combination held by Counts Ocuna and Itagaki is called.

The lower house stands: Constitutionalists 253, Nationalists 20, independents and business men 27; total 300 members.

ZOAR'S FALL CAUSED BY [illegible]RISE.

"Do you know," said a Cleveland man who has had considerable to do with the Zoarites during the past eight or ten years "how the breaking up of the Zoar community began?"

"I'll tell you. It was all on account of a piece of ribbon. One of the things that the people of Zoar foreswore when they settled there was gaudy raiment. They dressed themselves in sombre colors and ornaments were unthought of. As long as that plan was adhered to Zoar was safe; but when people got to going there from the cities, to board at the hotel, the beginning of the end was inaugurated.

"It was the law of the community that all the earnings of the people were to be turned into the common treasury, and that nobody was to have a cent to spend for his personal benefit or pleasure. The trustees did all the buying and everything was owned in common.

"After a while, however, the girls who worked at the hotel began to get presents of money from visitors, and one of them, one day, took a few cents out of the change she received and bought a piece of ribbon.

"It was like introducing the measles. It was catching, and presently the other girls began to come out in glorious colors.

"The deadly work had been done. The trustees were powerless. Girls who were not fortunate enough to be assigned to work at the hotel went away—out into the world, and it was not long before the boys began to follow them.

"That was the manner in which Zoar fell. The people there to-day are nearly all old, and for that reason the community cannot last. The property is to be sold, the receipts will be divided, and Zoar will be but a memory of what it might have been but for a piece of ribbon."—Commercial Leader.

Shoes for Spring.

You'll be buying a new pair of shoes soon. Where are you going to buy them?

The shoe store you want to patronize is the store that gives you the most style, comfort, elegance and durability for the money.

If you'll "shop around" before you buy you'll find that this is the store you're looking for.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

LUZON MUST BE OURS

Philippines Question Not Wholly Settled.

NATIVES UNFIT TO RULE

Peace Commission May Go to Paris Without Definite Instructions. President Thinks We Owe the Islands Stabel Goverument. Most of the Cabinet Are With Him.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The question of the disposal of the Philippines still remains unsettled, and it is not improbable that the peace commissioners may depart for Paris without specific instructions as to all the matters which they will be called on to consider.

As the situation stands at present, the administration has determined that nothing less than the cession to the United States of the entire island of Luzon shall be the minimum demand made at the Paris meeting. How much further the government will go in its directions to the peace commission has not been determined.

Unquestionably it is the opinion of a majority of the cabinet that the United States are under a moral responsibility to provide a better government for the Philippines.

That has been the intention of the president from the first, but some of his advisers were insistent that this country should withdraw its forces from Manila and leave the islands to Spanish sovereignty or whatever character of government the future might develop.

Since then, however, the sentiment of the country has been so overwhelmingly against allowing Spanish rule to continue that those who were, and perhaps are, opposed to assuming any responsibility for the Philippines have advanced to the position where they think it best not to press their previous views.

Out of this change of sentiment, or, at least, acceptance of the inevitable, has come the practical certainty that Spain will not be allowed to reign as she did in the past in her far eastern possessions which came under the control of the United States through Dewey's victory.

What will be included in the instructions to the peace commissioners on that point has yet to be decided. It may be accepted as definite that even if the United States do not secude every island in the Philippines as a result of the peace negotiations, there will not be a continuance of the mediaeval rule which has been practiced by the Spanish authorities.

With the possession of Luzon assured, the United States government will have such a strong foothold in the Philippines that it can exercise jurisdiction over the other islands and compel Spain or any other governmental authority to provide a just and liberal rule.

The president and the cabinet are thoroughly convinced that the insurgents are not fit to rule the islands, but much will be left to the discretion of the peace commission as to the recognition, if any, to be accorded to them.

Secretary Day was in consultation at the state department yesterday with two of his colleagues on the peace commission, Senators Davis and Whitelaw Reid.

The other members, Senators Frye and Gray, are expected here to-day, when a consultation between the president and the commissioners will be held at the White House.

Suffering in the Gold Country.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 15.—A party of miners have arrived here from Fort Wrangel, Alaska, and relate a story confirmatory of previous reports of suffering of prospectors who tried to get into the Klondike by the Ashcroft route.

The party is composed of James and Frank Hazars, W. Rough and William Mullin. Their homes are at Dolphin Lake, Manitoba.

"The scenes of distress along the trail are vividly impressed on our minds," said William Mullin.

"We passed fully one hundred outfits, representing perhaps sixty men, and many of them were actually starving.

"The poor fellows in many cases had lost everything—clothing, horses and provisions—and were struggling along in a half dazed condition, eating pophers, ground hogs, squirrels, in fact anything that they could get.

"They are a ragged, hungry and desperate crowd of men, with small hopes of reaching their destination. Occasionally a fortunate party on the trail gives them provisions, but none of us had much to spare.

"All along the trail you can see them linger under trees and under improvised shelters, trudging helplessly along in the day time and often lying down at night without a bite to eat. It is simply terrible."

F. C. Wade, crown attorney of the Klondike, has arrived here from Dawson City.

Mr. Wade estimates the gold output this season at $8,000,000.

A recent census shows that there are sixteen thousand people in Dawson, and ten thousand on rivers and creeks in the district. Wade will go to Ottawa and make an official report to the government.

Emperor of Corea Poisoned.

Yokohama, Sept. 15.—Advices received from Seoul say that the Emperor and Crown Prince of Corea were taken ill on September 11, and it was supposed that they had been poisoned. They are now recovering.

Eleven courtiers have been arrested on suspicion of having administered the poison or participated in a conspiracy against the life of the emperor.

Trouble Feared from Strikers.

Pittsburg, Penn., Sept. 15.—Serious trouble is feared in the third pool before the struggle for the enforcement of the Chicago coal mining agreement is ended. The mines are guarded by deputies.

English Cricketers Win.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 15.—The two days' cricket match between Ontario cricketers and Warner's English team was finished yesterday, the Englishmen winning by an inning and 140 runs.

GETTING OUT OF PORTO RICO.

Spanish War Vessels Have Sailed Away for Home.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 15.—The Spanish war vessels Concha, Isabell II, Ponce de Leon and Terror, whose departure had been delayed through the fear of a hurricane, sailed yesterday for Martinique, whence they will proceed for Spain.

The peace commissioners met in joint session at 10 o'clock for the purpose of discussing the written communications which passed between the two commissions yesterday. Spain's case was submitted to the American commissioners in writing Monday afternoon, and thte Americans returned an answer at nine o'clock.

While great secrecy is observed as to the deliberations of the commission it is reported privately that Spain has agreed to the hoisting of the American flag here within two or three days, the evacuation of the Spanish troops to follow with all haste.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—Admiral Schley has cabled the navy department as follows:

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 14.

The Spanish vessels evacuated Porto Rico this morning. Terror, Concha, Isabel, Seguando, Ponce de Leon and Criolla and a small gunboat out of commission.

This is taken to mean that the vessels named have, under the agreement reached by the commission, sailed from Porto Rican waters for Spain.

The Terror is a torpedo boat, and is the only vessel of the fleet which started from Cape Verde under command of Admiral Cervera to escape destruction.

CHINA'S RULER AWAKENING.

Approves a Plan for a National University Other Improvements.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—Minister Conger informs the department of state that the emperor of China, by imperial decree, has sanctioned the opening of a national university at Pekin, in connection with which schools are to be established in the provincial capitals, and educational instittutions called third class are to be opened in the department and district cities. Graduatets of the schools of third class may enter the intermediate colleges and the university at Pekin.

It is believed that the curriculum adopted by the Japanese University will be followed.

Another dispatch from Minister Conger would indicate that the Emperor of China has taken a long stride in advance in civilization by encouraging the newspapers of his empire to publish a truthful and full account of the daily events and to be both bold and fearless in the discussion of current affairs.

He has by official proclamation made the Chinese Daily Progress an official organ and has declared that articles which appear in Chinese newspapers though apparently displeasing to him, shall not on that account be suppressed.

He has directed that important articles of current events in the leading papers shall be marked and presented to him promptly. He assigns, in his proclamation, the reason for this that he desires to extend his knowledge of affairs, both Chinese and foreign.

Miles' Tribute to Garcia.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—Secretary Gonzales Quesada of the Cuban delegation has given out several documents relating to Cuban affairs. They include a letter written by General Miles while in Porto Rico to General Nunez, which Mr. Quesada regards as a tribute from the commanding general of the American army to the good service of General Garcia and the Cubans at Santiago. The letter, in part, is as follows:

"I congratulate you on the cessation of hostilities and the prospect of the successful termination of thte struggle of your countrymen for their liberties. I met General Garcia very pleasantly, but was so much occupied that I did not have as much time to talk with him as I wanted to do. I deeply regretted not seeing more of General Garcia, as I wished to thank him again for the good service he and those under his command had rendered. Please send him a copy of this at your first opportunity."

Cortes Closed.

Madrid, Sept. 15.—Premier Sagasta obtained the signature of the queen regent to a decree closing the Cortes yesterday, and read the document in the chambers yesterday afternoon. Fears were entertained that disturbances would arise in the Chamber of Deupties and likewise in the Senate, but this has now been effectively obviated.

The indemnity bill was postponed to a future occasion for discussion of the measure.

Gen. Wheeler Returns from the South

New York, Sept. 15.—General Wheeler arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel, Manhattan, at about 11.30 o'clock yesterday. He came from his home in the South by way of Washington, having attended the burial of his son, Naval Cadet Thomas H. Wheeler, who was drowned while at Camp Wikoff.

General Wheeler went to Camp Wikoff in the afternoon. He was accompanied by an aid and had little to say about military affairs.

Contracts for Battleships.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—The contracts for the three new battleships have been awarded.

One vessel goes to the Cramps, another to the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, and the third to the Union Iron Works of San Francisco.

They will be of 12,500 tons displacement, with a coaling capacity of 2,000 tons and a speed of eighteen and one-half knots.

The President Accepts.

Washington, Sept. 15.—President McKinley has accepted the formal invitation presented by Mayor Mayor Warwick, C. Stewart Patterson and C. C. Harrison of Philadelphia, to be present at the peace jubilee celebration which will be held in Philadelphia the last week in October.

Senator Kyle Stricken.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 15.—Senator Jas. H. Kyle of South Dakota was stricken with paralysis here yesterday while at the Forest City House. He will recover, but his entire right side will be paralyzed.

ALLOTMENT OF TROOPS

Volunteers Will Be Ordered to Porto Rico.

REGULARS TO GO TO CUBA

Troops Will Rendezvous at Southern Camps. Porto Rican Army Will Be Composed Mainly of Volunteers and the Remaining Commands Will Be Assigned to Duty in this Country.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 15.—An important move has been made by the war department toward the formation of the Cuban army of occupation. Orders were issued directing the removal from Camp Wikoff of all the regular troops now stationed there and sending them to points of rendesvous in southern states.

With the withdrawal of these men from Montauk Point Camp Wikoff will be deserted, only a few sick and convalescents remaining.

The troops affected by the department's order are the First, Second, Sixth, Ninth and Tenth United States cavalry; the First, Second, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Sixteenth, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth United States infantry, and Batteries E and K of the First, A and F of the Second, G and H of the Fourth and F of the Fifth United States Artillery.

Orders will also be issued sending the Second regiment of volunteer engineers to some southern camp.

Owing to the desire of the department to get control of the important ports in Cuba it was determined to abandon the original plan of having all the regulars return to their army posts after leaving Camp Wikoff. They will be kept in camp at Anniston and Huntsville, Ala., and at Lexington, Ky., until the military commission arranges for the evacuation of Cuba.

It is also stated that the department intends to recall some of the regulars now at army posts and use them for garrison duty in Cuba and Porto Rico. If this is done, the volunteer regiments will be assigned to duty at the various garrisons in this country.

The department has decided to send as few volunteers as possible to Cuba, the regulars having been slated for the bulk of this work. Some of the volunteers will share in it, however, but it is the policy of the department to depend mainly on the regulars.

It is likely that when the Porto Rican army is organized it will be found that the volunteers are in the majority in this force. The work in that island will not be as arduous or as exacting as in Cuba, and for this reason the department will utilize the regulars mostly for duty in Cuba and the volunteers in Porto Rico.

TURKEY IN DEFIANT MOOD.

She Will Not Withdraw Her Troops from Crete

Constantinople, Sept. 15.—The Porte has addressed two circular notes to the powers. The first alleges that the British provoked the disorders in Crete and declares that the powers are responsible for the present situation in the island. The note also protests against the bombardment of Candia.

The second note refers to the ultimatum of thte foreign admirals and convey's the Porte's refusal to withdraw the Turkish troops from thte island of Crete.

Candia, Crete, Sept. 15.—There are no new developments in the situation here which is peaceful. The Mussulmans say they have decided to accept the ultimatum of Admiral Noel calling for the disarmament of the populace if the admiral is sure that he has sucient force to overcome the Bashi-Bazouks. Otherwise they beg him to wait until further reinforcements arrive, when they will willingly co-operate with him.

The Bashi-Bazouks have consented to disarmament provided that they be allowed to surrender their arms to the Turkish authorities.

Filipinos Yield to Otis.

Manila, Sept. 15.—The insurgents are complying with the demands made by General Otis for the withdrawal of the Filipinos from the city and in other matters, and it is safe to say that trouble has been averted. General Otis has fixed to-day as the day for the evacuation of the insurgents.

At first some of the Filipino leaders were strongly inclined to resist, but others who were largely influential were extremely anxious to avoid a conflict.

The ultimatum of General Otis was delivered to the Filipinos last Friday.

Germany and the Philippines.

London, Sept. 15.—A dispatch from Berlin to the Financial News says that German traders are preparing to take advantage of the altered circumstances of the Philippines, and in pursuance of this policy the ships of the North German Lloyd and Hamburg American steamship lines will make monthly calls at Manila as soon as trade there becomes more settled.

This, the dispatch says, is one of several steps to be taken in view of the extension of German trade in the Philippines.

Manila Suburbs Evacuated.

Manila, Sept. 15.—The insurgents evacuated the suburbs of Manila yesterday. They did so in a grand march in which nearly three thousand men took part. Rifles were carried, colors were waved, bands played and the men shouted "Viva Americanos" and "Viva Filipinos Libres."

The merchants here expect heavy losses if a new tariff is enforced at an early date because their present stocks valued roughly at $5,000,000, have paid the highest duties.

120 Rioters Arrested.

Trieste, Sept. 15.—A force of two hundred police was sent yesterday to guard the Italian club in this city, which it was feared would be attacked by the populace, who are still infuriated against Italians on account of the murder of the empress by an Anarchist of that nationality.

Five more arrests have been made, making 120 prisoners now in custody for participation in the anti-Italian riots.

New Rules for Primaries.

It is not many years since the Australian ballot system was introduced into the elections in New Jersey and the citizens of this State were accorded the privilege of a secret ballot that was really effective. The idea of introducing the secret ballot into the party primary is of comparatively recent origin. The usual primary has been looked on as a settled thing. The slate was prepared in advance and the leaders of the party in the district looked to their followers to back their ticket and nominate the men named. Sometimes there was a split and the result was a lively fight. The new plan decided upon by the Republican executive committee of this city looks toward the abolishment of all "fixed" primaries and gives the individual voters of the party a chance to express their preference for any candidate without interference.

This movement was inaugurated three years ago by Assemblyman Roger F. Murray who was then a member of the county executive committee of the G. O. P. He introduced a resolution at a meeting of the county committee with a view of starting such a system of primaries in the counties. The other members of the committee hemmed and hawed over the matter and nothing was done. Every year since Mr. Murray has called up the resolution, but only to have it ignored by the committee.

This year Mr. Murray decided to try nearer home to work his pet scheme for the government of primaries. He went to work and prepared a set of rules after his own ideas incorporating some of the points of the Kinsman system that was used so successfully in the Third ward primary last year. The draft of these resolutions, as prepared by Mr. Murray, was put before the meeting of the local governing body of the Republican party at the meeting Monday night. Mr. Murray explained the advantages of his plan, in which he was backed by several of the other members of the committee. After considerable discussion the other members of the committee agreed to give it a trial and the regulations were unanimously adopted.

The new form of the primary, which has thus been fathered by Mr. Murray, undoubtedly possesses many advantages over the old way. The individual member of the party will have a better chance to express his own opinion regarding the nominee, and none of the "bosses" can rush through a slate without giving their fellow partisans in the district a fair chance to meet it with another ticket. Instead of a few having a chance to control the primary, every party voter will have a chance.

A Revolution In Food.

From the savage who drinks hot blood and gnaws the raw meat of the game he has just killed to the epicure reveling in the modern sophistry of the cuisine civilization stretches in a marvelous span. It has depended too greatly on the intellectual and industrial culture, which has been primarily stimulated by the desires ascending in the scale, food, better food, best food. The importance attached to this matter is felt by all, except the transcendental philosopher, exemplified in Kant, who did not know the difference between fish, flesh and fowl except on Sundays, or by the religious devotee who has weaned himself from the lusts of the flesh out of a sense of duty.

The history of food and its methods of preparation is a very considerable portion of the history of the race. It has not been merely an index of primitive need, but a measure of social culture, of racial characteristic and of mental progress. It is believed, too, that the habitual use of certain foods has contributed in large degree to the superiority of some races over others, as, for example, that the wheat and meat eating peoples have always been the world conquerors. In social characteristics the development of the art of dining has been the most prolific root of refinement and a stimulant of domesticity and home life beyond comparison. There is scarcely an important phase of everyday existence which does not connect itself closely with eating and drinking These have been the foundation of a hundred important trades and professions, by which millions of persons obtain a support. When we speak of the pleasures of the table, we sound the magic phrase which not only recalls the most widely enjoyed enjoyments of social civilization, but measures not a few of the most vital functions of business economy. When Voltaire said that the English had invented 20 religions, but not one single sauce, he crammed a history into an epigram.

In view, then, of the philosophical value of the food question as a social factor, one contemplates with a feeling of terror the alleged invention of Dr. Lillienfeld of Vienna, Austria. This is artificial albumen, which contains all the value of the essential element of nitrogenous foods and has never before been successfully produced. It is said to be put up in highly compressed tablets, a kind of subtleized pemmican, and a supply for several days can be carried in the vest pocket. It will largely do away with cooks and cooking, reduce the pleasures of the table to a very simple form, emasculate the attractions of social entertainment, increase the ease and economy of warmaking, abolish a host of occupations, and, in fact, kick up a tremendous rumpus generally. All this, if it proves to be a genuine and wholesome albuminous extract, if it can be made cheaply and if people can be induced to use it on an extensive scale. But we fancy that Falstaff's plaint will be generally re-echoed, "What, shall there be no more cakes and ale?" In such a feeling will be the world's protection against such a dismal scientific fact.

The National Irrigation congress, which recently met at Cheyenne, discussed many important problems involved in the subject matter of its purpose with its usual zeal and knowledge. The facts that the region needing irrigation makes a body of land roughly aggregating 1,800,000 square miles; that this land, which can be made immensely fertile by water, mostly belongs to government, and that most of the naturally desirable farming land is already taken up lifts this public question to immense importance. How the irrigation problem can be successfully solved, however, is a baffling crux, just as it is in the Mississippi river question. There are immense difficulties in the way. If it were possible to use the surplus volume of the Mississippi flood to irrigate the western deserts, it would happily kill two birds with one stone. Louisiana and Arizona would congratulate each other with true southwestern fervor.

Russia is at once the largest and the weakest of the world's great powers. Its area is one-seventh of the land surface of the earth, three times the size of China. On a peace footing her army numbers 1,700,000, on a war footing 5,000,000 men. In 1897 the military expenditure of the empire was $227,000,000 in a time of peace. The national debt is $3,500,000,000, and it requires a round billion to meet the annual expenditures, including civil and military list. The Russians are the poorest people in the world except the Celestials, vastly more so than the peasantry of any other European nation. In France the per capita wealth is $85, in Russia $8.95. Is it any wonder, then, that his imperial majesty is anxious for disarmament on purely economic grounds aside from philanthropy?

MME. DREYFUS.

"Upon you, more than upon anyone, my dear wife, falls the burden of clearing from the name our children bear the stain so unjustly and treacherously placed there," wrote Captain Dreyfus from the Island of the Devil to his wife in Paris. All the world knows how she has performed her task.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Mayor John F. Wilson, of the borough of North Plainfield, is suggested as a Democratic candidate for the office of Governor. Col. Wilson has more backbone in his little finger than the wobbly, willowy Foster possesses in his entire body; and if the Democrats fail to nominate him we hope they will select a leader of the same sturdy stripe. The citizens of New Jersey will then have a chance to vote for a man in preference to a very poor specimen of curly-haired India rubber.—Cranford Chronicle.

The Passaic News sounds a timely warning concerning the shade trees. A walk along almost any street will convince an observing person that something is wrong with the trees. The leaves are falling off and withering prematurely, the elms seeming to be most affected. It does not look as if the elm-leaf beetle is at work and it may be simply that the long hot spell without rain has caused it. But as a fine tree is indirectly a benefit to every citizen, these ornaments to the streets and lawns should be watched and carefully guarded from any preventable injury. Insect life is ever at work on some of our fruit and shade trees; indeed, there is scarcely a form of vegetation that has not its peculiar parasite. Only a few days ago we reported the appearance of a strange and apparently new pest in this section which had been attacking the maples, and the San Jose scale has obtained a foothold in New Jersey and may play havoc with fruit trees next summer. The owner of a tree should watch it carefully and if he notices any insects on it or any signs of blight report them as fully as possible to the State Entomologist at Trenton or the Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick. This is the way to stop the destruction of his own trees and the spread of the pests in the State. Full information is freely furnished to all applicants as to the best ways of disposing of the scourges—Paterson Press.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Chauncey Stout went to the Somerville Fair:
He wasn't alone, for there was a pair.
They took in the sights, yes, every one,
And then when their day of pleasure was done
They went to a minister and for a sum
Were married, and now two hearts beat as one.
He showed up in the morning just the same
And carried his route with no aid from Laing.
Then down to the office he rode on his wheel,
And the boys all asked "Stout, how do you feel."
And he answered "Oh, boys, I feel all right."
"Didn't you know I was married last night?"
Then the boys in the office all wished him much joy
For he certainly was a happy boy.
Where'er he may go may he meet with success,
Is the wish of the staff of The Daily Press.

Many flowers have recently disappeared from graves in a cemetery at Trenton. A watch was kept for the thieves, and it was discovered that the marauders were rabbits. The flowers most frequently placed on the graves were carnations and pinks, which contain a flavor of cinnamon, of which rabbits are inordinately fond. The rabbits came at night, and simply feasted until the flowers and stems were devoured.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 15—The burglars who entered Conductor Edwin Teel's house on Jackson avenue Tuesday morning, also got away with a coat belonging to Charles Teel, the son. The loss was not discovered until a day or two afterwards. The burglars left the coat on Alvah Gray's piazza, and it was discovered by Mrs. Gray when she went to sweep the piazza the next morning. Hearing of the burglary, she suspected whom it belonged to, and sent it home.

Irving Dunham, who has been visiting his mother, Mrs. Ann Dunham, for a month, has returned to his home in Anniston, Alabama. Mrs. Dunham will remain here for another month.

Burglars were prowling around Zibe Osman's house on the Greenbrook road last night. Nothing was taken except a few clothes in a basket outside the house.

The Dunellen Gun Club will have a team in the State League shoot to be held Saturday afternoon at New Brunswick, and they expect to win a trophy.

Eleven passenger brakemen were laid off yesterday for the winter as a result of the new timetable on the Long Branch road.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Geo. Smith who has been visiting Mrs. Geo. Lyons, has returned to her home in Port Richmond.

The members and friends of the Scotch Plains Baptist church were out in full force last evening to welcome their pastor and his wife from their European trip. At the "at home" arranged by the ladies of the church the long driveway leading to the chapel door was decorated with Chinese lanterns, while inside all were merry and happy. The chapel had been tastefully decorated with palms, flowers and bunting. The hearty greeting extended to both Mr. and Mrs. Braker was one they will long remember. Those in charge had invited the members of the Methodist and Episcopal churches to unite with them upon this happy occasion and there were many who availed themselves of the invitation. A very interesting programme had been arranged and shortly after 8 o'clock the "at home" opened by a few well chosen remarks of welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Braker by Mr. Krausse, of Cranford, which expressed the sentiment of all present. Then followed a programme consisting of recitations, vocal and instrumental music. Mr. Braker made a few remarks, thanking the members of the church for their encouragement to him in the work of the church, after which ice cream and cake were served by the ladies of the church. During refreshments the time was given up to social talk. Shortly after people began to wend their way homeward, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close. George E. Hall, the superintendent of the Sunday school, who was to receive part of the honors of the "at home," having just returned from a month's western trip, was unable to be present on account of illness.

The handicaps for the five-mile race over the Mountain avenue course Saturday afternoon were given out Monday evening. There were seven entries as follows: Maguire, scratch; Marsh, 30 seconds; Chapin, 30 seconds; Joe Alberts, 40 seconds; Nick Alberts, 45 seconds; Scaffer, 45 seconds; Meyers, 45 seconds.

The result of Messrs. Kyte, Stansbery, Hand and Allen's two days' fishing trip arrived by express at the Fanwood station Tuesday morning and consisted of six small bluefish. There has been some pretty good fish yarns told by the party but it does not change the catch.

Dr. J. H. Parks and T. J. Nichol attended the Firemen's Relief convention at Atlantic City yesterday as delegate from the Fanwood association.

Miss Avis Berry, who has been spending two weeks with her grandfather, Robert Walpole, returned to her home yesterday.

Wm. E. Collins and ex-Sheriff Kyte attended the Union County Republican clambake at Neptune Heights Tuesday.

Mrs. Bliss, of Cortlandt, N. Y., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Arlington Drake.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, September 15—Monday evening the Republican voters of Westfield township will meet in the town rooms, for the purpose of electing delegates to the State convention at Trenton the following Thursday.

A young man, who gave his name as J. L. Williamson, of New York, reported that he had been held up while riding his wheel from Elizabeth to this place last evening, but he had jumped on his wheel again and ridden away before the would-be highwaymen had a chance to take anything from him.

The managers of the Children's Country Home have decided to close the home for the season the first week in October. The home has had a very successful season, and the managers feel very proud of the work which has been done.

The members of the Willow Grove Domino Club will enjoy a bicycle trip to Plainfield Friday evening.

LINCOLN.

(Special Correspondence of the Daily Press.)

Lincoln, September 15 — Chicken thieves, harness thieves and persons who seem to take about anything they can carry, have visited the farm of William and Gideon Smalley recently. Upon their last visit the lappels of a saddle were cut off. A reward of $20 will be given for information leading to the arrest of the culprits.

The hum of the cider mill is heard in this vicinity and, judging from the many loads of apples which are arriving at the mill of Abraham Smalley just now, we predict a large supply of the liquid at "Uncle Abe's" this fall, and have no doubt but it will be up to the usual standard of harvest cider which he produces.

WASHINGTONVILLE

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Washingtonville, Sept. 15—Henry A. Speer has decided that he doesn't care for the office of justice of the peace any longer. He has tendered his resignation to the Governor and it has been accepted. The path of the country Justice is often beset with difficulties and unpleasantnesses, which the Judge did not realize when he took the office. He has therefore decided to give it up and let somebody else try their hand.

Charles Sebring, A. P. Voorhees, George N. Steward and Augustus Mobus composed the delegation of politicians from North Plainfield township who attended the Somerville Fair yesterday.

Mrs. George Demler, Miss Carrie Demler and Miss Katherine Bilyeu have returned after spending two weeks at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Clark, Jr., have returned from a sojourn at Asbury Park. They leave Saturday for a stay at Mt. Pocono.

Lester Walton, of Craig place, has returned to his studies at the New York Military Academy at Cornwall.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

OUR NEW TERRITORY

RIGHTS OF THE CHURCH WILL NOT BE INTERFERED WITH.

Catholics Will Be Well Protected In Their Faith by the United States—Freedom of the Church Will Not Be Restricted. Mgr. Martinelli Expects More Liberty.

A correspondent of the Ohio Valley Manufacturer, writing on the establishment of peace from a Catholic standpoint, says:

The scheme to hinder and vex the establishment of peace by playing on the sentiments and sensitiveness of Catholics, so as to arouse suspicions among the members of this church that the interests of their religion will be so subordinated in the Spanish colonies when the United States takes possession of them as to cause the loss of their identity, is on a line with that other plan of the negationists to establish an insuperable antagonism between the cardinal principles upon which the fathers established this government and the policy of acquiring and holding colonial possessions.

The educated and enlightened Catholic everywhere desires that character of interference with the Catholicism of the Spanish islands which will free it from those influences of monasticism or clericalism which have retarded the growth of liberal enlightenment among the people in the Spanish dominions.

Church and state will undoubtedly be disassociated in so far as the open and active or secret and insidious intermeddling of church authorities in affairs of state is concerned, but this will free the church authorities from cares and offices which do not legitimately or logically comport with the duties or the functions or the vocation of the priesthood of any denomination. It will leave the priesthood free to look after the morals of the people, free to work for the salvation of souls, instead of laboring so industriously for the aggrandizement of power and the accumulation of money that the real purposes for the existence of religion, the true mission of the priesthood, runs the risk of being lost in the shuffle.

The Catholic in Spain, France, Cuba and the Philippines is or should be the same as the Catholic in the United States, and in no country under the sun is the Catholic as well protected in his faith and its teachings and in the methods and manner of his worship of the Almighty God as in the United States.

The insinuations that the Catholic church in Cuba or Porto Rico or the Philippines will be stripped of any of its legitimate prerogatives when these islands are annexed to the United States is mere bosh. The United States government is not engaged in evangelistic work, nor is it about to embark on a career of religious fanaticism which involves the persecution of Catholics. Its mission and purpose are of the very highest order of humanitarianism, and the very essence of this mission and purpose is to guarantee civil and religious liberty to every citizen, and in the doing of this it knows no particular creed, exalts no especial form of religious worship. When Mgr. Martinelli was made acquainted with this scheme, he said:

"No one who knows the American people will for a moment entertain a thought that the church will be interfered with in any way wherever the United States by conquest or purchase acquires possession." Instead of the change of government involving any restriction of the freedom of the church he expects reasonably that there will be "perhaps a little more freedom."

This freedom does not mean pernicious latitude or liberalism, but simply enlightenment and liberty to worship God according to the tenets of the church.

ORDER OF THE CAPUCHINS.

The Results of a General Census Held Throughout the World.

On Jan. 1, 1898, the order of the Capuchins was subjected to a general census throughout the world, with the following results: The order possessed 531 convents, 107 hospices and 58 novitiate houses, the population of which consists of 3,876 priests, 1,938 clerics (professed or novices) and 2,971 lay brothers. To these must be added 36 "seraphic colleges"—i. e., preparatory schools for young candidates—with 843 students. The entire order is divided into three provinces, of which the Roman is the largest, and the Russian, exclusive of Poland, with only 17 religious scattered all over Russia, the smallest. These figures by no means exhaust the influence of the order in the world, for the "Third Order" under its direction consists of 673,083 men and women. It would be very interesting to have similar detailed statistics of all the other orders and congregations of the church.—London Tablet.

Work of Catholic Sisters at Key West.

Lieutenant Trull of the Seventy-first New York volunteers returned to New York on a furlough after being wounded before Santiago. He brings the first good words of the work which is being done by sisters for the wounded. He says: "I am a Protestant, but I want to tell you that those Catholic sisters in the hospital at Key West are angels from heaven. They showed no preference in their work, but simply made everybody comfortable. They are working night and day too." — Boston Herald.

Young German Monks.

Quite a number of young German Catholics belonging to the highest aristocracy have retired from the world within the last few years and sought the seclusion of cells in out of the way monasteries. One of the latest additions is Prince Philip of Hohenlohe-Schillingsfuerst, a cousin of the present chancellor of the empire. He has found admission in the Benedictine monastery of Seckau, in Styria, where he now is plain Brother Constantine.

RELIGION IN PORTO RICO.

Mgr. Martinelli Thinks the Church Will Now Have More Freedom.

Most Rev. Sebastian Martinelli, the papal delegate to the United States, arrived in Boston recently. When asked what would be the effect of the annexation of Porto Rico to the United States, he answered:

"I am not a politician and do not know enough about the place to tell whether it will be a benefit to the United States to own it or not. As far as the interest of the Porto Ricans is concerned there is no doubt that they will profit by the change." "Will your jurisdiction as apostolic delegate extend to that island when it is annexed?" he was asked.

"That is a question for the holy see to answer. My lines of jurisdiction are already drawn, and I cannot extend them without a positive order from Rome. What will be done in that regard, if anything, is a question for the future, and one upon which I have had no communication with the pope. Political changes do not influence Rome in the management of the church. We can safely say she will do what is for the best."

"Will the church suffer in any way from the political changes that are likely to take place in the Philippines or other Spanish islands?" "I do not think that any one who knows the American people would for a moment entertain a thought that the church would be in any way interfered with, wherever the United States, by conquest or purchase, acquires possession. The change of government will take place, I suppose, but I expect to see everything else go on as it has in the past. Priests as well as people will be as well treated as they are here in the United States, and the church will go on doing the good work she has done in the past, perhaps with a little more freedom."—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

MISSION WORK IN DAHOMEY.

Rev. Father Lissner Tells of the Work and Ministrations to the Sick.

The Rev. Ignatius Lissner, superior of the Catholic missions in Agwe, Dahomey, Africa, who recently entered upon his work in the United States in the interests of his missions, spoke at three morning masses recently in St. Paul's church, Cambridge.

Father Lissner told of the missionary work being done in Africa and especially of the ministrations to the sick. Father Lissner is a Frenchman and speaks several languages. He has just finished a French-Dahomey dictionary, and has translated the Scriptures into the native language. He has been engaged in the African field about six years, although the missions there were started in 1861. In the city of about 60,000 people are now 5,000 native Catholics. In Agwe, the mission center, there are several parochial schools and a high school. The natives are taught in the English and French languages, the priests being of Irish and French nationality. Great Britain affords the best protection for the Catholic and other missionaries.

The climate is severe for Europeans, many missionaries having died of fever. During the war in Dahomey, in 1891 and 1892, the king of Dahomey destroyed the missions and held the Frenchmen as hostages, Father Lissner being confined in prison five months.—Boston Herald.

Higher Education For Nuns.

A project has been started for the establishment of a normal school of higher education for nuns, which has received the warm approval of no less than 18 members of the French episcopate. The archbishop of Avignon is showing himself especially active in the matter. It is gratifying to find that the scheme has been welcomed by a large number of representative people among the clergy and laity. Among those who have given encouragement and promised assistance may be mentioned Pere Baudrillart and Pere Thaudinart of the Oratory, the Abbe Lemire and the Abbe Naudet, Mgr. Meffre, MM. F. Brunetiere, Francois Coppee and P. Thureau-Dangin of the French academy and M. H. Joly. When the sacrifies which the Catholics of France have made during the last 15 years for the sake of education are borne in mind, it is hard to imagine that there should be any difficulty in bringing this project to a happy fulfillment.—London Tablet.

Brief Catholic Items.

Prince Maximilian of Saxony, who became a priest a few years ago, has been appointed bishop of Kulm, in West Prussia. The prince is 28 years of age.

For the first time in its history solemn high mass was celebrated in Marthas Vineyard the other Sunday. The event took place in the new church in Cottage City.

The Sisters of Mercy of Mobile have opened a house of their order in Mississippi City, Miss., a beautiful watering place half way between Mobile and New Orleans, on the gulf of Mexico.

The Paulists are to open a mission in St. Joseph's cathedral, Hartford, soon. Father Elliott will have charge and will endeavor to introduce into New England the practice of preaching to non-Catholics.

Extremely gratifying news comes from Korea. Our missionaries have been graciously received by the emperor, the Catholic cathedral has recently been finished in Seoul, the capital, and Bishop Mutel has had the consolation of ordaining several new native priests in addition to three last year.

The present archbishop of Santiago de Cuba, which is the only metropolitan district of the Antilles, is a Franciscan, Mgr. Francis Saenz de Urturs y Crespo, O. F. M., who was consecrated in 1891. In the archdiocese there are 83 priests, 55 parishes, 91 churches and chapels and a Catholic population of more than 300,000.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Preußen.

Provinz Brandenburg.

Berlin. Neulich Nachmittags stockte hier fünf Stunden hindurch in Folge Brandes des Hauptkabels der gesammte elektrische Straßenbahnbetrieb, ausgenommen eine Linie. Eine gewaltige Verkehrsstörung wurde hierdurch hervorgerufen. — Die erste deutsche Uhrenausstellung dahier war an den beiden ersten Tagen ihrer Eröffnung von etwa 7000 Personen besucht. Unter Anderen weilte dort auch die chinesische Gesandtschaft etwa zwei Stunden.—Als Leiche im Wagenabtheil aufgefunden wurde kürzlich Abends beim Eintreffen des Schnellzuges aus Dresden ein Hauptmann vom Garde-Füsilier-Regiment. Ein Schlagfluß hatte während der Fahrt seinem Leben ein jähes Ende bereitet.—In einem Wahnsinnsanfall erdrückte die Sängerin Margarethe Trautmann ihr zwei Monate altes Kind. Sie wurde von ihrer Wirthin dabei betroffen, wie sie auf dem Sopha über dem Kinde lag, das bereits erdrückt und kalt und steif war. Die Unglückliche wurde nach einer Irrenanstalt gebracht.

Fürstenwalde. Dieser Tage erhängte sich an einem Baum in der Nähe des großen Exerzierplatzes der Ulan Schönebeck von der ersten Eskadron, jedenfalls aus Furcht vor Strafe, da er sich gegen einen Vorgesetzten vergangen hatte. Vorher machte Schönebeck den vergeblichen Versuch, sich zu ertränken.

Gatow. Hier hatte ein Uhrmacher Namens Fischer aus Berlin ein Sommerlogis bezogen; um seine Sommerfrische auch praktisch auszunutzen, nahm er Uhren zur Reparatur an. Zuerst lieferte er, da es nur billige Sachen waren, alles richtig ab; als er zuletzt aber zwei werthvolle goldene Uhren zur Ausbesserung erhielt, verschwand er damit auf Nimmerwiedersehen.

Provinz Hannover.

Geestemünde. Die vor mehreren Monaten mit einem Kapital von 15,000,000 Mark gegründete „Geestemünder Härings- und Hochseefischerei-Aktien-Gesellschaft" hat seit Kurzem ihren Betrieb mit vorläufig fünf Dampfern eröffnet, von denen in diesen Tagen die beiden ersten mit recht guten Fängen heimgekehrt sind. Die Dampfer sind äußerst seetüchtig gebaute Fahrzeuge von circa 150 Tonnen Größe und 10 bis 11 Meilen Fahrgeschwindigkeit in der Stunde. Die Dampfer sind mit 150 Netzen von je circa 30 Meter Länge und 15 Meter Tiefe ausgerüstet.

Provinz Hessen-Nassau.

Marburg. Der Einbrecher Karl Mergard aus Kassel, der zu sieben Jahren Zuchthaus verurtheilt ist, ist aus dem hiesigen Gefängniß ausgebrochen. Er verübte sofort einen Einbruch in einem Haus nahe dem Gefängniß, wo er einen Anzug stahl.

Provinz Pommern.

Massow. In Wittenfelde sind bei einer Feuersbrunst 14 Bauernhöfe mit großen Getreidevorräthen und todtem Inventar verbrannt. Kinder, welche mit Streichhölzern gespielt, haben die Feuersbrunst veranlaßt.

Provinz Posen.

Lobsens. In Schoenrode geriethen zwei Arbeiter beim Mähen des Getreides in Streit, ein unverheiratheter Arbeiter hieb seinem Gegner, der Vater von fünf Kindern ist, mit der Sense den Kopf fast vollständig ab. Der Getroffene war sofort todt. Der Thäter wurde dem hiesigen Amtsgerichte zugeführt.

Provinz Ostpreußen.

Königsberg. Das Laboratorium von Albert Alexander in der Nähe von hier ist dieser Tage um die Mittagszeit in die Luft geflogen. Der Besitzer des Laboratoriums und zwei Gehilfen wurden mit fortgeschleudert und erlitten Brandwunden. Die Stelle, wo das Laboratorium gestanden hat, zeigt nur noch eine schwarze mit Trümmern bedeckte Fläche.

Allenstein. Auf dem Deuthener Exerzierplatz wurde bei einer Uebung des Dragoner-Regiments König Albert von Sachsen (ostpreußisches) Nr. 10 einem Dragoner ein derartiger Stich mit einer Lanze in die Schläfe zugefügt, daß der Mann nach wenigen Stunden verstarb.

Provinz Westpreußen.

Elbing. Ein von Schichaus Fabrik und Werft erbautes Torpedo-Jägerboot erreichte bei der Probefahrt eine Geschwindigkeit von 33.6 Knoten, die höchste bis jetzt erreichte Leistung.

Thorn. Der polnische Maurer Prigalski war in einer polnischen Volksversammlung in Skarlin, in eine Cramara gekleidet (Cramara ist ein eng anliegender polnischer Schnürrock), erschienen. Das Gericht verurtheilte Prigalski wegen groben Unfugs zu 150 Mark Geldstrafe.

GOOD JOB WORK.
The job department of THE DAILY PRESS office is the largest and best equipped in Plainfield or vicinity. The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.
If you need job printing at all you need the kind that reflects credit for neatness and style on you. You can get that kind
AT THE DAILY PRESS.

"The Domestic Sewing Machine" knows no superior, for it has none—call we'll prove it. Sold for cash or credit.
Big fight on
We open Fall season with a pitched battle—competition will be beaten in the worst way—our splendid $100,000 stock now covering 3 acres floor space will be scattered all over this state at low prices no one can match—no one will need to leave our store because of too thin a pocketbook or obnoxious terms. Protect yourself by finding out how low are our prices and easy our terms before you buy elsewhere.
Fall's Carpets-- "Fighting Prices"
On every single weave—that means a lot, for this carpet store of ours can not be "overtoppled" by any other house in point of size, variety or true novelty—an immense floor from Market Street to Campbell through to Bank devoted to the stock.
Heavy Ingrains, 39c; Body Brussels, 90c; all wool Ingrains, 65c; Moquettes, Axminsters, Tapestry Brussels and Mattings—heaps of new colors, large and small effects.

$11.75 is the "Fighting Price"—it's an $18 Sideboard. You mustn't think we've no other kinds—for we've 50 sorts at least. China Closets, too.

$2.95, the "Fighting Price"—$4.00 what others get—it's a sturdy, brass trimmed bed, not flimsy sort.
$5.95, the "Fighting Price"—$8 is cheap for such a couch.
$29 for $40 Parlor Suits
$25 Bedroom Suits at $10.50
—bought 'em at a snap for you—you can have them at $10.50 'stead of $15.
"The Portland Range"—a perfect baker, economical coal burner, reliable, long-lived, best.

Noticed This Before.

You Probably Have and May Have Spoken About it.

The reader of this newspaper, if he takes the time and trouble to look carefully through its columns, will probably find half a dozen statements attached to the foot of reading notices about medicinal preparations. Note this fact. In each and every case, as far as Plainfield is concerned; as far as the reader's knowledge of the party is concerned; he might just as well live in the moon. Make another note of this. The only remedy on the market which gives testimony at home, local proof in every town and city in the Union, to back up its claims, is Doan's Kidney Pills. They all try it, but they cannot do it. Why they are unable to do it, can safely be left with the reader to draw his own conclusions. Here is Plainfield proof for Plainfield readers:

Mr. Charles Giese, Cigar Manufacturer, of 25 Elm Place, says: "I have been subject to attacks of kidney complaint for the last 2 or 3 years. Most of the pain was in my back and hips and I could not stoop or straighten up without feeling sharp, shooting twinges. When I sat for any length of time I grew stiff and sour and was compelled to get up and move about. Last spring I grew so bad I had to do something for it. I had read a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills being such a good medicine for kidney troubles so I got a box of them at L. W. Randolph's drug store. I used them according to directions and after 2 or 3 days I felt better. I continued their use until the pain disappeared and I am only to glad to be able to testify to the fact, that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splended remedy."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U.S. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

CHAPTER XI.

When Mark Mowbray escorted the Californian girl down to luncheon, it did not occur to Lilac that the young author had at first sight fallen over head and ears in love with her. Her beauty and sweetness, added to the interest she took in his work, had made the author decide that in her he had met the ideal woman with whom marriage would mean unending happiness. But the thought of anything more than friendship never suggested itself to Lilac's mind. Mark Mowbray might not have felt so happy, if he had known how entirely her interest in him was due to his profession, and that it would have been just as great if he had been old and ugly instead of young and handsome. As it was, he felt very confident; and Sabina, who, with her father, had joined them in the dining-saloon, whispered to the Major over the meal—

"Don't you think, papa, that it would be only kind to Mr. Mowbray if you informed him that Lilac is engaged?"

"That is Miss Marvel's duty," answered the Major, in the severest tone that he could put into a whisper; and the young lady took a few more bird-like pecks at her food before venturing on a reply.

"But if Lilac does not do her duty, papa? She is very unconventional, and may not know what is required of her."

The Major stroked his moustache fiercely.

"It is not a case of conventionality, dear, but of rightmindedness. If Miss Marvel encourages the advances of another man, concealing the fact that she is engaged to Sir Roydon Garth, she is not a woman who will make the Baronet a good wife, and I think it would be my duty to inform Sir Roydon of the fact."

Sabina could scarcely conceal her satisfaction. It was just what she hoped her father would do.

"I do not think you ought to be hard on Lilac, papa," she said, sweetly. "Of course Mr. Mowbray is very handsome, and he is a very distinguished man, I believe. He is a journalist."

"That makes the matter worse," replied the Major. "It is very kind of you to try to defend Miss Marvel, but really the fact that her friend is an attractive man only renders her conduct more inexcusable."

As he spoke, he glanced across the table at the couple under discussion, who were so deep in conversation that the lowering of his voice was hardly necessary as he went on—

"Of course, if Mr. Mowbray is a very old friend, I can understand that they must have a great deal to say to each other."

The sight of Lilac's beautiful innocent face made the Major relent a little, and doubt the unjust conclusion that he was coming to with respect to his charge—a conclusion that he owed more than he guessed to the insidious suggestions of his daughter. Sabina noticed the change in his tone, and determined on a bold stroke.

"Mr. Mowbray appears to be a perfect gentleman, papa," she said diffidently, "and of course it is very nice for us to know him; but, do you know, papa, I believe that Lilac had never seen him before to-day, but introduced herself to him on board."

Major Emmott's face was a sight to see.

"I had my suspicions when she introduced me," he said—"her face reddened so; but, if what you say proves true, I will certainly write to the Baronet. I will ask her openly."

Sabina's bird-like eyes had a look of fear in them, but she rejoined quietly—

"Would it not be better to ask Mr. Mowbray privately, papa? Lilac might not like to admit the truth."

Sabina looked relieved when the Major assented.

"And to think that the Baronet should prefer this girl to my blameless daughter!" he was saying to himself.

"Have you finished your luncheon, Sabina?"

The girl jerked her head round nervously.

"Not quite, papa. Why?"

"I want you to take Lilac on deck while I have a chat with Mr. Mowbray and try to discover what acquaintance he really has with her."

"Certainly, papa. I hope you will find that our suspicions are false," said his daughter, looking the personification of the "proprieties."

But at heart she was very uneasy. What if Mr. Mowbray told her father the true story of how she made his acquaintance? Even Sabina could think of no stratagem or falsehood by which she could explain away her action. She drew the menu towards her, and, when the Major was not looking, scrawled five words on one of the corners and tore it off. The little scrap of paper was lying by the side of the author's plate when, a few moments later, Sabina left the saloon with Lilac. Mr. Mowbray glanced at it with apparent carelessness, and then, rolling it up between finger and thumb into a pellet, dropped it upon the floor. One of the passengers afterwards took the trouble to smooth it out and read it, and then wondered what story was attached to the words, "Please do not tell anything."

Mark Mowbray was a little in doubt as to what was required of him, but Sabina's request had put him upon its guard when, as soon as the two girls had left them alone, the Major plunged into conversation. It promised to be very interesting to him, for it was about Lilac.

"Miss Marvel is a very charming young lady, is she not?" said the old soldier, turning his head in the direction in which the girls were leaving the saloon.

"Very charming indeed, Major Emmott!"

"I suppose that she is quite an old friend of yours, Mr. Mowbray?" the Major went on; and, thinking of Sabina's half-understood request, the young author began to feel uncomfortable.

"Oh, my acquaintance with Miss Marvel is of quite recent date!" he returned, deeming that such an answer would be safe; and his companion looked at him rather curiously.

"Have you spent much time in California?" he asked.

"Only one long holiday."

"I expect that the news of her engagement must have come as a surprise to you, then?"

Mark Mowbray turned pale. The question gave him such a shock that he could scarcely reply, much less think of Sabina's interests.

"Her engagement?" he gasped.

"Yes—her engagement to Sir Roydon Garth. It is possible that Miss Marvel did not mention it?"

The condemnatory tone of the old soldier's voice impelled the young man to defend his ideal lady.

"Considering the shortness of our acquaintance, sir, I should have thought it a very curious thing if Miss Marvel had mentioned her engagement to me."

"Shortness of your acquaintance!" echoed the Major; and Mark Mowbray, throwing all care for Sabina's interest to the winds since the propriety of his ideal's conduct was in question, answered candidly—

"An acquaintnance which is about five minutes older than my acquaintance with you, Major Emmott."

The Major's face grew crimson.

"I thought as much; and I thank you, sir, for informing me of the fact."

He rose as he spake, with the idea of going straight to the Californian girl and giving her his opinion of her conduct; but Sabina met him in the gangway, her expression one of anxiety.

"Well, papa?"

"It is as you thought. I shall certainly write to Sir Roydon Garth. I am going to the young lady now to inform her of my intention. Do not oppose me, dear. I know that you try to shield her, but I cannot allow you to do so this time. To introduce herself in such a manner to a perfect stranger, and then spend the whole afternoon talking to him as an unengaged girl, besides introducing you and myself to the man as an old friend—it is atrocious!"

"It is indeed, papa. I do not want to shield Lilac this time," replied Sabina quite truthfully. "But do you think it is worth while speaking to her about it? Had we not better let her do exactly as she pleases, and then give Sir Roydon a full and truthful account of what she really is?"

The Major paused and twirled the ends of his fierce moustache. Then, after a little consideration, he nodded his head.

"Yes—you are right, as you always are, my child."

Sabina smiled sweetly, well pleased that she had gained her point, and that Lilac was to be traduced without any opportunity of speaking in her own defence.

CHAPTER XII.

It was a great shock to Mowbray to learn that his ideal woman was already claimed by another, and he felt unwilling to believe it. He must question the Major about this engagement in return for the catechism through which he had been put after luncheon, and find out whether there was really no hope for himself. But, when the young man ran up on to the deck and found Sabina and her father approaching him, he was taken aback on discovering that they intended to "cut" him. Both father and daughter passed him with a glassy stare; and, if possible, Sabina appeared even less conscious of his presence than the Major himself. Mark reddened and bit his lip.

"I suppose the little flirt is angry because I did not support her fiction about my acquaintance with the beauty," he said to himself. "Well, I shall not miss their friendship, if only my heroine herself does not disown me."

The possibility that Lilac might not care to continue their acquaintance so unorthodoxly begun rendered him miserable, and Mark decided to clear up the matter at once. He strolled around the deck searching for her, and wondering how he could manage to get into the Major's good graces again, if that were the only means of continuing his friendship with the girl in his charge.

Lilac was not on deck, however. She was in the state-cabin she shared with Sabina, enjoying the luxury of writing to Roy and thinking about him.

It was rather a matter-of-fact epistle, for the haunting sense of the transitiveness of the present state of things was still heavy upon her and marred the perfect bliss of their engagement and love. She was still afraid that Sir Roy had allowed gratitude to master prudence; and, although she loved him most devotedly, still it was impossible to reveal all the love that was in her heart to one whom her conscience and her unselfish love might yet forbid her to marry.

"I am already making progress in the arts of civilization," she wrote. "The daily meals terrified me at first. People eat so many things that I have never heard of except in books, and it is so very important that one should use the right instrument in eating them! I was afraid that I should shock Major Emmott, who seems rather severe about such little matters. He is always finding fault with Sabina, even, and surprises me by the number of ordinary words and idioms that he considers slang, and unfit for the use of a young lady. 'Making it all square' is one. My conversation seems to consist chiefly of the Major's slang,' and I do not know what I shall do if your mother is equally particular. We did not make any acquaintances on the cars. Major Emmott seems afraid to have anything to do with a person who has not been formally introduced to him, however nice he or she may seem. But we have already got to know—is 'got to know' slang?—one of the passengers on the ship."

Lilac paused with the pen in her hand when she had reached this point in her letter, and wondered whether she should give a full account of the introduction, but decided that it would be rather unkind to Sabina, and wrote instead—

"He is a novelist, called Mark Mowbray. Perhaps you have read some of his stories? I had just finished one of them—a very beautiful one—when he was introduced. A strange coincidence—wasn't it? I have often longed to meet a real live author."

Lilac could not tell, of course, what mischief was being plotted against her, or how the story that Major Emmott was to send to Sir Roydon Garth would receive apparent condemnation from her reticence with regard to the author as well as from her mention of him.

It seemed a cold letter when it was finished and locked away safely out of reach of Sabina's prying eyes, to be posted when an opportunity arose; and there was very little to tell the lonely lover at the mines of the soft tender light that was in his sweetheart's eyes as she wrote the matter-of-fact sentences, of the passionate kisses which she pressed upon the inanimate sheet that was before long to be in her lover's hands. It was a thousand pities that the paper could not speak, that Roy could not know!

When the letter was put away, Lilac still sat in the little cabin, the tender light still in her eyes as she thought of the man to whom she had given her whole heart.

She sighed as she roused herself from the reverie into which the thought of her lover had plunged her, and took up her book again to go and read on the sunny deck. She smiled pleasantly, however, when she met Mark Mowbray, who had been waiting about at the top of the companion on the chance of seeing her, and whose eager face flushed with pleasure at her greeting. He could dispense with the friendship of the Emmotts if his ideal woman did not join in their conspiracy to give him the cold shoulder.

"I am afraid I have offended your friends," he said, as he turned to walk by her side along the deck. "I found it necessary to inform the Major that Miss Emmott had invented the fiction of an old asquaintanceship between yourself and me, and they both seemed equally angry."

"I am sorry for that," said Lilac, with the candid friendliness that had done so much to make Mowbray her lover. "Perhaps the Major will wish me not to know you; and I was looking forward very much to having chats with an author."

"But surely you are not bound to do everything that Major Emmott requires, Miss Marvel?" he pleaded. "You are not even his daughter."

"No; but I have been placed in his charge," answered Lilac thoughtfully. "I cannot act in direct opposition to his wishes. I should be very sorry indeed not to remain friendly with you, Mr. Mowbray; but, if Major Emmott insists that our acquaintance should cease, I am afraid that I ought to obey him. It seems absurd to me that we canot be acquainted even without an introduction, since we are fellow-passengers; but I know so little of the usages of English society that I should not think of acting in opposition to the Major."

"Won't you accept my version of the usages of society?"

Lilac smiled and shook her head.

"I am in Major Emmott's charge Mr. Mowbray."

"And if he tells you to 'cut' me, you will do so?"

"I am very sorry, but I am afraid I must."

"And unless the Major distinctly begs you not to speak to me, you will allow our friendship to continue?"

"I shall be only too pleased."

"Well, if you 'cut' me, I may take it that you yourself do not really object to my company?"

"Certainly."

"Let us make the best use, then, of the talk that may be our last," he said, taking her to his bamboo chair, and leaning against the taffrail. "See how your august guardian surveys us from his seat by the deck house! I am afraid that he will put a veto on our conversation."

"I am afraid so," said Lilac, little dreaming of the encouragement that her companion drew from her tone. For the novelist little guessed that Lilac was thinking at that moment of her lover, and regretting for his sake chiefly the threatened check to her conversation with a polished man of the world.

"She may be engaged," said Mark to himself; "but I do not think it is a love match;" and his hopes of saving his ideal woman from giving her thoughts to a man who was unworthy of them rose considerably. He debated himself to try to discover exactly how far his conjecture was true. "You spoke of being placed in Major Emmott's charge: Was that by your parents?"

"No; my parents are both dead," said Lilac, her beautiful eyes clouding. "Major Emmott is a friend of—" Lilac paused for a moment hesitatingly, and then went on—"of Sir Roydon Garth, to whom I am engaged."

The novelist nodded.

"Major Emmott mentioned your engagement. I was wondering whether you would allow me to make a newspaper paragraph out of it as soon as we reach London. I am a newspaperman, you know, as well as a writer of fiction, and people are so interested in these marriages between American ladies and our aristocracy!"

Lilac looked positively frightened.

"Oh, I would rather you would say nothing about my engagement in the newspapers!" she cried in alarm. "I have special reasons for wishing to keep it private. In fact, it is not exactly—well, it is a provisional engagement."

She was so horrified at the idea of the threatened publicity, which would tend to make Roy think their marriage more of a necessity than ever, that she scarcely knew what she was saying. Mark Mowbray smiled to himself. This barrier, which had threatened to block his chances, did not seem to be so very insuperable after all. Sir Roydon Garth had evidently been careful not to commit himself too far, and, while he had firmly impressed the girl with the idea that she was to be his wife, had not bound himself by a direct promise. His hopes rose accordingly, and he assured himself that by the end of the week he would have persuaded his ideal woman to give up all thoughts of the man to whom she considered herself in some way bound.

The first thing was to implant in her mind a doubt of the Baronet's sincerity, which he commenced to do at once.

"I was sorry when I heard that you were engaged to an Englishman," he began. "I have been identifying you so completely with Sina, the heroine of my little story, and it seems to me as if you were following in her footsteps. I should not like your heart to be broken like Sina's."

Lilac smiled and reddened.

"You need not have the least fear of that, Mr. Mowbray," she said, and hastened to ask him a question about his tales, which showed him that the subject of her engagement was one of which she did not wish for his advice or sympathy.

He dropped the subject at once, and contented himself with talking interestingly about his profession, on which Lilac would willingly have heard him discourse all day.

When at last she thought it prudent to rejoin the Emmotts, she expected to meet with a rebuke from the Major, and she felt quite certain that he would beg her not to speak to the novelist again; but, to her surprise, the old soldier never mentioned Mark Mowbray's name, he only talked in his most conventional and instructive manner about an article she had been reading in one of the reviews.

She had been fearing that all conversation would have to cease with a man who had been introduced to them in an unorthodox manner, and the fact that Mowbray was not mentioned surprised her. She did not know that she was to be left entirely to herself, so that the indictment against her which the Major intended to send to her lover might appear all the blacker.

After delivering his discourse on "The Needs of Our Navy," the Major retired to write the first part of his report to Sir Roydon while his indignation was at its strongest.

Sabina watched him until he had disappeared from the deck, and then walked across to where Mark Mowbray was reclining lazily in his bamboo deck-chair, thinking of Lilac. She held out her hand.

"I have come to ask you to forgive me," she said quite pathetically. "I felt so mean and horrid when papa made me pass you without the least sign of recognition; but he is so very severe, and I do not know what would have happened if I had given you even the ghost of a smile! As it is, I am afraid to speak to you, for fear of papa's coming back and seeing me. You see it was a fatal mistake to tell him that you were not an old acquaintance of Miss Marvel's. He feels as if he had been tricked into an acquaintance with you. That is why he will not speak or allow me to do so. Lilac is lucky—she is her own mistress. And you told papa that you were a journalist. He hates journalists! Isn't it too bad? I thought we should be such good friends; and now we shall never be able to speak except when papa is out of the way. Would you mind moving your chair round to the other side of the deck-house, so that I can see him before he sees me when he comes on deck again?" She ran on in her chattering way, twisting her head about in bird-like fashion the while, so as to watch the steps down which she had seen her father disappear.

The novelist rose good-naturedly and moved his chair to the desired spot, then he handed Sabina to the seat and leaned against the deck-house to talk to her. He was always glad to chat with a pretty woman, and Miss Emmott interested him as a type of the flirt. Besides, he was anxious to find out all he could about this baronet who was "provisionally" engaged to Lilac Marvel. He entered upon the subject almost at once, without even waiting to find out why Sabina did not reproach him for not supporting her fiction about his previous acquaintance with Lilac.

"I think Sir Roydon Garth is a lucky man," he said; and Sabina knitted her brows.

"Who has told you about him? Lilac?

"No—your father; Miss Marvel does not seem over-inclined to admit the engagement," he said. "It is not a real engagement—is it?"

Sabina's bead-like eyes brightened. There would be very little chance of getting up anything approaching a flirtation between the novelist and Lilac to be reported to Sir Roydon if Mark Mowbray understood all about the engagement. She was angry with her father for having spoken of it at all. Now she gladly availed herself of the opening which Mowbray's own words had given her of minimising the effect of the news.

"Poor Lilac! I am so sorry about her!" she said. "I do wish that some really nice man would marry her and save her from her infatuation for Sir Roydon Garth!"

"He is not a nice man, then?"

"Well,—this is a great secret, mind!—I do not think he is quite in earnest. It would be so nice, would it not, if, when he throws poor Lilac over—as I am very much afraid that he wishes to do—she could discover that she was not really in love with him, but with somebody else?"

As she spoke she gave the novelist a meaning look. Mark made no pretence of misunderstanding her.

"I will admit candidly," he said, that I have been much struck by Miss Marvel's beauty and sweetness, and would do anything to make her happy. You will help me?"

"With all my heart!"

Miss Emmott clasped his hand effusively. It was galling to her to find that Lilac's charms had more attraction for the man than her own; but it was convenient for her plot; and, after all, it was scarcely worth while flirting with a mere journalist, compartively penniless, no doubt, whatever his personal attractions were. She sighed a little, however, as she looked at his handsome face, and wished that he was a baronet or a wealthy man, and wondered whether she would be able to captivate him if he were, instead of encouraging his passion for Lilac. She was possibly aware, too, that, by acting as she did, she was raising herself in his opinion.

"She is an unselfish little thing, after all," said Mark Mowbray to himself; "and I should have thought her very pretty if I had not seen my ideal woman."

Quick Repartee.

It is reported of Mr. Wesley that on one occasion, when he was crossing the Atlantic, two frivolous young fellows came up to him one day with solemn faces, exclaiming:

"Oh, Mr. Wesley, the devil is dead!"

Putting his hands on their shoulders and looking equally solemn, the celebrated minister exclaimed:

"My poor fatherless children, what will you do?"

Mr. Spurgeon was quick at repartees. After Mr. Charlesworth left the Congregationalists and joined the Baptists, some one said to him in Mr. Spurgeon's hearing:

"So you have changed your views, Mr. Charlesworth?"

"Oh, no," said Mr. Spurgeon, "he has not! He has only cleaned his windows."

Lord Palmerston and Bishop Wilberforce were staying at a country house, and when Sunday came round, Lord Palmerston offered the bishop a lift to church. The bishop declined and proceeded on foot, but was overtaken by rain. When Lord P. passed in his carriage, he mockingly said:

"How blessed is he who ne'er consents by ill advice to walk!"

To which the bishop promptly answered:

"Nor stands in sinners' ways, nor sits where men profanely talk."

In making arrangements for the appearance of the "Hogan's Alley" Company, which will be seen at Music Hall tomorrow night, Manager Maze Edwards desires it to be understood that this company is the original one and headed by "Ireland's Kings," Gilmore & Leonard, who will present the latest and last edition of the ever popular comedy, many new and funny situations having been added since last season, intermingled with all the latest songs, musical selections, etc. This company is too well-known to dwell upon its merit, suffice it to say that new faces, pretty girls, great comedians, and all that goes with farce comedy to make it succeseful has not been neglected. The company includes a score of the best people especially engaged for this production, which promises to eclipse any former attempts, among which can be found the names of such mirth-provokers as Mazie King, Mina Shirley, Helen Buel, Amie Mackie, Marion Bogart, Madeline Burdette, Adelaide LeVier, Lillie Bartow, George Leslie, Snyder and Buckley, Eddie O'Dell, Joseph J. Conlan, Clifford W. Meech, Lem Towers, Master George Mack and others.

The presentation of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Iolanthe," which, Monday night, commenced the second week of the season of opera in English at the American Theatre, in New York, was characterized by the general excellence to which patrons of the Castle Square Opera Company have long been accustomed. Theatre-goers who admire decency, love good music, appreciate literary skill, and know wherein the essence of true comedy lies, will find in this delightful witty and keenly satirical work, an entertainment greatly to their liking. In the long series of comic operas in which these gifted men exhibited their extraordinary collaberation, there is none which has more charm than "Iolanthe." It is rare mixture of fact and fancy, the fluency and facility of the rhymes, and the refinement and humor of the score substantiate its claim to be considered the gem of the Gilbert & Sullivan operas. Its interpretation at the hands of the clever members of the Castle Square Opera Company was from all points of view commendably excellent. Lizzie Macnichol, William G. Stewart, Raymond Mitchcock and Joseph F. Sheehan were conspicuously competent, adding other well-drawn sketches to their well-filled gallery of stage portraits. Harry L. Chase, who is well-known to amusement seekers in Plainfield, made his first appearance with the company in "Boccaccio," scored heavily in the difficult role of Mountararat.

A Divided Family.

Five dwarfs and five full grown and well developed people constitute the family of George Washington Washer, who resides at Three Fork, Warren county, Kentucky. The family of ten members is equally divided in size, the father and four children being dwarffs and the mother and four children being of the regulation size and weight. George W. Washer, the father and husband, is about three and one-half or four feet high, and will weigh something like 100 pounds. While his arms and legs are no longer than those of a well grown boy of eight years, he has the head and body of a full grown man. All of the dwarf children take after their father. The mother and the other four children have no peculiarities in personal appearance. All of the family are bright and intelligent, are well educated and no better family of citizens reside in that county than that of the Washers. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

CITY OF PLAINFIELD.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a warrant issued by George W. DeMeza, Esq., City Judge of the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union, to make the unpaid taxes assessed on lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate in the said City of Plainfield, in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-six, the subscriber, the officer nominated and appointed by the Common Council for that purpose, will on the 31st day of August next at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon at the Collector's office, 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, sell the land, tenements, hereditaments and real estate hereunder described, or any part thereof, at public vendue, for the shortest term for which any person or persons will agree to take the same and pay such taxes, together with the interest thereon, and all costs, fees, charges and expenses.

The above sale stands adjourned until Wednesday, the 28th day of September next, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon, at the Collector's office, 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield aforsaid.

Dated Sept. 14th, 1898.

PADDY PLAYED WELL AND LONG.

Shuts Out the Other Stars and Gives the Entire Concert.

I dare say you have heard of Paderewski's love for his own particular piano and his absorption therein. He gave proof of his passion in rather a realistic fashion one evening, when young Mr. Alfred Harmsworth, the proprietor of the London Daily Mail and thirty odd other papers, gave an "at home" in his beautiful house in Berkeley square, to which all London west of Bond street seemed to try and seek admission.

There was a long list of artists who had been engaged at "enormous expense," as the bills say, and among these were Paderewski, Melba, Plancon, Johannes Wolff, Eames, etc., all of whom came with their checks already in their pockets. Paderewski got five hundred pounds in advance and brought his own piano; Melba received three hundred pounds, for which she was to sing three songs, and the others had sums varying from one hundred to two hundred and fifty pounds, according to their importance. Early in the evening there was a tremendous crush, particularly in the neighborhood of the dining room. Nothing seemed to serve to thin the crowd. The music was advertised to begin at 11.30, but owing to the frightful crush, the host decided to turn on the musicians an hour earlier.

So they approached M. Paderewski and asked him if he would begin the concert. Certainly he would, and there was an immediate rush for the drawing room. For fifteen minutes the pianist held the audience spellbound with his wonderful music. He played anything and everything and seemed absolutely lost in the chords and rhapsodies of his instrument. Half an hour more and Paderewski was still playing. The audience began to thin out and seek the neighborhood of the supper room again. Harmsworth commenced to wring his hands in despair, and Melba, who was standing by, with her music in her hand, ready to sing, began to scowl and look glum. No one dared stop Paderewski. Half past 11 and he was still playing. Twelve o'clock, and the great master was fairly revelling in a whirlwind of music, while Melba, with her notes in her hand, Wolff, with his fiddle under his arm, and Plancon, with a frown on his face, stood behind the young Napoleon of journalism and cursed between their teeth. Paderewski was having a grand time of it.

Finally, at half past 12, after two hours of fun (for him), he stopped, gave a grand flourish of his right arm, ran his fingers through his hair, and walked out of the room with a most gracious smile on his face. He did not know that he had kept anyone waiting. He had forgotten his very existence, while Melba and the others fumed and fretted their tempers away. There were exactly eighteen people in the room when Melba sang her one and only song of the evening, and then swept out of the house in a tower of indignation. The others did not get a look-in at all.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

HOW FAR ONE NEWSPAPER WENT.

"Papa" Cobb, the old Harvard athlete, who returned from Dawson on the Roanoke with a big bag of gold, told the following story about patriotism for the Stars and Stripes at Dawson:

"One day a man showed up in camp with a single copy of a newspaper containing the first account of Dewey's victory at Manila. This single paper was the first intimation we had of the great things our navy had been doing, and it was sought after more eagerly than gold.

"An enterprising Yankee purchased it for $10, and then hired Tammany hall for the evening. He charged 50 cents and packed the hall. He read the paper to the crowd and after every sentence there was a warwhoop. It made the walls of the building tremble. The success of the venture was so pronounced that he rented the hall for the next night and reaped another harvest. He made $400 off that one newspaper and sold it to a miner who was going into the diggings for $50."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Music an Aid to the Sick.

The theory that music is a sedative to the nerves is no new one, and has been fairly well tested. Mr. Gladstone during the many weeks of acute neuralgia which ushered in the last phase of his fatal illness found great relief in music. Mr. Herbert Spencer is said to have had recourse to music for the relief of nervous disturbance; and the empress of Austria is reported to have been cured of neuralgia by certain strains of sound repeated at frequent intervals. Many other illustrious sufferers have had their pain charmed away by the same sweet medicine. The "music cure" had considerable vogue some time ago in Germany, and a special hospital for its systematic application was established in Munich.

MANY VIEWED FAIR DESPITE THE RAIN.

Somerset County Fair Closed at Somerville Yesterday.

IT WAS POLITICIANS' DAY.

PEOPLE AND FAST HORSES THE PRINCIPAL ATTRACTIONS.

The Exhibit of Country Products Was Not Large—Plenty of Fakirs Were There—Wednesday Was the Day For the School Children—Much Interest Shown in the Races—The Winners.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, September 16.—Amid a most inglorious drizzle, the Somerset county fair came to an end yesterday afternoon after three days of excitement. But the rain didn't make any difference, the people came just the same. They traveled towards Somerville from miles around in every imaginable sort of conveyance and just because there happened to be a little rain falling they did not stay at home but came to attend the fair and see all the wonders that their imagination had pictured ever since the last one.

There isn't anything like a real county fair if you search the world over. It is something distinct in itself. The good folks of Somerset county look upon it as an event of the year, a formidable rival of Christmas and Fourth of July. The public schools in the county all close and the children are given tickets to go and learn what wonders can be produced in good old Somerset.

Now there are county fairs and there are county fairs. Those who came to Somerville with the idea of seeing mammoth pumpkins and tomatoes of giant size on exhibition and prize cattle like those in picture books in long rows, were grievously disappointed. The exhibition of the work done in various lines was not, it must be admitted, particularly remarkable. Neither was the showing of live stock and vehicles. There was a goodly number of side shows, offering a great variety of kinds of entertainment.

The joy in throwing the baseball at the head of a negro was somewhat modified by the fact that he was placed in the centre of a rubber curtain about which he could bob so that it was almost impossible to hit him. Then canes were too far apart for the ring-tosser to find much edification. Several enterprising fakirs had a vaudeville show to offer. The programme was positively weird, particularly the "Cuban Dance," which kept the audience in a state of bewilderment to see how it applied to the "Pearl of the Antilles." Then there were a score of other attractions calculated to make the rustic mind wonder how it is that such things be.

Probably the great attraction was the people themselves. They came by the thousand from city and country and vied with each other in trying to get the most enjoyment to the square inch, each in his or her own way. Tuesday was but the gathering day but Wednesday saw the great crowd for all the school children roamed without hindrance and alternating squealed and laughed with joy. Six thousand the committee say were present. Yesterday, they placed the attendance at four thousand, with the remark that it would have been double that had the day been pleasant. Plainfield sent a big quota here both days.

Yesterday was set down for the time when the great politicians were coming. Senator Daly, of Hudson, was expected but then he doesn't like water and there was too much for him yesterday. A prominent figure was Senator Charles A. Reed, who came up with a gathering of other Republicans from North Plainfield. Of course, Somerville turned out a goodly array of its finest in the G. O. P. ranks while Middlesex sent over a healthy delegation.

The politicians were not the only people, however, who attracted universal attraction. Lieutenant Frelinghuysen, of Troop A, was the mark for many looks of admiration from fair faces. Fred Shaw, of the gallant Seventy-first, a hero of the charge up San Juan hill, was nearly torn to shreds by his friends in their efforts to express their delight at seeing him out once more. Then there was a little gathering of other returned heroes, some of whom had seen service.

Then there were the trotting races that kept the attention of a goodly part of the visitors for the afternoon. They furnished exciting finishes and plenty of sport. There was a great rush for the track at the beginning of MIND WAS NOT RIGHT.

FRIENDS OF LATE JUDGE M'CORMICK TELL BISHOP WIGGER SO.

As a Result the Rites of the Catholic Church Were Used at the Funeral This Morning—Interment in Newark.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Elizabeth, September 16. — The funeral of former Judge McCormick was held this morning. Interment was made in Newark in the cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre. The funeral services were held at St. Mary's church at 10 o'clock, the rector, Father Francis O'Neill celebrating a requiem mass. The pall-bearers were Senator Smith, John J. Quinlan, of New York; United States District Attorney J. Kearny Rice, of New Brunswick; Edward Farrell, of New York; Robert A. Lawrie, Edward H. Benners, Joseph B. Turner and Richard T. Potts, of Elizabeth.

During the mass Father O'Neill informed the people that sufficient evidence was submitted to Bishop Wigger to convince him that the dead man was not in his right mind; therefore the Bishop had permitted burial with the rites of the church. If there was no doubt of his sanity such burial would have been denied.

A lot of evidence was submitted to Bishop Wigger yesterday to prove the insanity of the former judge at the time when he made away with himself. Several physicians made statements, and one an affidavit that Mr. McCormick had been in perfect mental health for some time before his death. Drs. Mraviag, Livingood and Dolan asserted that the dead man was not in his right mind and a number of business men, some of whom had business relations with him, made statements that recently they found him abstracted and indifferent, quite changed from the alert and careful business man he had been.

CHAPLAIN JONES' TALK.

A SMALL AUDIENCE IN THE CASINO TO HEAR OF NAVAL VICTORIES.

The Chaplain of the Texas Praises the "Hodoo" of the Ship—Many Glorious Things Were the Result of the War.

If the people of the United States had evidenced the same amount of interest in the trouble between this country and Spain that the people of Plainfield displayed in the lecture given in the Casino last evening by Chaplain Henry Jones, of the Battleship Texas, there is no doubt but what today this country would be a victim instead of a victor. There was a very small attendance. The lecture was one of great merit and intense interest, coming as it did from a man who was an eye-witness to many exciting scenes in the late war.

When Chaplain Jones, accompanied by Councilman F. H. Andrews, made their appearance on the stage there was loud burst of applause. Mr. Andrews introduced the speaker of the evening with a few appropriate words, after which Chaplain Jones talked somewhat as follows:

"I am glad to see so many out. I stand before you, I presume, a conceited man. Not because I am here, but because I am a chaplain in the United States Navy. I always was proud of my office. I am not proud simply because I am chaplain of the men, but for the reason that I am on the Texas. The newspapers of this country have spent thousands of dollars in telling all about her faults. There is only one thing that they said was true, and that was that she is a 'hodoo.' She has proved herself a 'hodoo' to the Spanish navy."

Chaplain Jones related in detail what happened from that time until after the fight at Santiago. He told in a graphic manner about the Merrimac incident and of the fight at Santiago and how the Spanish ships were one after the other destroyed. He paid a great tribute to Captain Phillips, of the Texas, and said that he was a man that believed more in his God than he did in his guns. He said that while the sailors all had sympathy for Cuba, with them it was the Maine first that they wanted to revenge, and they did so.

In conclusion he said that there were several things about the war for which he thanked God, including a closer union between all churches, pastors and priests; that it had brought out character in the army and navy, a union of the blue and the gray; that women, wealthy women, were found to be beside the sick soldier, and that wherever the American flag went it proved to be a forerunner of the Gospel of Christ.

TROLLEY IN WESTFIELD.

A FRANCHISE GRANTED TO ELIZABETH AND WESTFIELD COMPANY.

Chairman Embree Opposed Favorable Action, But He Was Unable to Defeat It—Another Route to be Asked For.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 16—At the meeting of the Township Committee held last evening a franchise was granted to the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railroad Company to build and maintain a trolley line through the following streets and highways of Westfield township: North avenue from Clark to Broad street, Broad street to Westfield avenue, through Westfield avenue to North avenue to Summit avenue, through Summit avenue to Grove street to private property, through this to Spruce street to Garwood and on Center street toward Rahway to the township line.

The matter caused a great deal of discussion before it finally came up for its second reading, as Chairman Embree was much opposed to the granting of it. As Clerk Irving I. Ross was absent on account of illness, Mr. Embree wanted the matter postponed until Mr. Ross was present with the minutes of the previous meeting, but both Committeemen Harden and Dennis were in favor of having the matter settled and they carried the motion that the franchise be placed on its second reading and afterward on its third and final reading. Chairman Embree voted against and stated that he wished it known that he was opposed to the granting of it.

A. A. Gaddis, of the trolley company, stated that he would be before the committee again at an early date to ask for a franchise on Mountain avenue which will have to be secured for the cross-town line between Summit and Rahway.

INSPECTION AND DRILL.

Cypress Commandery Preparing To Make a Spectacular Appearance.

The members of the Cypress Commandery, Knights Templar, are planning for a grand inspection and drill to which their friends are to be invited. These colored Knights have been drilling hard for some time, and now the company is in excellent form. The fine showing they made at New Haven has decided the members in favor of the plan which will give their townsfolk a chance to see what they can do. It is now proposed to hold the inspection and drill at the Crescent Rink some evening about the first of October. Invitations will be issued and distributed among their friends and families of the members. While the date has not yet been fixed, it is quite certain that the affair will be held.

Lost Her Watch.

Miss Flynn, of West Fourth street, a sister to Roundsman Flynn of the police force, lost a silver watch Wednesday night in front of a house on Central avenue. As she was passing the house she caught her foot in an obstruction and stumbled. This must have thrown the watch from its fastening on her dress, for when she had gone a short distance she noticed that it was gone. A careful search, in which she was aided by Officer Cash, failed to reveal its hiding place, and it is thought that some passer-by saw it before Miss Flynn had noticed its loss, and picked it up.

Members of Boards of Registry.

The following persons have been appointed members of the Somerset County Registry Boards for the borough and township: Borough, Asa D. Pope, W. W. Rowley, Edgar Schenck, John A. Viewed E. E. Marshall's Remains.

A committee from Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., composed of Vincent W. Nash, Charles Ulrich and Henry Nischwitz, went to Jersey City yesterday to view the body of E. E. Marshall, which was lying in the Erie depot. This was done so that Mrs. Marshall could get her insurance.

The Flag Presentation.

Somerset Council, 109, Jr. O. U. A. M., has secured Rev. Mr. Woodruff, pastor of the Scotch Plains M. E. church, to present their American flag to the Board of Education of the borough, next Tuesday morning. President McCutchen, of the Board, will receive the emblem.

Bible Class to Commence Again.

Rev. D. M. Stearns will reopen his union Bible class in the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, October 10th. Dr. Stearns, who has been doing missionary work in South Africa all summer, sails from Liverpool for New York September 21st.

HE IS READY TO RID BOROUGH OF SKUNKS.

A Peculiar Specialty of a Pennsylvania Man.

CLAIMS TO BE AN EXPERT.

SAYS HE HAS HANDLED THE "VARMINTS" IN THE PAST.

Mayor Wilson Receives a Letter From Mr. Duff, Whose Picturesque Language is Very Amusing—Asks Some Very Difficult Questions—Says He Can Make Frisbie's Sides Sore With Laughter.

Just at present the borough is subjected to a plague of skunks, and the troublesome animals have given residents no end of trouble. A few days ago The Daily Press related the facts in the case and it so happened that a man, who claims to be an authority on skunks, who resides at Bristol, Pa., saw the article. He sat right down and wrote a letter to Mayor Wilson and this is what he has to say:

Bristol, Pa.,
September 13th, 1898.

Dear Sir:—I was reading a peace in the "Press" today about your "Polcats" so I thought I would write and see what you would give me for too clear the place out as near as I could or, do it for so much a peace. If you will let me know if they come out in the day time or night for I have see them out in the day. I would like to know if they stay alltogether or are schaterd.

This is not my first time to catch "Polcats" for we have them under our cowbarn, one week this summer we killed five one of these I picked it up by the back and took it too the house to raise but he died. I can take a stick and poke it at them so anybody can pick them up.

I would like to know how far it is from Burlington to Plainfield and in what direction.

If Dogcatcher Frisbie comes with me I would make that darkey laugh till his sides was sore.

Yours Truly,
Wallace B. Duff,
Bristol, Pa.

Box 105 write soon, please.

It can safely be said that Mayor Wilson has no desire to make arrangements with anyone to clear the borough of "Polcats," and the writer of the above letter would be of the same opinion if he should meet His Honor. There is yet time for the Mayor to hear from other parts of the country regarding this plague of skunks, and if the residents have any trouble they will be able to secure a sufficient number of people to take the animals away.

Notwithstanding the above, it must be said that, with all the many little things that find their way to the office of His Honor to annoy and bother, he certainly displays a great amount of charity towards all those who attempt to trouble the chief executive of the borough.

WATSON AT IT AGAIN.

NOW ARRESTED FOR SELLING LIQUOR ILLEGALLY IN MIDDLESEX COUNTY.

Claims That His Place is the Home of the Middlesex County Club, But That Story Don't Go—Must Answer.

For the 'steenth time Michael Watson, of this city, has been arrested for selling liquor without a license Sundays. For sometime past Watson has been running a place at what is known as "Guinea Egg," which is just over the line into Middlesex county. Yesterday two detectives from Middlesex county came to this city with a warrant for Watson's arrest.

The papers were endorsed by Judge DeMeza, and Captain Grant sent Roundsman Flynn out to serve the papers. Watson was arrested and turned over to the Middlesex county detectives, who in turn arraigned him before a justice of the peace in that county. The alleged offender was held in $200 to appear before the next Grand Jury at New Brunswick.

Watson claims that he is not interested in the place, but that it is rented by him to the Middlesex County Club.

A. Y. M. C. A. Talk Postponed.

Private Fred C. Kuehnle, of Company D, Seventy-first N. Y. Volunteers, who was to speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday, had to postpone his talk until October 2d on account of an engagement to address a meeting in the Marble Collegiate church, of New York, this coming Sunday.

Miss Moss, superintendent of Muhlenberg Hospital, who has been away enjoying her annual vacation, will return to her duties next Saturday. Next Monday Miss Gould, the last of the pupil-nurses, will go on her vacation. She will spend it in Canada.

Adventist Meetings.

At the tent tonight, corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue, the subject of discourse will be "The Sin Against the Holy Ghost." Sabbath services will be held in the Christian church, on Grove street, tomorrow at 3 o'clock. All are welcome.

BOARD CONSIDERS RULES

THEY ARE TO REGULATE COUNTY TROLLEY SYSTEM.

Minor Changes Were Needed and the Matter was Referred Back to Committee of Freeholders—Keron Appointed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, September 16—The contract between the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders and the Elizabeth Horse Railway Company, regarding the county trolley road and the method of controling it, has not yet been signed. The county road committee was authorized to prepare such a document at the last meeting, and an adjourned meeting of the Board was held yesterday afternoon to receive it.

Of course, there was a lengthy discussion, and the members expressed their opinions on the subject. In general the rules and regulations of the county trolley system, as proposed, were satisfactory. There were a few minor changes that the members favored and so the contract was referred back to the committee to be amended along the lines suggested by other Freeholders.

The Board also authorized the employment of Mr. Keron, of Elizabeth, to treat with the property owners in Elizabeth, Roselle and Union with a view to purchase the necessary thirty-four feet on the side of the present county road to make the proposed boulevard.

The members of the Board were all present with the exception of two. Both Plainfield members were there.

H. C. M'VOY SURPRISED.

Went Home Last Night to Find Unexpected Visit of Friends.

Herbert C. McVoy, of Sandford avenue, was a much surprised young man last evening when he went home and found a party of his relatives and friends present. They had come to the house upon the invitation of Mrs. McVoy, who had arranged the affair in honor of her husband's birthday anniversary. The event does not occur until tomorrow, but Mrs. McVoy planned the surprise in advance to evade suspicion. The evening was passed in dancing and in having a good social time. During the evening supper was served by the hostess and the event was complete in every particular.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Doud, Mr. and Mrs. James Blair, Miss Mattie Merrill, Miss Sheppard, Percy McVoy, Raymond McVoy, George McVoy, Wm. Doud, John Doud, Miss Florence Dodge, Miss May Hughes and several others.

BOYS' CLUB OPEN.

Enrollment of the Members for the Coming Winter Has Commenced.

An informal opening of the Boys' Club for the fall and winter months took place last evening and was quite successful. There was a large attendance of boys who seemed to be pleased to know that the rooms will be open again. The chief object of last night's meeting was to begin the enrollment and to learn just who intend to continue during the coming year as members.

A feature of the opening was the exhibition of the work accomplished by the boys during the past year. The work is certainly very creditable to the boys who have worked hard under the direction of Superintendent Saugstad. In the future Mr. Saugstad will spend his evenings at the clubhouse and during the day will teach in his particular line in the Montclair Public School. Last evening there were a large number of visitors present who fully enjoyed the opening exercises.

BADGER BOYS ON A FURLOUGH.

Frank Fulton and Edward Tomlinson, of the Naval Reserves, are home on a few days' furlough. Both young men left the Badger in Boston at 5 o'clock last night, and must report for duty again Sunday morning. Both are looking exceedingly well, and the trip south has done them good.

They say that good health has prevailed among all the boys on board the Badger, that they have been well fed, well housed and clothed, and that they never experienced more than 86 degrees of heat while lying off Havana harbor. Fulton and Tomlinson are trying to find time enough to visit all their friends, and have to repeat over and over again their experiences during the past few months.

Special Council Meeting.

There will be a special meeting of the City Council this evening to consider the trolley ordinance.

—Special services will be held at the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church tonight.

PITNEY HAS WITHDRAWN

VOORHEES NOW HAS NO OPPOSITION FOR THE NOMINATION.

He Proclaims That He Wants Harmony in the Republican Ranks—He Will Not Run for Congress, Either.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Morristown, September 16.—Congressman Mahlon H. Pitney has withdrawn from the contest for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination. Mr. Pitney's statement, which he sent out from his home, is self explanatory. He says:

"In my brief, but active canvass, I have received most gratifying support from many quarters and appreciate very highly the efforts of my numerous friends. I now retire of my own motion in the interest of party harmony. When I entered the contest, the names of Acting-Governor Voorhees, Hon. Franklin Murphy and Judge Fort, as well as my own, were before the people for their consideration. Since then Mr. Murphy and Judge Fort have both stated that they do not wish to be considered as candidates, and I am now confronted with the fact that my candidacy alone stands in the way of the unanimous nomination of Mr. Voorhees.

"While I am assured that a large number of the delegates would be favorable to me, yet, upon recent advices from my friends in different parts of the State, I am convinced that I cannot reasonably expect to secure the required majority of the convention. Under these circumstances, I feel that it is not fair to the party, nor to my friends, for me to permit them longer to continue the contest in my behalf.

"For these reasons, and because of the great importance of promoting party harmony in the approaching campaign, I have written to Governor Voorhees announcing my withdrawal and tendering to him as the choice of the party, my cordial support."

CAN'T GO TO SCHOOL.

SORRY PREDICAMENT OF CHILDREN NEAR SCOTCH PLAINS.

North Plainfield Township Failed To Renew Contract With Scotch Plains Authorities So They Were Rejected.

Through the carelessness of the Board of Education of North Plainfield township there are about ten scholars residing in the northern part of the township that have been left unprovided for so far as attending school is concerned. These scholars have during past years attended the public school at Scotch Plains through an agreement made by the school authorities and the Board of North Plainfield township.

Last Monday the scholars went to the Scotch Plains school as usual and were much surprised when Superintendent John R. Morey told them that they could not attend the school until an agreement was made with the Township Board of Education.

Notwithstanding the fact that the above Board has been notified several times that the agreement to pay so much per scholar must be renewed this year, no attention has been paid to the matter, and it now looks as though the ten scholars will be deprived of schooling for some time.

The scholars live too far away to attend the North Plainfield township school, and it is only fair that arrangements be made to have them go to the Scotch Plains school. The parents of the scholars feel quite indignant regarding the matter and think that the members of the Board of Education have certainly been very careless to let the matter go by without attention. No one could expect the scholars to walk several miles to the other school when they live so near the Scotch Plains school, which is equally as good as the other school.

Superintendent Morey was very sorry to turn the scholars away but it was the only thing left for him to do. He has notified the board that they must rewew the contract if the scholars were to attend the school, and hearing nothing from them, took it for granted that they did not care to renew the contract.

Unless something is done very soon it is quite likely that the parents of the scholars will take the matter in hand and bring the members of their School Board to account for negligence. Every day that is now lost means much to the scholars for they will have just that much more to make up in studies.

The Scotch Plains school officials would like to have the agreement renewed for it brings quite a sum of money into their treasury and is a help in meeting expenses of an incidental nature. They have, however, made every effort to get the North Plainfield people to act, but thus far have failed.

FAMILY WOES HEARD IN A JUSTICE'S COURT.

And Incidentally a Young Law Clerk is Called Down.

WILLIE SWEENEY ACTIVE.

JUSTICE MOSHER FINDS THE YOUTH TOO DICTATORIAL.

Oscar Vaughn's Prospective Father-in-law Furnishes a Bond to Keep the Peace While Vaughn's Bondsman Wants to be Released—Papers Have Been Filed in Elizabeth and an Appeal Will be Made.

Instead of the sensational hearing that was expected to be accorded John H. Stewart this morning, in Justice Mosher's court, in which the gaping public were to be satiated with the various details that go to make the domestic life of Stewart and his family unhappy, because their daughter, Hattie, clings with lover-like fidelity to Oscar Vaughn, an interesting little legal squabble occurred, in which Law Student William Sweeney received a bad "call down" from the Justice.

It was a morning of complications, and they arose on every side. Stewart was arrested yesterday on complaint of Vaughn who charged him with following him around and threatening his life. His hearing was set down for 10 o'clock this morning, when it was expected that a great deal of family history would be revealed, but instead William G. DeMeza, Stewart's counsel, refused to demand a hearing, and asked that Stewart be held in bail to keep the peace, all because, he said, Sweeney represented Vaughn, and would appear in court as his counsel. Mr. DeMeza refused to enter the legal arena with a boy as his opponent.

Vaughn and Stewart paid no attention to each other in court, and Stewart did not present the bloodthirsty appearance that Vaughn's description might lead one to expect. Hattie, too, was there, and she and Oscar exchanged sly glances. The wife, who takes Vaughn's part in the trouble, and is opposed by her husband, sat by Hattie's side, but had nothing to say.

Law Student Sweeney moved about among the spectators with a great deal of haughtiness. That he had won the case was very evident to him. He demanded that "His Honor make the bail bond as high as possible," and set the figure at $500. This being a matter that concerned the Justice alone he made it $100, a trifle less. Stewart, in the bond, promises to keep the peace for six months and J. Fred MacDonald went his security. Sweeney inquired whether Mr. MacDonald was a freeholder or not, but the question was overlooked.

The fun occurred after these preliminary matters had been transacted. Newton B. Smalley, of Somerset street, had a part to play. When Vaughn was arrested last April at Stewart's instigation, charging him with threatening his life, etc., Vaughn was held in $50 bonds to keep the peace. Mr. Smalley signed the bond, but this morning wanted to be released.

When Stewart's affair was finished Mr. Smalley appeared to make his request. Sweeney suspected that something was in the wind, but could not learn what it was until Mr. Smalley came in. Then he understood, and beckoning to Vaughn whispered a few words to him. Vaughn slipped out of the court room, and was part way down stairs on his way to liberty when Mr. DeMeza missed him, and realizing that the man was escaping sent Constable Rockafellow after him and he was brought back.

The failure of his plans provoked Sweeney and he attempted to dictate to the court his opinion of the proceedings. Justice Mosher ordered him to keep silent and refused to recognize him as counsel in this new complication, but Sweeney persisted in talking until he got through.

"You've no right to call me down this way," remarked the youthful aspirant.

"Well, I do call you down," was Justice Mosher's reply. "I am Judge here and things must go as I say." Upon this Sweeney wilted.

Upon a request from Lawyer DeMeza, the constable stood guard over Vaugh to keep him in court. Sweeney jumped up from his chair, rushed down to the other end of the room, and with forefinger raised and eyes flashing fire, told Vaughn that if Rockafellow laid hand on him to make a complaint of assault and battery. This caused a general laugh.

But the complications were not over with yet. Upon consulting his books Justice Mosher found that he had sent the bond to Prosecutor English, at Elizabeth, and that therefore he

FROM CUBA'S CAPITAL

Blanco Bitter Against the United States Government.

INTERVIEW WITH GOMEZ

The Captain Gen. in an Interview States His Feelings Plainly. Wanted to Get Chance to Fight the Americans but Was Denied the Privilege. Gomez Thinks Annexation Impossible.

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 16.—For the first time since the peace protocol was signed Captain General Blanco consented yesterday to speak of the war to an American newspaper correspondent. This is what he said:

"I am naturally inclined to be charitable, and am incapable of hating anyone, but I confess to a feeling of deep resentment against the United States, whose conduct toward Spain in declaring war against us, without motive or pretext, just at the time when they were receiving from us the highest marks of our friendship and respect, can never be condemned too severely.

"It ought never to be forgotten that just when the United States were announcing their intention of coming to Cuba to establish a firm government, they were in reality directing hostilities principally against Porto Rico and the Philippines.

"Since the beginning of the war it has always been my heartfelt desire, as commander-in-chief of the army, for the day to arrive when I could match my armed strength against theirs, and die, if necessary, among the ruins of Havana, if fortune were not favorable, but I was unable to realize my hope.

"My government has signed the peace protocol, and her decision must be complied with. Nevertheless, I have an eternal confidence in divine justice, and I have, therefore, hope that this arrogant nation will receive its just deserts, and God knows that the day when this act of national despoilation is accomplished and the Stars and Stripes float from the walls of Havana, that day may perhaps mark the beginning of the decay of the American nation.

"Before it is all over I wish to put myself on record as having no dislike for the army of the United States. On the contrary, I have the highest appreciation of their noble and courageous behavior."

This dispatch is authorized by the censor, which proves the absolute authenticity of the interview.

Interview With Gomez.

Havana, Sept. 16.—A correspondent of the Diario de la Marina has just returned from a trip to the camp of General Gomez, where he spent three days. He had an important interview with the Cuban leader.

General Gomez told him that to shed a single drop of blood during the suspension of hostilities would be a disgraceful act. The Cubans did not desire liberty to form castes, nor to preserve Cuba exclusively for the Cubans. They sought to give the country and all in it the benefit of the most ample liberty, and did not wish to inspire hatred to Spain. They had fought for a form of government.

General Gomez paid a tribute to the valor exhibited by the Spanish soldiers and said that it was an honor to have fought against them. He declared that the policy followed by General Martinez Campos in promising reforms and smoothing asperities and showing clemency did much harm to the insurrection, while the administration of Canovas made a grave mistake in giving the command to General Weyler.

Under no circumstances, he declared, did he believe possible the annexation of Cuba to the United States. He said that Cuba was a country which possessed elements capable of governing themselves without assistance from anyone. The Cubans are grateful for the protection given them by the Americans.

General Gomez believes that the political and economical relations between Cuba and the United States will be for their common advantage. To think the contrary would be to cast reflections upon the good faith of the Americans.

The Nicaragua Canal

Managua, Nicaragua, Sept. 15, via Galveston, Tex., Sept. 16.—Mr. Edward F. Cragin, the Chicago contractor and engineer, is here with Messrs. Edwin Eyer and Frank Washburn of New York city, endeavoring to confer with high officials of the government of Nicaragua with reference to a new contract for the construction of an interoceanic canal.

Mr. Cragin and his associates expect to remain several days.

Emperor William for Forcible Measures

Prenzlau, Prussia, Sept. 16.—Emperor William of Germany arrived here yesterday for the purpose of attending the army manoeuvres. Replying to the burgomaster's address of welcome he said that we lived in serious times, and that revolutionary designs must be forcibly combatted. He also said:

"The necessity for this was shown by the accursed act of a few days ago. Every citizen should support the emperor and his government."

Naval Intelligence Office.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Commander Richardson Clover has been selected by Secretary Long for assignment to the duties of Chief naval intelligence officer, an important office, charged with gathering information concerning the navies of the world and the character of coast fortifications of foreign countries. He succeeds Captain John R. Bartlett, retired, who has conducted the office with great ability during the war.

Many Narrow Escapes.

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 16.—During a test of Cunningham torpedoes in Priest's Cove, near here, yesterday, the experiment schooner Freeman was blown up by an explosion of a projectile and sunk. A dozen men were on board at the time, but all escaped serious injury. Only two or three received slight scratches.

INTENTIONS OF ZOLA.

He Still Seeks a Revision of the Dreyfus Trial.

Paris, Sept. 16.—The Echo de Paris says that M. Zola will return to Paris in October, when he will issue another manifesto on the Dreyfus case.

One of M. Zola's friends said in an interview that just as soon as the reign of justice and human charity was restored in France M. Zola would return to that country and not before, even if it were necessary to continue a life long exile. For the present his absence and silence constitute his reproach and protest.

His pen, at the present moment, like the sword of Damocles, said this friend, is suspended over the heads of all who may seek to murder the truth.

M. Zola, his friend said, had believed in Lieutenant Colonel Henry's guilt all along, and he was also convinced of the guilt of Esterhazy and Lieutenant Colonel du Paty de Clam and of the absolute innocence of Dreyfus. Of these things he has no doubt whatever. He seeks the granting of a revision of the Dreyfus trial and the repatriation of Dreyfus, holding that a new trial will open the doors to fixing each and every responsibility. M. Zola has no intention to relinquish literature or politics.

Pending a revision of the Dreyfus case, M. Zola will maintain absolute secrecy as to his whereabouts.

The Matin says the ministers have definite proof that the secret documents which figured in the original Dreyfus trial were not shown to the accused officer or to his counsel.

General Mercier, who was then minister of war, is held responsible for this.

General Zurlinden, on Monday, the Matin says, submitted to his colleagues in the cabinet council the documents upon which Dreyfus was convicted. There were differences of opinion regarding their authenticity, but all admitted that the papers had not been shown to Dreyfus or his counsel.

Revision of the case would therefore raise the question of General Mercier's responsibility; hence the hesitation of the government in reopening it.

THE WEST INDIAN HURRICANE.

Confirmation of the Report of Heavy Loss of Life.

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 16.—The island of St. Vincent has been swept by a terrible hurricane and an immense amount of damage has been caused by floods and landslides, as well as by the wind. There has also been great loss of life.

The governor of St. Vincent has cabled the governor of Jamaica imploring the latter to send prompt assistance to the sufferers.

The island of St. Lucia has also suffered slightly.

The American weather bureau here locates the storm as passing St. Kitts and going northward.

Further Reports from Barbadoes.

Barbadoes, Sept. 16.—The British ship Loanda, of 1,147 tons, Captain Dodge, from Rio Janeiro, and the American bark Grace Lynwood, of 592 tons, Captain Gilley, from New York for Port Spain, both lying at this port when the recent hurricane arose, were blown out to sea, and have not been heard of since. Further losses have been sustained, principally to coasters.

A CURIOUS CIPHER CODE.

Generally when these cipher messages are found by the officials they have not much difficulty in translating them. Lately, however, the guards in the Kansas City jail encountered some writing in cipher that proved too hard for them and it was a good while before the puzzling messages were made out, and then the key was accidentally discovered. A fellow named Turner, in for forgery, as smart a rogue as ever was behind the bars, invented the puzzle. The writting was on long narrow strips of paper, on the edge of which were letters and parts of letters that apparently had no connection, and from which no words could be formed.

One day the deputy, who was passing the cell of a prisoner, saw him passing a long strip of paper around an octagon lead pencil. He took the paper away and on it were the mysterious scrawls that had worried the keepers. But the deputy got an idea from this, and, going back to the office, he wrapped the strip around an octagon shaped lead pencil, and after several trials adjusted it so that the parts of the letters fitted together and made a sentence, though the writing was very fine. The writer had adopted the simple, but ingenious plan of covering the pencil with paper and had then written along one of the flat sides. On unrolling it the writing was as mystical as a cryptogram, but when put around the Faber as it was originally, it could be easily understood.—Chicago Journal.

Effect of Vibration Under Water.

"Some years ago," says a naturalist, "I made a practical experiment by diving to a depth of some seven or eight feet, and remaining below while a party of friends upon the bank shouted as loudly as they could. Not a sound was audible. Then I went below again, when a blow was struck upon the surface of the water with a walking stick. The effect was most startling, and I really thought that something must have struck me violently on both ears. When the lakes are covered with a thick coating of ice, the Indians kill the beaver even though it be swimming far below the surface. The hunter, who can see the animal through the ice, strikes violently on the frozen surface with his club. The vibration goes to the water and thence through the ears to the brain of the beaver, which rolls senseless on its back, thus allowing time for the hunter to cut a hole through the ice and pierce the animal with his spear."—Golden Days.

PORTO RICO MEN HOME

ALL WELL ON SHIPBOARD

Many Officers Here, Besides Volunteers from Missouri, Indiana, and Pennsylvania. Delay of Her Consort, the Alamo Which Left Porto Rico at the Same Time.

New York, Sept. 16.—The United States transport Concho, from Ponce, Porto Rico, arrived at quarantine yesterday morning. She brought Major General James H. Wilson, thirty-three officers and 530 enlisted men. The Concho sailed from Ponce September 8, at seven p. m., and throughout the entire trip experienced a succession of strong easterly winds and heavy cross seas, in which she rolled and pitched heavily. Many of the troops suffered from seasickness; otherwise all are well. There are no cases of typhoid or malaria on board. The men are all in the very best of health and overjoyed at reaching port.

Major General James H. Wilson of the Sixth army corps was on board, also the following members of his staff and of the staff of the First division of the First corps:

Lieutenant Colonel Bliss, Majors McMichael, Craig, Carlton, Vamedoe, Hoyle and Woodbury; Captains Allison, Hewitt, Gardner, Breckinridge, Latrobe, Lamar, and Elkins, and Lieutenants Black and Titus.

Besides these the following unattached officers arrived:

Colonel Eugene Griffin, First volunteer engineers; Lieutenant Colonel Black of General Miles's staff; Lieutenant Colonel Burpee, judge advocate; Contract Surgeon West, Major Rodney, Captains Rumbold and Curtis, Lieutenants Richenlaub, Weber, Gerrard, Johnson, Marks, Cross, Eno and Gallan and Contract Surgeon Hastings of the artillery.

The Concho also brought Battery A, Missouri artillery, three officers and 155 men, who will go to Jefferson barracks, Mo.; four officers and 164 men of Battery A, Indiana volunteers, ordered to Indianapolis, and Battery B, Pennsylvania volunteers, three officers and 164 men, who will go to Pittsburg.

The vessel was boarded by Health Officer Doty at nine a. m., and after a brief inspection was allowed to proceed to the Pennsylvania railroad dock, at the foot of Bay street, Jersey City. There a large crowd gathered early, awaiting the arrival of the troops. A committee from Pittsburg, Pa., were on hand to receive Hampton Battery B of Pittsburg.

This committee included Colonel S. W. Hill, H. B. English, Captain W. H. Wasson, George B. Marshall, Nathaniel Preston, Captain A. E. Hunt and J. P. Henderson.

The committee made arrangements to feed the soldiers at Taylor's hotel before they started on their journey to Pittsburg.

There was also a delegation of citizens from Indianapolis to welcome Battery A of that place.

There were trains in waiting to take the Pennsylvania and Indiana men home over the Pennsylvania railroad, while the Missouri volunteers were taken by a ferry boat to the West Shore in Weehawken to continue their journey west.

A committee of citizens of Indianapolis, accompanied by Congressman Overstreet of Indiana, came to quarantine to meet thte Concho and escort the Twenty-seventh Indiana battery. Its members were John W. Kern, Sterling R. Holt, Samuel E. Rant, Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Palmer. They were sent on board the Concho after she had cleared from quarantine and was about to leave for the city. The soldiers greeted the committee with cheers.

The transport Alamo, which left Porto Rico at about the same time, has not been sighted yet.

AMERICA'S PEACE TERMS.

Members of the Commission Receive Final Instructions.

Washington, Sept. 16.--The state department last night gave out the following statement concerning the discussion between the members of the cabinet and the peace commission yesterday:

"The members of the peace commission, with the exception of Senator Gray, whose absence was due to his inability to withdraw as counsel in a case in which he was engaged some time before his appointment as one of the peace commissioners, spent the greater part of yesterday in a free discussion of the duties with the discharge of which they have been intrusted by the president.

"While, for obvious reasons, it was determined that the nature of the instructions as to the negotiations about to be entered upon should for the present be kept secret and made known only after definite results shall have been reached, it is possible to state authoritatively that the commission goes to Paris fully prepared to follow a course of action mapped out for it as the result of the consultations of the last two days.

"At the very outset, it will be made clear to the Spanish commissioners that as in the case of the preliminary protocol, there can be no deviation from or modification of the demands made by the United States. The decision reached by the president, after a full consultation with the members of the commission, subsequently received the cordial and unanimous approval of the cabinet at a meeting held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon."

EVACUATION OF PORTO RICO.

Spaniards Show No Disposition to Delay Matters.

San Juan, Island of Porto Rico, Sept. 15.—The work of the Porto Rican evacuation commission is proceeding rapidly. Two sessions of the United States members were held yesterday.

There has been no hitch yet. Both sides profess satisfaction, and by mutual agreement no details of the deliberations are made public.

The report circulated here that our commissioners have agreed to pay $7,000,000 for the Spanish fortifications and other property is preposterous.

The steamer Yucatan has arrived here from Ponce, with Professor Amil and the stenographers and employes of the commission on board. She will return to Ponce, and from there will sail to Santiago.

Captain Brady says it is now generally believed in Ponce that the reported yellow fever cases in the Nineteenth infantry were incorrectly diagnosed. Although three companies, C, D and F, are still quarantined, the soldiers are not alarmed.

The Spanish steamer City of Cadiz, with Spanish troops from Guantanamo on board, has arrived here, and is embarking the sick soldiers from the hospitals before proceeding for Spain. The Spanish officers and men are loud in their praises of the treatment they received from the Americans in Cuba.

The Spanish warships Terror, Isabel II, Concha and Ponce de Leon, which sailed for the island of Martinique yesterday, will be docked there before proceeding to Spain. Their departure was quiet. There was not a cheer from the people or a salute from the forts. The crews of these ships aggregate 600 men.

BETTER OUTLOOK AT MANILA.

Insurgents Withdrawing Under Aguinaldo's Lead.

Washington, Sept. 16.—General Otis has cabled the war department as follows:

Manila,, Sept. 15.

Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.:

Affairs are much more satisfactory. Demands for withdrawal of insurgent troops complied with, and all withdrawn or withdrawing to-day, except small forces in outlying districts, which are not obeying insurgent leaders. Aguinaldo requests a few days in which to withdraw them by detachments and punish their commanding officers. Over two thousand already withdrawn. No concession granted insurgents, but strict compliance with demands of 8th inst., required. General good feeling prevailing.

Manila quiet and business progressing favorably. No difficulty anticipated. Have been compelled to confine Spanish prisoners temporarily within limits of walled city.

OTIS,
Commanding.

A NEW DEVICE OF SWINDLERS'

Pretended Army Officers Making Trouble in the Large Cities.

Washington, Sept. 16.—A profitable swindle, practiced in many parts of the country, is coming to the notice of the government.

The war department has been receiving many complaints from business men in large cities that regular and volunteer officers have become indebted to them and then disappeared.

The instrumentalities of the department are besought to locate the offenders.

Inquiry proves that the names of the alleged officers are not on the army roles, and it appears that there is a systematic swindle in operation under cover of the army by men wearing uniforms or carrying forged credentials and taking advantage of popular patriotism.

Two Important Arrests of Anarchists.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 16.—Two important arrests have been made here in connection with the assassination last Saturday of the Empress Elizabeth of Austria.

A vagrant named Gualduppo, who was arrested on the eve of the crime, has been recognised as a dangerous Anarchist. It is believed he is the man who made the handle for the file with which the empress was murdered.

The second prisoner is an Anarchist named Barbotti. He is charged with harboring Lucchoni, the assassin, for several days.

Both Gualduppo and Barbotti have been taken to Geneva, where they will be charged with complicity in the assassination.

Mount Vesuvius's Activity.

Naples, Sept. 16.—Mount Vesuvius is now presenting the grandest spectacle since 1872, due to a violent outburst of activity.

The central crater and a number of new mouths are vomiting lava and ashes.

Three streams are flowing down the mountain side, burning the chestnut woods at the base of Monte Somma, nearly reaching the observatory, destroying part of the funicular railroad leading thereto and threatening the barracks of the carabineers.

The Food Supply at Dawson City.

Port Townsend, Wash., Sept. 16.—The steamer Discovery, which arrived here last night from Skaguay, Alaska, brings advices from Dawson City up to August 27. It is said that the Canadian police have completed a thorough investigation of the food supply for the coming winter.

They report that the amount on hand is more than sufficient to carry the camp through the winter.

End of Camp Black.

Camp Black, Hempstead Plains, L. I., Sept. 16.—Yesterday was the last day of Camp Black as a military post. The three batteries here got away in the afternoon. They went to New York, and the Fourth and Fifth will be assigned to the First and Second battery armories, while the Seventh will go to the state arsenal at Rochester to await mustering out.

A Convention Deadlocked.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 16.—The Sixth district Republican congressional convention, which met here yesterday morning, is still in session, with but little chance of an early conclusion. Up to noon 410 ballots had been taken with no change from the first cast.

ROUGH RIDERS NO MORE

Col. Roosevelt Was the Last to Be Mustered Out.

NO MORE SUPPLIES NEEDED

Preparations Being Made to Hurry All Troops from Montauk and Abandon Camp Wikoff. Gen. Wheeler Returns to His Command. Gen. Shafter Visits the Camp.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 16.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who was the last of the famous Rough Riders to be mustered out of the United States army, left for his home in Oyster Bay yesterday. He was accompanied by Lieutenants John A. McHenry, John Greenway, Hallett Sayre and Charles Ballard, who were members of his staff.

Colonel Roosevelt said that he expected to spend the next few days quietly at his country home in Oyster Bay and could not say what his plans would be after that.

The Long Island life-saving men predict a severe storm on the coast before the end of the week. The camp authorities hope that if there is anything in this prediction the bad weather will hold off long enough to permit the removal of all the sick soldiers from camp and allow most of the other troops to get away.

With the departure of troops daily the camp is growing noticeably smaller. The infantry regiments still remaining in camp are the First, Second, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Tenth, Twelfth, Sixteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth, and the First, Second, Third, Sixth, Ninth and Tenth cavalry troops. With the departure of the Rough Riders there are no volunteer troops in camp.

If the cavalry ride into New York, as proposed, they will form an imposing procession, numbering several thousand men, and en route will pass through the following towns: Easthampton, Bridgehampton, Westhampton, Eastport, Brookhaven, Patchogue, Oakdale, Islip, Babylon, Wantagh, Freeport, Rockville Center, Hempstead, Floral Park, Jamaica, to Brooklyn and over the bridge.

There were two deaths reported yesterday from the general hospital, Jas. Boyle, Company H, Ninth Massachusetts volunteers, dysentery; Private Buckenheimer, Eighth infantry, regulars, appendicitis.

There remain about six hundred sick in the general hospital.

The steamer Shinnecock took away 100 sick men and convalescents to the city.

There has been a general clearing up in the general hospital, and many of the wards are entirely empty.

General Wheeler has returned to camp and assumed command of the cavalry again. The general said he did not know of any definite orders having yet been issued for the cavalry troops here. He said it was possible that the cavalry troops would be sent to Huntsville, Ala., to join General Lee's army, and then go to Cuba.

There are now two transports here, the Roumanian and the Chester. The latter arrived from New York yesterday and reported that four more transports were coming. These are to be used to take away the bulk of the troops now in camp.

The government is preparing for an emergency, and General Wheeler says that all the troops now in camp can be got aboard the transports in one day if necessary.

All the transports will be here to-day and should a bad storm set in the troops will be hurried aboard. No one seems to know at the present time just when Camp Wikoff will be abandoned, but it is generally admitted that much will depend on the condition of the weather in the next few days.

Among the first troops to leave will be the Sixth infantry, which goes to Fort Thomas; the Twelfth, ordered to Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and the Twenty-second infantry to Omaha.

Shafter Goes to Montauk.

General shafter left the Fifth Avenue hotel at half past eight o'clock yesterday morning for Camp Wikoff. He took the 8.50 o'clock boat from the foot of East Thirty-fourth street, which connected with a train at Long Island City. He was accompanied by his aides, Lieutenants J. D. Miley and R. Noble.

The Visit of Marquis Ito.

Pekin, Sept. 16.—Marquis Ito, the Japanese statesman, who is understood to be visiting China for the purpose of arranging an offensive and defensive alliance between China and Japan, arrived here yesterday and was received at the railroad station by notabilities especially ordered by the emperor to welcome the distinguished visitor.

The Oregon and the Iowa.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The naval authorities hope to have the battleships Oregon and Iowa ready to leave Brooklyn for Manila by September 24. It is probable, however, that they will not start on their long voyage until October 1. Captain Robley D. Evans of the Iowa was at the navy department yesterday afternoon.

Japan Orders Street Cars.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—An order has been received by the St. Louis Car Company for 250 street cars for the Japanese government. The order calls for the completion and shipment of the cars within the next ninety days. The amount to be paid for the cars is $300,000.

Lounsbury Nominated.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 16.—Senator George E. Lounsbury was nominated for governor of Connecticut on the first ballot at New Haven yesterday. The result was: Lounsbury 356, Porter 120, Dewell 16, Merwin 1.

Mr. Bayard's Condition.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 16.—The condition of Thomas F. Bayard was practically unchanged this forenoon. He passed a restless night, but grew more comfortable toward morning.

CAPTAIN EVANS RELIEVED.

Detached from the Iowa at His Own Request

Washington, Sept. 16.—Captain Robley D. Evans called at the navy department yesterday and had a long talk with Secretary Long, the immediate result of which was the issue of an order relieving him of the command of the battleship Iowa, which is now being repaired at the New York navy yard.

This was done at Captain Evans's personal request. He has served more than the period of time required by regulations and practice for a captain to command, and his next sea service may be in flag rank. He has been granted a leave of absence and in the meantime the nature of his next duty will be determined. It certainly will be ashore, and he may be assigned to membership on one of the naval boards.

The next commander of the Iowa will be Captain Silas Terry, now in command of the receiving ship Franklin at the Norfolk navy yard. He will take the ship around South America and over to Honolulu, in company with the Oregon and some colliers.

It is said at the navy department that the sailing orders to the battleships have not yet been issued, and that when they are they will take the ships only as far as Honolulu. It is not denied that they will ultimately proceed to join Rear Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manila, if it should be deemed expedient to reinforce him.

DISCOVERY OF A COMET.

May Be the Return of Tempel's of 1867 or of Swift's 1889.

Boston, Sept. 16.—News has been received here of the discovery of a comet at Copenhagen by Fechule, of the observatory there.

It is believed to be either Tempel's comet of 1867, or Swift's comet of 1889, probably the former. Tempel's comet is due at perihelion in October, but from its unfamiliar position, it was not expected to be found this year. Its period is about 6.5 years, and it has bee nobserved at several returns.

Swift's comet was discovered November 16, 1889, but the orbit determined, which gave it a period of 8.53 years, was very uncertain.

It will take more observations to determine the identity of the new object. Its position on September 13, 6.23 Greenwich mean time was:

R. A. 6h. 10m. 11s., and Dec. N., 8 deg. 55m. 4s., with a daily motion of 30m. in R. A. and 20m. in dec.

GENERAL MILES ILL.

Forced by Malarial Fever to Give Up Work for the Present.

Washington, Sept. 16.—General Miles is finally prostrated physically. He has been feeling the effects of his experiences in Cuba and Porto Rico for some days, but hoped that he would be able to resist the malarial fever which has attacked to a greater or less degree all the officers and men who were with his Santiago and Ponce expeditions.

Some days ago the surgeons advised the general to give up his duties and take a short rest, but he refused to leave his desk. He grew feverish and yesterday morning he was unable to leave his bed. No apprehension is felt for his life, and the physicians say the care he will receive now that he has conseted to give up work for a while will lead to his speedy recovery.

To Sell Rough Riders' Horses.

Washington, Sept. 16.—New Yorkers who wish to obtain a souvenir of the famous Rough Riders will have an opportunity to do so. The war department has ordered that all the horses which had been at Montauk, about a thousand in number, belonging to the First regiment of United States volunteer cavalry, by which is meant Colonel Roosevelt's Rough Riders, be sold at public auction. The horses are already on the way to New York by water and the auction will take place in that city at the earliest possible moment.

Many of the animals are highly trained in the style peculiar to the western cow puncher, and it is likely that some of them will be bid in by their former riders.

For Homeless Soldiers.

New York, Sept. 16.—Colonel Middleberg, president of the Soldiers' Comfort Committee, yesterday addressed a petition to Governor Black asking that an armory in the borough of Manhattan be set aside temporarily for homeless soldiers.

Colonel Middleberg urged in support of his request that many of the men who left homes and employment to enlist are now homeless and out of work.

The committee desires to fit up an armory with cots and mess tables so that those out of employment may be lodged and fed until they secure places.

Peace Commission Sees the President

Washington, Sept. 16.—The peace commission had a conference with the president yesterday which lasted until 1.30 o'clock, when Senators Davis and Frye and Mr. Whitelaw Reid left the White House for their hotels. Secretary Day remained to luncheon with the president. The commissioners will not meet again until this evening when they will meet thte members of the cabinet at a dinner to be given by the president.

Six Members for Inquire Board.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The president is believed to have secured six members for his war department inquiry commission. Those who have promised to serve are: Evan P. Howell, Atlanta; Charles Denby, Indiana, former minister to China; Colonel James A. Sexton, Illinois; D. C. Gilman, president of Johns Hopkins university; Dr. W. W. Keen of Philadelphia and Gen. Grenville M. Dodge of New York.

Gov. Ellerbe's Majority.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 16.—Out of a total of 60,870 votes reported yesterday morning, Governor Ellerbe has a majority of 1,986. The missing votes will hardly reduce this majority.

Nine New Cases of Yellow Jack.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 16.—Four new cases of yellow fever were reported to the board of health from Orwood and five from Taylors Station.

COMING EVENTS.

Sept. 16—Hogan's Alley at Music Hall.
Sept. 18—W. D. Murray will address the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at 4:15 p. m. Violin and vocal solos. Fans and lemonade.

The Republican Primaries.

The new rules governing the primaries of the Republican party in Plainfield will be put to a practical test Monday evening. On that occasion the primaries to select delegates to attend the Gubernatorial convention at Trenton, September 22d, will be held. Particular interest will be attached to these primaries as the local politicians are anxious to see just how Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's scheme will result.

The chief difference from the usual methods will be in the fact that candidates will be named and balloted for as at an election. There will be no rushing through of a slate by a few. Four primaries will be held one in each ward. The meeting places will be as follows: First ward, 120 East Front street; Second ward, Bryant School; Third ward, the Casino; Fourth ward, Reform Hall reading room.

Each ward will be entitled to two delegates to the Gubernatorial convention. These delegates will be elected at the primary. The G. O. P. voters will be allowed to cast a ballot only for those who are nominated in advance. It will be necessary to send the name of the proposed candidate to the clerk in each ward accompanied by the name and address of the voter who makes the nomination. The clerks in the wards are as follows: First ward, J. B. Coward; Second ward, W. N. Runyon; Third ward, R. F. Murray; Fourth ward, William Newcorn.

The polls will be open at the four ward polling places at 5 o'clock Monday evening. They will remain open until 9 o'clock. At 8 o'clock the business session of the primary will be held. All nominations must reach the hands of the clerks on or before tomorrow night to be posted.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State committee has issued the official call for the State convention to be held in Taylor's Opera House in Trenton, September 28th.

Numerous names have been mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Governor—names that carry with them respect and ability—but as yet the drift of the canvass has not been towards any particular man for the honor and work of making the fight for an office that but a few years ago was conceded to the Democrats even before the votes were cast.

Under the apportionment of delegates Union county will be entitled to fifty-four delegates. Somerset county will be entitled to twenty-two representatives. The total number of delegates in the convention will be 1,035, of which 518 will be necessary to a choice.

Pitney's Withdrawal.

Congressman Mahlon Pitney's withdrawal from the canvass for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination leaves the field clear to Mr. Voorhees, and from present prospects the Union county man will be made the standard-bearer of the Republicans by acclamation. The retirement of Mr. Pitney from the contest, which was just beginning to assume a menacing character to the Acting-Governor's chances for continuing in the executive chamber at Trenton, is undoubtedly especially gratifying to the Republicans of these parts. The Republicans of Union county look upon Mr. Voorhees with more appreciation of the "favorite son" appellation than is usually accorded to its use.

A HOSPITAL TENT AT CHICKAMAUGA.

The unusual amount of sickness, chiefly due to fevers, in our military camps has caused considerable comment throughout the country. The American people are full of sympathy for the suffering soldier boys. The illustration shows the fever ward in the Second division hospital at Chickamauga. It is copied from the New York Herald.

The Mississippi Problem.

For half a century the riverine monster which cleaves through the heart of our country has baffled all attempt to permanently bridle its excesses. It made its great valley, and it will dominate it, let human opposition be what it may. The actual cost which its ravages of flood have made has been estimated to be equivalent to not less than five times our present national debt. The Mississippi river commission, made up of our ablest engineers, both military and civil, have spent $20,000,000 within the last twoscore years devising means to control the flood, but the problem stands very much the same, always threatening, always demanding its dues. Captain Eads, it is true, solved one phase of the question with partial success in opening an outlet to the sea by his system of jetties. This simple but ingenious plan involves a self scouring channel, which so far has worked admirably. But without an equally effective embankment system, by which the flood in its persistent efforts to encroach on its limits can be restrained, the whole question remains a dreadful threat.

It is not merely at the times of its annual spring floods when the imprisoned snow and ice of half a continent swell its volume that the mischief is portentous. The cities of the lower valley are always in peril. Crawfish and various gnawing creatures of land and water, the swarming allies of the river monster, are perpetually undermining the strength of the levees. These often break with scarcely a moment's warning, and thousands of acres are submerged. Incessant vigilance is the price of safety. New Orleans, the great commercial emporium of the river, the creation of the river, the slave of the river, is today in a state of keen anxiety over the latest caprice of the flood which rolls by its wharves. The river is devouring the land at Carrollton, at Algiers and the extreme southern part of the city, where the riparian property is of great value. There seems to be great division of opinion as to what can be done to effectively meet the danger. The city and state engineers are at odds as to the proper division of their work. The money of the levee commission is said to be at its lowest ebb. The situation is an alarming one, and there seems to be no outcome except a great devastation of valuable property. New Orleans, to be sure, has passed through such crises before, but each fresh one threatens to surpass its predecessors in damage. With all of man's mastery over the conditions of nature, there are some facts which laugh at him and his puny efforts. The most imperious one on the North American continent is named the Mississippi river.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Recently we heard Dr. Carlos Martyn before the Young Men's Christian Association, of Plainfield, N. J., on "The American Sabbath." He opened by saying, "God demands one-seventh of our time. Sunday, the American Sabbath, is the old Hebrew Sabbath transferred to the first day of the week by the authority of the apostles and the church." On this statement he discussed how Sunday should be observed, and while admitting that it was "nearly lost," urged that efforts should be made to save what is left. The audience was small, and the discussion was neither Biblical nor radical, nor along fundamental lines. We have neither seen nor heard any adequately earnest discussion of the question by the friends of Sunday, during the present year. Everything is yielding to the force of the outgoing holiday tide.—Sabbath Recorder.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A number of young men about town who ride wheels have been troubled of late with meddlesome people who persist in sticking pins in their tires. If the practice is not stopped at once efforts will be made to bring the guilty parties to justice.

Yom Kippur, the Jewish New Years, will be ushered in at sundown tonight. Among the Jews who have not outgrown the faith of their fathers the world will be just 5,659 years old. In order to allow the Jewish volunteers to celebrate the holiday properly, Adjutant-General Corbin will grant furloughs for the entire three weeks.

According to the programme arranged for the pleasure of those who attend the convention of the Old-Time Telegrapher's Association at Omaha, Neb., which is forwarded to The Daily Press by Charles H. Schermerhorn, manager of the local Western Union office, he and his wife are sure to have a splendid time. Over 150 delegates are attending the reunion, and among them Mr. Schermerhorn finds many old acquaintances. There are few, however, who can show a longer service in the telegraphic service. It was nearly fifty years ago that genial Charles first entered the service of the telegraph company as a messenger boy and today he is one of the oldest and most esteemed employes of the Western Union.

The lawyers of Plainfield are, without exception, a very considerate set of men. Especially is this noticed in their dealings with law students whom they meet off and on in the small courts. The lawyers are ready always to extend them every courtesy, when they appear in a justice or the police court, as representatives of their preceptors, to ask for an adjournment or to make a motion, and even sometimes to try a small case. Lawyers, as a rule, do not like to contend in court against a student, but rarely have to. However there are certain young men here, mere boys, who persist in having a hand in almost every case that comes before a justice of the peace, either as counsel for one side or the other. There is considerable fault being found among the lawyers about this. As justice and police courts are not courts of record, attorneys are not recognized there in that capacity, but merely as representatives of the parties. Therefore any one can stand in the relation of counsel to a client in these courts. It is needless to say that the present City Judge would not countenance anything like that in his court, but the students, that is a few of them, have made some of the justice courts of this city little better than sham courts, because they are permitted to act as counsel in them, and cross-question witnesses, upbraid opposing counsel and use as much impudence to their elders as grown men use towards each other in similar circumstances.

The lawyers claim that this is not right. In one or two cases attorneys have lost cases when the opposing side has been taken by a student, not because the student knew more law than they, but because his preceptor had shown him a technicality that was wrong in the papers which he pointed out to the court. Whether this has added to the feeling against allowing the students to practice in the courts, is not known, but probably it has. It is not very pleasant for a grown man to be beaten by a boy.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, September 16. — S. Z. Dickson, a well known resident of the borough, died at 9 o'clock yesterday morning in a New York hospital, where he had gone to undergo an operation. He leaves a wife. Mr. Dickson came to the borough about three years ago and purchased a handsome property on the Greenbrook road which he overhauled and made into a beautiful residence. He is a Canadian by birth, and the remains will probably be taken there for interment. He was about sixty years of age.

A wagon, containing a load of rags, broke down on Front street yesterday afternoon, and several of the bags broke, strewing their contents over the roadbed.

There will be no services in the Methodist or Presbyterian churches Sunday night on account of the union services at New Market.

Miss Bertha Goodwin has returned to her home in Brooklyn after spending several days with her cousin, Miss Sadie Giles.

J. F. Auten has returned from Chatham, N. Y., where he has been spending the summer

Mrs. Daniel Randolph, of New Durham, visited friends in the borough Wednesday.

James McElvare, of Washington avenue, spent Wednesday in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Nancy Thomas, of Washington avenue, spent Wednesday in New York.

Mrs. J. G. Taylor, of Church street, visited relatives in Plainfield yesterday.

Mrs. Wilson Fredericks spent yesterday visiting relatives in Somerville.

Mrs. Walter Herring, of Brooklyn, is visiting Mrs. J. B. Conover.

Mrs. B. Ruple, of Pittstown, is a guest of Mrs. Walter Vliet.

Mrs. Joseph Johnson is visiting friends in Brooklyn.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of the Daily Press.)

New Market, Sept. 16.—A union temperance meeting will be held in the Baptist church Sunday evening. Miss Kate Lunden, National superintendent of foreign missions for the W. C. T. U., will address the meeting.

Mrs. Clarence White, of Red Bank, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Coriell.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, September 16—Mrs. Maxwell M. Drake, of Glenside, had a small fire Wednesday morning, caused by a defective chimney. Part of the kitchen ceiling was burned. The family soon formed a bucket brigade and extinguished what at one time threatened to be a very serious fire.

The Scotch Plains wheelmen are becoming very careless about riding without a light in the village at night. There is an ordinance against this and some one will be brought up with a sharp turn before long, and then there will be some hard feelings against the one making the complaint.

The funeral services of the late Hannah Marsh were held from her late home yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. S. Braker officiated. Interment was made in the village cemetery.

A number of Scotch Plains people attended the Johnston-Truell nuptials in Plainfield Wednesday evening.

Scotch Plains hears very little about the trolley, but we are not discouraged. "All things come to those who wait."

The Republican primary will be held Monday evening, September 19th, at 8 o'clock, in Excelsior Hall.

Miss Baker and Miss Rodcap, of Illinois, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. William D. Johnston.

Miss Annie Osborn, of Newark, visited friends in town Wednesday.

Ernest Wilson, of Newark, visited old friends in town Wednesday.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 16—A special meeting of the Woman's Guild of St. Paul's church will be held Wednesday afternoon of next week for the purpose of electing a vice-president to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. LeClear, who has moved from town.

The official board of the Methodist church have issued a book containing the history of the church. It is a neat little volume and is written in a bright and entertaining manner, besides containing a number of cuts of the trustees and former pastors.

Jerome Oliff, of this town, who has been attending the torpedo school at Newport, R. I., has been sent to the battleship Oregon to act as seaman gunner.

—Next Saturday evening Eugene O'Reilly will commence the weekly socials and dances that were so popular last winter.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNANIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden text:—If thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever. 1 Chron. xxviii: 9. Sept. 18, 1898.

9. "And the children of Israel did secretly those things that were not right against the Lord their God." For 250 years God had borne with the continued and increasing sin of these ten tribes who persisted in following in the steps of their first king, Jeroboam, of whom it is written so often that he made Israel to sin. During these years they had nineteen kings, but not one who feared God. In Deut. iv, 25-27, they had warning as to what would come upon them if they sinned against God, but in spite of all warnings and entreaties, they persisted in their sins.

10. "And they set them up images and groves in every high hill, and under every green tree." Even Solomon did this, and Judah after Solomon's death (I Kings xi, 7, 8; xiv, 22, 23), but Israel exceeded. See the plain and express command forbidding these things in Deut. xii, 2-4, and xvi, 21, 22, with the added words in xii, 32, "What thing soever I command you, observe to do it; thou shall not add thereto nor diminish from it," and the warning in Deut. viii, 19, "if thou do at all forget the Lord thy God and walk after other gods, and serve them and worship them, I testify against you this day, that ye shall surely perish."

11. "And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the Lord carried away before him." In the days of Samuel they insisted upon having a king that they might be like other nations (I Sam., viii, 19-22), thus rejecting the Lord who was their king and turning their backs upon him who loved them and had done all things for them. They sacrificed unto their net, and burned incense unto their drag (Hab. i, 16), thinking that their blessings came through them instead of from God.

12. "For they served idols, whereof the Lord had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing." See Ex. xx, 3-5; Lev. xxvi, 1, and consider how the devil stirs people to go directly against God even as when God said, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," and the devil said, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. ii, 17; iii, 4). One is our master, even Christ, and we should be able to say, "Whose I am, and whom I serve" (Math. xxiii, 8, 10; Acts xxvii, 23), for we cannot serve God and Mammon, but notwithstanding that we are assured that the friendship of the world is enmity with God and that we are not to be conformed to this world (Jas. iv, 4; Rom. xii, 2), yet many who bear the name of Christ conform to the world as persistently as Israel served idols.

13. "Yet the Lord testified against Israel and against Judah by all the prophets and by all the seers, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways." Consider Isa. i, 18; Jer. iii, 12; xxv, 5; Ezek, xviii, 31; xxxiii, 11; Hos. xiv, 1, and compare with II Pet. iii, 9; John iii, 16, and see how from the day that God sought Adam and Eve in their hiding place in Eden until the story of Rev. ix, 20, 21, how he is ever seeking to have his wandering ones return to him. He even puts the words in their mouth which they shall say when they return to him (Hos. xiv, 2). In the story of the prodigal in Luke xv he teaches us how the wanderer is loved and sought for by God the father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit.

14. "Notwithstanding they would not hear." In Isa. xxx, 15, he cries, "In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and confidence shall be your strength, and ye would not." In Math. xxiii, 37, he says, "How often would I, and ye would not." In Ps. lxxxi, 13, 11, he says, "Oh, that my people had hearkened unto me and Israel had walked in my ways, but my people would not hearken to my voice and Israel would none of me." He ever longs to save and bless, but has to cry, "Ye will not come unto me." He came unto his own, and his own received him not; he was in the world and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not; he only asks us to have faith in him, to yield to him, trust him and follow him. Why will we not?

15. "They followed vanity and became vain and went after the heathen that were round about them." In Jer. x, 8, 15, speaking of idols and their worship, the Spirit, through the prophet, says, "The stock is a doctrine of vanities; graven and molten images are vanity and the work of errors." The same chapter says that the Lord is the true God, the living God and king of eternity, the creator of heaven and earth. In Jer. ii, 13, he says that his people have forsaken him, the fountain of living waters, and have hewn them out cisterns that can hold no water. The whole book of Ecclesiastes teaches that all under the sun is vanity, but in the Song of Solomon we learn of him who is altogether lovely, who alone can satisfy the soul.

16. "They left all the commandments of the Lord their God and made them molten images." He brought them out of Egypt that he might be their God and they his people, that other nations seeing God in and through them might turn from the folly of idolatry to the God of Israel, the only living and true God. But when Israel turns away from the true God to worship the idols of the heathen, what can the heathen conclude but that the God of Israel is not as good as their gods?

17. "They sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger." In I Kings xxi, 20,25, Elijah said to Ahab "Thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord." See also Isa. i, 1; lii, 3. There are two bidders for our souls—God and the devil. The latter offers us the pleasures of sin for a season, but tries to hide from us the awful hereafter or to tell us that there is no future torment; but see Math. xxv, 41; Luke xvi, 23; Rev. xiv, 9-11. God offers peace and joy now through his redemption and eternal glory hereafter, but how many, like Israel, prefer the service of Satan and the pleasures of sin and believe the devil's lie about the hereafter?

18. "Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel and removed them out of his sight. There was none left but the tribe of Judah only." The very next verse says that Judah also kept not the commandments of the Lord. Yet God spared them a little longer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Sept. 18. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Wheat and the Tares.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Math. xiii, 24-30; 37-43, "Let both grow together till the harvest."

One of the questions which greatly puzzles many people is, why God should allow so much wickedness in the world and why the evil minded and bad people should be so prosperous. It oftentimes looks as if in business the man who is strictly honest and upright in his dealings has little chance for getting along in competition with those who are dishonest and tricky. How difficult it is for a temperance hotel to be made to pay! What prosperity is enjoyed by the saloon keeper, brewer and distiller! In politics, how impossible it seems for a man to be honest and open! The recent developments in the governmental affairs of our great cities and in the political management of New York and Pennsylvania are disheartening to all who love right and purity.

Nor is the condition of things entirely different in the church. The remark is frequently made by men of the world that they are as good as many members of the church. The sad thing about it is that they state what must be recognized as fact. Worldliness in spirit and practice has a large place in many churches. In belief, in conversation, in private life and public action, many members of the church are not as truly Christian as others who make no profession of religion.

What shall be done about it? In times past the attempt has been made to root out the tares. Men who did not conform to the teaching and practice of the church were denounced as heretics and fined, imprisoned, beaten, and even put to death. This course has never been very satisfactory or successful. The evil seems to grow faster the more it is opposed by violent methods. The worst trouble arises, however, from the fact that much wheat is always rooted up when we try to pull up the tares. They look so near alike that when we get earnest in the work we mistake wheat for tares and by rooting out the good we lose it and also give room and cultivation to the tares, which make a more vigorous growth than would have been possible otherwise.

What shall we do?

Attend to your own business and be sure that you grow good wheat, root, stalk and grain, in your own life. You have room enough to do it even if the next one to you gives evidence of having the nature of a tare. He will not be able to infect you if you keep the life currents pure and all powers working for good.

The Lord of the harvest will attend to his case in due time. This is not harvest time, it is growing time. Grow and don't fret about others. God will take care of you and them, too, better than you can do it. In getting well rooted you don't need to root any one else up.

Run Out.

Whether wheat can ever by lack of cultivation or from any cause be changed into tares is very improbable, though many eastern farmers believe one is a degenerate form of the other. But it is certain that in human life there is great danger, if one neglects to constantly cultivate his better and spiritual faculties, he will lose the power to think and do rightly.

There are many individuals who seem to be run out Christians. They once showed signs of religious life, prayed, attended and took part in public religious worship, helped others by word and deed in the Christian life. Now they have no consciousness of the presence of God's spirit of peace and pardon, they neglect the house of God. They never speak to persuade others to seek God. They are bitter and fault finding and companions with those of foul tongue and impure deeds. Are they Christians or worldlings, wheat or tares? It is certain that they are not good specimens of healthy wheat. They look as if the stock was about run out. Of all unsatisfactory and unprofitable conditions in life, that of a backslidden Christian is about the worst.

The Great Change.

The change which the gospel of Jesus Christ has made in the world at large during the last 20 centuries is not more striking than that which it produces in an individual. The beginning of the knowledge of God and His righteousness is small and almost unrecognized in many cases, but if properly cared for it expands until the whole course of life is changed, broadened, ennobled, refined and purified. The difference between a truly spiritual and devout person and a worldly one is as great as that between a Christian community and a heathen one. The gospel touches the whole life. It turns the thought into new channels, the well is changed, the affections are set on new objects. Ambition, desire, imagination, hope, faith and all activities are different from what they otherwise would be. Do penance or repent does not express the New Testament change. It is a transformation of life, not a mere transfiguring of form, but a soul alteration.

Convert Making Truth.

There can be no effective gospel ministry without the atonement of Calvary. There can be no truly successful missionary or evangelical operations without the blood of the crucified. There can be no soul saving work in the home or in the Sabbath school or in the church or in the community where the atonement of Christ is ignored or despised. Only he who truly and fully presents and magnifies the sacrifice of Christ has the assurance of a harvest of salvation benefits.—Presbyterian.

None fought more bravely in battle than the black regiments. On the western plains no soldiers are so feared by the Indians as the colored troops, and none command so quick obedience from the red men.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

TOPIC.—"The triumphs of Christianity."—Luke iv, 16-22.

Christianity is a triumphant religion. Its triumph is prophesied in the Scriptures. In the vision of Daniel the stone that represented the kingdom of God destroyed the other kingdoms. The book of Revelation is a series of visions in each one of which the triumph of the religion of Christ is assured. History corroborates prophecy; Christ and Christianity have triumphed in the past over satan, the grave, tremendous persecutions, the heathen Roman empire, the ignorance and superstition of the dark ages. It is conquering today materialism, rationalism and heathenism, wherever found in the world. It went forth conquering and to conquer, and the day will come when its victory will be complete, when "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow * * * and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord!"

The topical reference suggests the triumph of Christianity over various things in life. It is the record of Christ's visit to Nazareth, where He stood up in the synagogue and read Isa. lxi, 1, and declared that in Him this Scripture was fulfilled. The blessings and triumphs of the year of jubilee are thus typical of the blessings and triumphs of Christianity. They suggest that—

1. Christianity triumphs over all human conditions. "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." The poor specially were benefited in the year of jubilee. They received again the inheritances of their ancestors, but not at the expense of the owners. They in reality had only leased them until the jubilee year. The poor have the gospel preached to them. It is offered to and needed just as well by the rich. There is no caste system in Christianity. It breaks down the human barriers that separate men, and rich and poor are one in Jesus Christ.

2. Christianity triumphs over sorrows and heartaches. "To heal the broken hearted." How many hearts must have been broken in Israel by separations and losses of family inheritances? But when the year of jubilee was ushered in loved ones were again united, losses were retrieved. Broken hearts were healed. This is the mission of Christianity, to heal the broken hearted, hearts broken by the sorrows which come from separations, adversities, tribulations and the results of sin. Christ came to heal broken hearts, and He does heal them today.

3. Christianity triumphs over slavery. "To preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of the sight to the blind." The captives in prisons were looked upon as blind. Slaves were freed in the year of jubilee. Christianity triumphs over slavery. It has abolished slavery throughout the civilized world and is giving men victory over slavish habits of sin and wickedness.

Let us glory in such a triumphant religion. May the spirit of the Lord rest upon us and anoint us to proclaim these triumphant blessings to a needy world.

Bible Readings.—Ps. ii, 1-12; lxviii, 31; lxxii, 1-19; Isa. ii, 1-3; Dan. ii, 31-45; Mic. iv, 1, 2; Math. xiii, 31-33; xxviii, 18-20; Mark iv, 30-32; Luke xiii, 18-21; Phil. ii, 1-11; Heb. 1, 1-6; Rev. v, 11-14; vi, 1, 2.

The Theological Outlook.

We fear there is nothing cheering in the theological outlook for those alarmed and irritated defenders of the ancient order. The reconstruction of theology on the basis of revised and critical reviews of the Scriptures is bound to go on. The only sane thing for those who feel that faith is endangered thereby to do is to engage with equal earnestness and knowledge in the research, find and publish the facts overlooked or suppressed in the interest of revolutionary theories, and thus, by the only effective means, supply the information on which a valid view can rest. To answer investigation by hysterics and heresy trials is as impotent as it is irrational. The sound policy is to meet light with more light.—Universalist Leader.

Today's Work.

One secret of a sweet and happy Christian life is learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think we cannot carry this load until we are threescore and ten. We cannot fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us all at one time; it comes only a day at a time. Even tomorrow is never ours until it becomes today, and we have nothing whatever to do with it but to pass it down a fair and good inheritance in today's work well done and today's life well lived.—British Weekly.

Loyalty to Our Lord.

It is comparatively easy to stand by Christ and His words when they are assailed by His enemies, but many find it hard to uphold them when called in question by brethren whom they love and honor, and so indulge a guilty silence or take refuge in a compromising attitude. But loyalty to our Lord requires us to be true to Him and His truth, come what may. He honors and rewards fidelity to His word as well as to His cause.—Presbyterian.

Church Members.

A church member is or ought to be what his name signifies. A member is a vital part of our organism. Our hands and feet and limbs are members of the body. They are not like parasites and tumors that grow and feed upon the body but add no strength or completeness to it. They are not merely on the body, but are of it. And thus a true church member is a vital part of the church, not merely in it or on it, but of it.—Lutheran.

Peace.

Peace is the calm of holy thought,
The song of Christ by angels brought,
The grand amen by Spirit said,
The crown of Christ upon thy head.
—Christian Science Journal.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Rheinprovinz.

Aachen. Dem „Pol. Tagebl." zufolge wurde eine Geldlotterie zur Wiederherstellung des Rathhauses und des Münsters genehmigt. Für das Rathhaus sind 540,000 Mark, für den Münster 600,000 Mark bestimmt.

Langenlonsheim. Neuerdings wurden im Umkreise des alten Reblausherdes sechs verseuchte Stöcke gefunden und zwar in einem noch ganz jungen Weinberge.

Provinz Sachsen.

Langensalza. Dieser Tage hantirte der 19jährige Arbeiter Otto Volkmann mit einem geladenen Revolver. Plötzlich ging ein Schuß los und traf die in der Nähe stehende vierjährige Tochter des Arbeiters Werner, die sofort tödtlich getroffen niederstürzte. Hierauf schoß sich Volkmann zwei Kugeln in die linke Seite und war sofort todt.

Merseburg. Das hiesige Christianen-Waisenhaus begeht am 25. September sein 200jähriges Jubiläum. Das Waisenhaus ist eine Stiftung der Herzogin Christiania (geb. 22. September 1634, gest. 20. Mai 1701), der Gemahlin des Herzogs Christians des Aelteren, der unter Anderem das Fischhaus am Gotthardtsteiche errichtete, das, jetzt ein Vergnügungslokal, nach ihm seinen Namen führt.

Provinz Schlesien.

Grünberg. Die durch das Hochwasser des vorigen Jahres geschädigten Bewohner des Grünberger Kreises erhielten an Unterstützungen 13,400 Mark ausgezahlt. Die Gemeinde Milzig erhielt ein besonderes Geschenk von 5700 Mark, während anderen Gemeinden für Herstellung von Brücken, Teichen und Wegen 2200 Mark zugebilligt wurden. Die staatliche Unterstützung betrug 4500 Mark; die übrigen Summen sind aus Kreismitteln, durch private Zuwendungen und Sammlungen aufgebracht worden.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Kiel. An der holsteinischen Westküste ertranken der Schiffer Lohmann aus Büsum, zwei Fischer aus Dithmarschen und ein Schifferknecht aus Hamburg. Die vier Personen waren mit einem Segelschiff in See gegangen. Unter der Insel Buschsand kenterte das Fahrzeug, und sämmtliche Insassen gingen unter.

Friedrichsruh. Von unterrichteter Seite wird mitgetheilt, daß dem langjährigen Kammerdiener des Fürsten Bismarck, Pinnow (der im Testamente des Fürsten mit 5000 Mark abgefunden worden ist), in Berlin durch Vermittelung des Kaisers eine sichere Lebensstellung geschaffen werden wird. Er wird wahrscheinlich Portier am Reichskanzlerpalais werden. Auch für einige andere Verabschiedete der Friedrichsruher Dienerschaft wird von Verehrern des Fürsten gesorgt werden.

Provinz Westfalen.

Bielefeld. Im Jahre 1894 wurde der Kommis Paul Johannsen von hier flüchtig, nachdem er sich schwere Urkundenfälschung und Betrug hatte zu Schulden kommen lassen; unter Anderem erhob er von der westfälischen Bank auf eine gefälschte Anweisung 4000 Mark. Jetzt ist der Verbrecher genau nach vier Jahren in Berlin verhaftet worden.

Dortmund. Die an den Rangirbahnhof Dortmund K. M. ausgeschlossene Station Dortmund-Hafen wurde für den Frachtgutverkehr in Wagenladungen von und nach dem Wasserwege oder den Anlagen am Dortmunder Hafen eröffnet.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Die sächsische Lehrerschaft beschloß, dem in Wien verstorbenen berühmten deutschen Schulmann Dr. Friedrich Dittes in seinem Geburtsorte Irfersgrün bei Zwickau ein Denkmal zu setzen.—Prinzessin Friedrich August wurde von einer Prinzessin entbunden, die kurz nach der Geburt starb.—Drei Kompagnien des Kaiser-Grenadier-Regiments Nr. 101 dahier hatten ihre Korridore nach Entwürfen von Künstlern, die bei diesen Truppentheilen dienten, und mit der Erlaubniß der Vorgesetzten durch Malereien ausschmücken lassen. Durch diese geschmackvollen Dekorationen wurde den Mannschaften eine gewisse Liebe zu ihrem Soldatenheim und die Freude am Schönen eingeflößt. Nun hat der neue Kommandeur Oberst Sachse die Malerei abschlagen und weiß tünchen lassen, weil der weiße Anstrich — militärischer sei.

CHAPTER XIII.

Lilac wondered why it was that Major Emmott grew more and more severe in his manner with each succeeding day of the voyage. For the last two or three days he had scarcely addressed her at all; and Lilac was surprised and a little startled when one day, after dinner, he turned towards her to say in his gravest manner—

"If it is convenient to you, Miss Marvel, I should like to have a few moments' private conversation with you when we go on deck.

"Certainly, Major Emmott." Lilac wondered what the old gentleman could have to talk about, and the gravity of his manner made her feel that it was something very serious.

Serious indeed it was, as she found directly the Major began to talk.

"Miss Marvel," he began jerkily, nervously twisting his moustache, "I have a very unpleasant duty to perform, and you will pardon me, I am sure, as an old soldier, if I do it rather bluntly."

The girl simply bowed her head and wondered again what was coming. She was not to remain long in doubt.

"It is about this Mr. Mowbray that I wished to speak," the Major went on. "It has occurred to both my daughter and myself that—to speak plainly—you are flirting with him—— Please do not interrupt me. Of course you may have different ideas as to what is proper for a young engaged woman to do; but, since you are under my charge and associate with my own daughter, I cannot refrain from stating candidly what my opinion of your conduct is. It seems to me to be deserving of the severest censure. Not content with introducing yourself to a perfect stranger and spending several hours every day in his company, I see that you have taken to exchanging notes. My daughter was shocked to observe that you handed an envelope to Mr. Mowbray this morning when you met. Such conduct may seem right to you, but to me it seems unfair to Sir Roydon Garth and also to Mr. Mowbray himself. I have no doubt that the young man, if his marked attentions to you are seriously intended, has drawn the greatest encouragement from your manner, which does not seem to me in the least befitting the future wife of an English gentleman or the associate of my daughter. I know, of course, that your opinions are likely from the circumstances of your birth and education, to be different from my own; but on the present subject it seems to me that it is impossible for two opinions to exist. To put it on its lowest ground, your conduct is very cruel to this Mr. Mowbray, whose attentions to you are in all probability quite serious. I took it upon myself, when those attentions first became marked, to inform him of your engagement to Sir Roydon Garth, but I hear that you have taken pains to nullify the effect of my announcement. My daughter accidentally overheard you telling Mr. Mowbray that your engagement to Sir Roydon Garth was only a provisional one, and giving him the impression generally that it was not a real engagement at all—a circumstance which almost justifies the young man in ignoring it altogether. For his sake, as well as for my own reputation and the duty I owe Sir Roydon Garth, I feel bound to make this protest!"

He had run on grandiloquently, without giving Lilac the chance of saying a word in her own defence. She had stopped at the beginning of his harangue, and stood quite still as she listened, her face white and red by turns, her big blue eyes wide open with consternation and surprise. Now, when he paused, she opened her pale lips to reply, but her throat was so dry that speaking was difficult.

"But indeed you make a mistake!" she began hoarsely. "The envelope I handed to Mr. Mowbray did not contain a letter at all. It contained the manuscript of a short story which he kindly lent me to read."

The Major did not listen.

"My dear young lady, you may be sure that I have made every possible allowance in your favor before speaking as harshly of your conduct as I have felt obliged to do. Pray do not attempt to excuse yourself. I may have misjudged you respecting some unimportant details; but your general conduct with regard to Mr. Mowbray does not admit of defence, and I should not be surprised if it exercised a very injurious influence on your future life. The mischief that women do by flirting is very great, and I speak earnestly, because I happened to experience it myself when I was a young man. The circumstances were almost exactly similar, and my faith in women was almost ruined by it. I will leave you to think over what I have said, Miss Marvel!"

As he spoke, he turned abruptly and walked with his quick military step in the direction Sabina had taken when she left them together. Even Sabina had been unable any longer to restrain her father's indignation from finding vent in a direct remonstrance with the Baronet's fiancee and the girl awaited the old soldier anxiously, wondering what Lilac could have said in her own defence.

Poor Lilac remained where the Major had left her, feeling faint and dizzy. The totally unexpected accusation had stunned her almost as if it had been a physical blow, and she stood, for some minutes unable to think clearly. She had felt that the Major had objected to her friendship with Mark Mowbray, and had serious misgivings as to whether she ought not to respect his wishes; but the thought that his objections were due only to the most absurd of prejudices made her wait for him to express his wishes before she acted upon them. The idea that she appeared disloyal to Roy had never once occurred to her. It was true that she had informed Mowbray of her engagement to Roy; but the Major's condemning words came back to her, and she had to admit to herself that, in her eagerness to prevent the news of her engagement from being made public, she had possibly given the novelist the idea that she did not consider it binding. The thought had never ocurred to her before, and, now that she realized what she had done, it overwhelmed her.

A sense of shame filled her. She felt that in act, though not in intention, she had done something to deserve Major Emmott's reproaches—she had been disloyal to Roy, and she had perhaps made Mark Mowbray think that she might care for him. The last was the most serious thought, for Roy would know that in her heart she had never been disloyal to him for a moment, and the Major's good opinion did not matter much. But to shake a man's faith in women was a very serious thing, and Lilac shuddered again as she thought of Major Emmott's accusation. She felt that she must know the worst and set matters right at once, and, when she moved at last, it was to walk swiftly along the deck in search of Mark Mowbray.

It was a warm and moonlit night, and most of the passengers were on deck, sitting about in their deck-chairs or leaning over the taffrain in couples, flirting and gossipping. A couple of American professionals who were on board were playing selections on the harp and violin, and the sweet strains enhanced the calm peacefulness which seemed to brood over the vessel as it ploughed its way steadily through the calm moonlit waters. It presented a strange contrast to the turmoil in poor Lilac's mind as she walked quickly along the deck, glancing at every face she passed to see if it was the one she was seeking.

Mark Mowbray was standing alone, leaning over the side of the vessel, his eyes fixed upon the silver track which seemed to lead to the moon, his mind busy weaving day dreams.

A touch on the arm made him turn his eyes from the sea, and he started when he saw that Lilac herself was standing by his side. Her face in the moonlight had a ghost-like pallor, and when she spoke her usually musical voice was hoarse, which told him that she was agitated. The harp and the violin stopped at the end of the selection, and he could hear plainly, although her words came to him in little more than a whisper.

"I have something that I feel I must say to you, Mr. Mowbray," she began, "but I hardly know how to say it."

He inclined his head without replying, and the girl went on—

"Major Emmott has been speaking to me about you."

"Indeed! I did not know that he condescended to acknowledge the fact of my existence. I hope he has not been trying to prejudice you against me?"

"No, no!" cried Lilac, finding her task even more difficult than she had anticipated. "It was not so much about you as about myself."

The novelist looked puzzled. He could scarcely believe that at the Major's instigation, the girl was trying to force him to a declaration of his intentions; yet that seemed to be the only end she could have in view. He waited again without replying, and Lilac, who was becoming more agitated every moment, made a great effort and forced out the words—

"Major Emmott accuses me of having flirted with you!"

The novelist still looked puzzled and still made no reply.

"You do not think that I have—flirted with you?" she asked with impatience as well as pain in her voice when he remained silent; and the young man answered thoughtfully—

"No—I do not think you have tried to make me care for you."

The music began again as Lilac went on more calmly—

"The Major seems to think that I gave you a wrong impression about my engagement to Sir Roydon Garth, that I seemed to speak of it as if it were not a real or binding one. I hope I did not give you that impression?"

As she asked the question she looked searchingly into Mowbray's face, and the expression which it wore made her feel vaguely uneasy. There was a thrill of passion in his tone as he answered—

"I took it that the engagement was a convenient arrangemnt made by the man to suit his own interests, that you were to consider yourself bound by it if he chose to ratify his promise of marriage, but that he should not be bound to it in any way if he chose to forget you!" He spoke with more rapidity and passion as he saw that she was trying to interrupt him. "I know that you are too loyal to see it in that light; but what else can a provisional engagement mean? I wanted to warn you—and I must do it now, Miss Marvel, whether you desire it or not—against a man who could [illegible] gest such an arrangement. Please hear me out, for I had better tell you all now. I said that you had not flirted with me. A nature like yours is incapable of flirtation; but you have allowed me to love you, though Heaven knows whether I could have helped myself if I had felt your engagement to be a real binding one! Perhaps I could have kept a check on my heart then; but, when I believed you were being played with by a villain whom you trust too implicitly, how could I help trying to save you from him, and make my whole life happy at the same time? I do not expect you to value my love now, or to accept my view of your provisional engagement, but some day you will. Remember then that there is one heart that loves you truly and unchangeably for yourself alone—one who is waiting patiently for you to see that his warning was justified!"

Mark spoke with uncontrollable passion, and Lilac was glad of the music which helped to prevent the nearest group of passengers from hearing the sound of his voice. In vain she had tried to interrupt him. There was no stemming the torrent of his declaration now that the girl's own words had forced it from him. Her face reddened with shame, and all the anger that she might have felt at the accusation he was ignorantly levelling against Roy was absorbed in an overwhelming self-reproach. Against Mark Mowbray she felt no resentment. It was only her own foolish action that made him misjudge her lover and warn her against him. She felt a great pity for the young man, and her face grew pale as she remembered the Major's words, and wondered whether his life would be ruined by her thoughtlessness.

"I am so sorry!" she said, when he paused at last. "I have acted very blindly and foolishly in not giving you the full facts about my engagement to a man whom I love and trust with my whole heart. It is I only who insists upon the engagement not being final. I am afraid that I am too ignorant and unpolished to make him a suitable wife. That is why I do not wish our marriage to be spoken of as a settled thing until I have been in England and seen for myself what the women are like among whom Sir Roydon Garth would naturally find a wife."

Mark Mowbray caught eagerly at a slight straw of hope.

"And if you feel that you cannot marry him?" he asked.

"I shall go back to California, I suppose, unless I can keep myself by some sort of work in England. It would not matter much what I did."

"It would matter to me!" he said passionately. "Tell me that, if you do not marry this man to whom you are engaged, you will come and be my wife. You will always find me waiting to marry you. You might promise me that at least."

Lilac shook her head.

"Whether I marry Sir Roydon Garth or not," she said slowly and with effort, "my heart will always be his. You see that it would be desecration, therefore, to talk of any other marriage."

"No, no!" he cried. "I do not ask you to love me—for years, at any rate—I ask only the right to care for you—to have the opportunity, which marriage alone could give, of gradually winning your heart for myself. But it is useless speking of that now; you still believe in your hero. Only remember that, when you want me, you will find me waiting to serve you, without asking for your love in return. I suppose we shall not have much more opportunity of chatting with each other if Major Emmott misjudges you so much on account of our talks, so I had better give you this at once. I put it into my pocket with the intention of giving it to you to-night." He drew a small book from the pocket of his coat as he spoke. "It is a copy of some of my short stories," he explained, as he handed it to her, "and, if you keep it, you will always have the address of my publisher, through whom you will at all times be able to find me. And, if you discover that things are different in England from what you hoped, remember that there is one friend ever thinking of you, ever ready to help you. Good-bye, Miss Marvel!"

He seized her hand impulsively and raised it reverently to his lips as they stood leaning over the vessel's side. Most of the passengers were at the other side of the deck, nearer to the music, which still came floating sweetly and plaintively towards them, and no one had passed to disturb their tete-a-tete; but now, as Mark Mowbray raised the girl's slender hand to his lips, a solitary form came round the corner of the deck-house strolling noiselessly towards them. It was Sabina Emmott.

Lilac waited until she had passed—she appeared not to notice the couple leaning over the bulwarks—then hurried away to her cabin, angry with the novelist for having kissed her hand, but a hundred times more angry with herself for having allowed him to love her without warning him that her heart belonged entirely to Roy. Her anger toward him passed very quickly, and it was succeeded by a great pity for the man whom she felt that she had all unconsciously injured.

She had been looking forward to telling Roy all that had passed, but she stopped with the pen in her hand, wondering whether it would be quite fair to Mark Mowbray—whether, even to her lover, she had the right of referring to a scene in which the novelist had disclosed his heart to her. Lilac was unable to decide. She hated the idea of keeping a secret of any sort from Roy, and at the same time she felt so conscious of having done Mark Mowbray an injury that she shrank from the very suspicion of doing him an injustice.

It was not until the next morning that the girl, after a sleepless night, finally made up her mind not to speak of Mark Mowbray's declaration—in a letter, at least. Perhaps, when she saw Roy, she could tell him all that he might care to know; but to set down the particulars in a letter would be hardly safe, and was scarcely necessary.

It was an unfortunate decision.

CLAY PIPES.

The Largest Factory in the World--How It Was Started.

The largest tobacco-pipe factory in the world is located in Appomattox county, near Pamplin City.

It had been known for many years prior to the war between the States that there existed clay in that county well adapted to the manufacture of tobacco pipes, but the industry was carried on in the most desultory way.

But at the close of the war the whites turned their attention to the clay deposits. It was a necessity, and not a matter of choice.

The war had swept away everything. The implements with which the pipes were manufactured were simple and rude.

The pipes were sold to local merchants, who shipped them to wholesale dealers in northern cities, who sold them to retailers throughout the country.

Among the retail dealers who purchased a lot of these poor men's pipes was a groceryman in a little town in Ohio. He sold them at from 2 to 5 cents apiece, and found them very popular.

Among those who purchased one was a wealthy citizen of the town. He smoked nothing else for some time, and finally inquired of the groceryman as to where the pipes were made. The latter could only give the name of the wholesale dealer from whom he had purchased, but from him the gentleman learned that the pipes were made from a clay bank in the County of Appomattox, in Virginia.

The gentleman saw that the pipes were of very rude construction. He grew interested, and finally his mind dwelt so much upon the subject that he went to the little town of Appomattox. He went at once to the store of the dealer in pipes, and was not long in finding that the best were made at a bank about eight miles away, at what is now Pamplin City.

The rest is soon told. The land was purchased for a small sum, buildings erected, the latest machinery installed and soon the kilns were smoking.

THE SOUTHERNERS OF TO-DAY.

They Are Not Wanting in Qualities which go to Make a Good American.

No teacher who has been brought in contact with students drawn from most of the Southern States can fail to conclude that they are in the main a remarkably fine body of young men. In essential charm of manners they are not inferior to their grandfathers; in morals they are, on an average, distinctly better in some important respects, certain vices being now more frowned upon than was the case fifty years ago; in knowledge of the world and in intellectual curiosity they are plainly superior; in sheer mental power they are not inferior, at least; and in genial kindliness and bonhomie, and in that indefinable but supreme quality, manliness, they are capable of holding their own with the youth of any land and of any age. More high seriousness of purpose might be desired for them, and a better comprehension of the importance of the intellectual side of our nature, but being Southern boys, they have the defects of their own and of their progenitors' qualities. Still, when all is said, they impress any fair judge as being just the stuff out of which a great civilization ought to be evolved. They are as good Americans, in the true sense of that term, as are to be found in any section of the Union; they have inherited the best qualities of their ancestors; they are free from the clogs of slavery; and if they have yet to struggle against political and religious intolerance, they will surely emerge the stronger for the contest.—W. P. Trent, in Atlantic Monthly.

NEWEST CUT IN DIAMONDS.

Fashion Decrees that it Should be Long and Pointed.

There is a new cut in diamonds. With the ever-changing mode in all things, gems, too, have their turn, and by those who can afford the luxury new jewels and the latest designs are an absolute diversion, if not a necessity.

At present diamonds of this style are not cut in this country, but come from France ready for setting, long and oval (almost identical in shape with the Marquise ring), and are set alone. No circle of stones is added to the new cut, they must be solitaire.

As with all new things they are expensive. In cutting much of the stone is taken off in order to make the pointed ends. The facets are most beautifully cut, and often smaller or finer than is usual. Thus they catch every ray of light. This makes the stones particularly brilliant. The least possible gold or platinum is used in mounting these gems, as it is not intended that anything shall detract from their beauty.

It is in rings exclusively that this new shape is used. They vary in price according to the weight, from $500 to $3,000. Notwithstanding their expense, all of those which recently arrived in this city from Paris have been sold.—New York Press.

CHAPTER XIII.

Lilac wondered why it was that Major Emmott grew more and more severe in his manner with each succeeding day of the voyage. For the last two or three days he had scarcely addressed her at all; and Lilac was surprised and a little startled when one day, after dinner, he turned towards her to say in his gravest manner—

"If it is convenient to you, Miss Marvel, I should like to have a few moments' private conversation with you when we go on deck.

"Certainly, Major Emmott." Lilac wondered what the old gentleman could have to talk about, and the gravity of his manner made her feel that it was something very serious.

Serious indeed it was, as she found directly the Major began to talk.

"Miss Marvel," he began jerkily, nervously twisting his moustache, "I have a very unpleasant duty to perform, and you will pardon me, I am sure, as an old soldier, if I do it rather bluntly."

The girl simply bowed her head and wondered again what was coming. She was not to remain long in doubt.

"It is about this Mr. Mowbray that I wished to speak," the Major went on. "It has occurred to both my daughter and myself that—to speak plainly—you are flirting with him—— Please do not interrupt me. Of course you may have different ideas as to what is proper for a young engaged woman to do; but, since you are under my charge and associate with my own daughter, I cannot refrain from stating candidly what my opinion of your conduct is. It seems to me to be deserving of the severest censure. Not content with introducing yourself to a perfect stranger and spending several hours every day in his company, I see that you have taken to exchanging notes. My daughter was shocked to observe that you handed an envelope to Mr. Mowbray this morning when you met. Such conduct may seem right to you, but to me it seems unfair to Sir Roydon Garth and also to Mr. Mowbray himself. I have no doubt that the young man, if his marked attentions to you are seriously intended, has drawn the greatest encouragement from your manner, which does not seem to me in the least befitting the future wife of an English gentleman or the associate of my daughter. I know, of course, that your opinions are likely from the circumstances of your birth and education, to be different from my own; but on the present subject it seems to me that it is impossible for two opinions to exist. To put it on its lowest ground, your conduct is very cruel to this Mr. Mowbray, whose attentions to you are in all probability quite serious. I took it upon myself, when those attentions first became marked, to inform him of your engagement to Sir Roydon Garth, but I hear that you have taken pains to nullify the effect of my announcement. My daughter accidentally overheard you telling Mr. Mowbray that your engagement to Sir Roydon Garth was only a provisional one, and giving him the impression generally that it was not a real engagement at all—a circumstance which almost justifies the young man in ignoring it altogether. For his sake, as well as for my own reputation and the duty I owe Sir Roydon Garth, I feel bound to make this protest!"

He had run on grandiloquently, without giving Lilac the chance of saying a word in her own defence. She had stopped at the beginning of his harangue, and stood quite still as she listened, her face white and red by turns, her big blue eyes wide open with consternation and surprise. Now, when he paused, she opened her pale lips to reply, but her throat was so dry that speaking was difficult.

"But indeed you make a mistake!" she began hoarsely. "The envelope I handed to Mr. Mowbray did not contain a letter at all. It contained the manuscript of a short story which he kindly lent me to read."

The Major did not listen.

"My dear young lady, you may be sure that I have made every possible allowance in your favor before speaking as harshly of your conduct as I have felt obliged to do. Pray do not attempt to excuse yourself. I may have misjudged you respecting some unimportant details; but your general conduct with regard to Mr. Mowbray does not admit of defence, and I should not be surprised if it exercised a very injurious influence on your future life. The mischief that women do by flirting is very great, and I speak earnestly, because I happened to experience it myself when I was a young man. The circumstances were almost exactly similar, and my faith in women was almost ruined by it. I will leave you to think over what I have said, Miss Marvel!"

As he spoke, he turned abruptly and walked with his quick military step in the direction Sabina had taken when she left them together. Even Sabina had been unable any longer to restrain her father's indignation from finding vent in a direct remonstrance with the Baronet's fiancee and the girl awaited the old soldier anxiously, wondering what Lilac could have said in her own defence.

Poor Lilac remained where the Major had left her, feeling faint and dizzy. The totally unexpected accusation had stunned her almost as if it had been a physical blow, and she stood for some minutes unable to think clearly. She had felt that the Major had objected to her friendship with Mark Mowbray, and had serious misgivings as to whether she ought not to respect his wishes; but the thought that his objections were due only to the most absurd of prejudices made her wait for him to express his wishes before she acted upon them. The idea that she appeared disloyal to Roy had never once occurred to her. It was true that she had informed Mowbray of her engagement to Roy; but the Major's condemning words came back to her, and she had to admit to herself that, in her eagerness to prevent the news of her engagement from being made public, she had possibly given the novelist the idea that she did not consider it binding. The thought had never ocurred to her before, and, now that she realized what she had done, it overwhelmed her.

A sense of shame filled her. She felt that in act, though not in intention, she had done something to deserve Major Emmott's reproaches—she had been disloyal to Roy, and she had perhaps made Mark Mowbray think that she might care for him. The last was the most serious thought, for Roy would know that in her heart she had never been disloyal to him for a moment, and the Major's good opinion did not matter much. But to shake a man's faith in women was a very serious thing, and Lilac shuddered again as she thought of Major Emmott's accusation. She felt that she must know the worst and set matters right at once, and, when she moved at last, it was to walk swiftly along the deck in search of Mark Mowbray.

It was a warm and moonlit night, and most of the passengers were on deck, sitting about in their deck-chairs or leaning over the taffrain in couples, flirting and gossipping. A couple of American professionals who were on board were playing selections on the harp and violin, and the sweet strains enhanced the calm peacefulness which seemed to brood over the vessel as it ploughed its way steadily through the calm moonlit waters. It presented a strange contrast to the turmoil in poor Lilac's mind as she walked quickly along the deck, glancing at every face she passed to see if it was the one she was seeking.

Mark Mowbray was standing alone, leaning over the side of the vessel, his eyes fixed upon the silver track which seemed to lead to the moon, his mind busy weaving day dreams.

A touch on the arm made him turn his eyes from the sea, and he started when he saw that Lilac herself was standing by his side. Her face in the moonlight had a ghost-like pallor, and when she spoke her usually musical voice was hoarse, which told him that she was agitated. The harp and the violin stopped at the end of the selection, and he could hear plainly, although her words came to him in little more than a whisper.

"I have something that I feel I must say to you, Mr. Mowbray," she began, "but I hardly know how to say it."

He inclined his head without replying, and the girl went on—

"Major Emmott has been speaking to me about you."

"Indeed! I did not know that he condescended to acknowledge the fact of my existence. I hope he has not been trying to prejudice you against me?"

"No, no!" cried Lilac, finding her task even more difficult than she had anticipated. "It was not so much about you as about myself."

The novelist looked puzzled. He could scarcely believe that at the Major's instigation, the girl was trying to force him to a declaration of his intentions; yet that seemed to be the only end she could have in view. He waited again without replying, and Lilac, who was becoming more agitated every moment, made a great effort and forced out the words—

"Major Emmott accuses me of having flirted with you!"

The novelist still looked puzzled and still made no reply.

"You do not think that I have—flirted with you?" she asked with impatience as well as pain in her voice when he remained silent; and the young man answered thoughtfully—

"No—I do not think you have tried to make me care for you."

The music began again as Lilac went on more calmly—

"The Major seems to think that I gave you a wrong impression about my engagement to Sir Roydon Garth, that I seemed to speak of it as if it were not a real or binding one. I hope I did not give you that impression?"

As she asked the question she looked searchingly into Mowbray's face, and the expression which it wore made her feel vaguely uneasy. There was a thrill of passion in his tone as he answered—

"I took it that the engagement was a convenient arrangemnt made by the man to suit his own interests, that you were to consider yourself bound by it if he chose to ratify his promise of marriage, but that he should not be bound to it in any way if he chose to forget you!" He spoke with more rapidity and passion as he saw that she was trying to interrupt him. "I know that you are too loyal to see it in that light; but what else can a provisional engagement mean? I wanted to warn you—and I must do it now, Miss Marvel, whether you desire it or not—against a man who could [illegible] gest such an arrangement. Please hear me out, for I had better tell you all now. I said that you had not flirted with me. A nature like yours is incapable of flirtation; but you have allowed me to love you, though Heaven knows whether I could have helped myself if I had felt your engagement to be a real binding one! Perhaps I could have kept a check on my heart then; but, when I believed you were being played with by a villain whom you trust too implicitly, how could I help trying to save you from him, and make my whole life happy at the same time? I do not expect you to value my love now, or to accept my view of your provisional engagement, but some day you will. Remember then that there is one heart that loves you truly and unchangeably for yourself alone—one who is waiting patiently for you to see that his warning was justified!"

Mark spoke with uncontrollable passion, and Lilac was glad of the music which helped to prevent the nearest group of passengers from hearing the sound of his voice. In vain she had tried to interrupt him. There was no stemming the torrent of his declaration now that the girl's own words had forced it from him. Her face reddened with shame, and all the anger that she might have felt at the accusation he was ignorantly levelling against Roy was absorbed in an overwhelming self-reproach. Against Mark Mowbray she felt no resentment. It was only her own foolish action that made him misjudge her lover and warn her against him. She felt a great pity for the young man, and her face grew pale as she remembered the Major's words, and wondered whether his life would be ruined by her thoughtlessness.

"I am so sorry!" she said, when he paused at last. "I have acted very blindly and foolishly in not giving you the full facts about my engagement to a man whom I love and trust with my whole heart. It is I only who insists upon the engagement not being final. I am afraid that I am too ignorant and unpolished to make him a suitable wife. That is why I do not wish our marriage to be spoken of as a settled thing until I have been in England and seen for myself what the women are like among whom Sir Roydon Garth would naturally find a wife."

Mark Mowbray caught eagerly at a slight straw of hope.

"And if you feel that you cannot marry him?" he asked.

"I shall go back to California, I suppose, unless I can keep myself by some sort of work in England. It would not matter much what I did."

"It would matter to me!" he said passionately. "Tell me that, if you do not marry this man to whom you are engaged, you will come and be my wife. You will always find me waiting to marry you. You might promise me that at least."

Lilac shook her head.

"Whether I marry Sir Roydon Garth or not," she said slowly and with effort, "my heart will always be his. You see that it would be desecration, therefore, to talk of any other marriage."

"No, no!" he cried. "I do not ask you to love me—for years, at any rate—I ask only the right to care for you—to have the opportunity, which marriage alone could give, of gradually winning your heart for myself. But it is useless speking of that now; you still believe in your hero. Only remember that, when you want me, you will find me waiting to serve you, without asking for your love in return. I suppose we shall not have much more opportunity of chatting with each other if Major Emmott misjudges you so much on account of our talks, so I had better give you this at once. I put it into my pocket with the intention of giving it to you to-night." He drew a small book from the pocket of his coat as he spoke. "It is a copy of some of my short stories," he explained, as he handed it to her, "and, if you keep it, you will always have the address of my publisher, through whom you will at all times be able to find me. And, if you discover that things are different in England from what you hoped, remember that there is one friend ever thinking of you, ever ready to help you. Good-bye, Miss Marvel!"

He seized her hand impulsively and raised it reverently to his lips as they stood leaning over the vessel's side. Most of the passengers were at the other side of the deck, nearer to the music, which still came floating sweetly and plaintively towards them, and no one had passed to disturb their tete-a-tete; but now, as Mark Mowbray raised the girl's slender hand to his lips, a solitary form came round the corner of the deck-house strolling noiselessly towards them. It was Sabina Emmott.

Lilac waited until she had passed—she appeared not to notice the couple leaning over the bulwarks—then hurried away to her cabin, angry with the novelist for having kissed her hand, but a hundred times more angry with herself for having allowed him to love her without warning him that her heart belonged entirely to Roy. Her anger toward him passed very quickly, and it was succeeded by a great pity for the man whom she felt that she had all unconsciously injured.

She had been looking forward to telling Roy all that had passed, but she stopped with the pen in her hand, wondering whether it would be quite fair to Mark Mowbray—whether, even to her lover, she had the right of referring to a scene in which the novelist had disclosed his heart to her. Lilac was unable to decide. She hated the idea of keeping a secret of any sort from Roy, and at the same time she felt so conscious of having done Mark Mowbray an injury that she shrank from the very suspicion of doing him an injustice.

It was not until the next morning that the girl, after a sleepless night, finally made up her mind not to speak of Mark Mowbray's declaration—in a letter, at least. Perhaps, when she saw Roy, she could tell him all that he might care to know; but to set down the particulars in a letter would be hardly safe, and was scarcely necessary.

It was an unfortunate decision.

CLAY PIPES.

The Largest Factory in the World--How It Was Started.

The largest tobacco-pipe factory in the world is located in Appomattox county, near Pamplin City.

It had been known for many years prior to the war between the States that there existed clay in that county well adapted to the manufacture of tobacco pipes, but the industry was carried on in the most desultory way.

But at the close of the war the whites turned their attention to the clay deposits. It was a necessity, and not a matter of choice.

The war had swept away everything. The implements with which the pipes were manufactured were simple and rude.

The pipes were sold to local merchants, who shipped them to wholesale dealers in northern cities, who sold them to retailers throughout the country.

Among the retail dealers who purchased a lot of these poor men's pipes was a groceryman in a little town in Ohio. He sold them at from 2 to 5 cents apiece, and found them very popular.

Among those who purchased one was a wealthy citizen of the town. He smoked nothing else for some time, and finally inquired of the groceryman as to where the pipes were made. The latter could only give the name of the wholesale dealer from whom he had purchased, but from him the gentleman learned that the pipes were made from a clay bank in the County of Appomattox, in Virginia.

The gentleman saw that the pipes were of very rude construction. He grew interested, and finally his mind dwelt so much upon the subject that he went to the little town of Appomattox. He went at once to the store of the dealer in pipes, and was not long in finding that the best were made at a bank about eight miles away, at what is now Pamplin City.

The rest is soon told. The land was purchased for a small sum, buildings erected, the latest machinery installed and soon the kilns were smoking.

THE SOUTHERNERS OF TO-DAY.

They Are Not Wanting in Qualities which go to Make a Good American.

No teacher who has been brought in contact with students drawn from most of the Southern States can fail to conclude that they are in the main a remarkably fine body of young men. In essential charm of manners they are not inferior to their grandfathers; in morals they are, on an average, distinctly better in some important respects, certain vices being now more frowned upon than was the case fifty years ago; in knowledge of the world and in intellectual curiosity they are plainly superior; in sheer mental power they are not inferior, at least; and in genial kindliness and bonhomie, and in that indefinable but supreme quality, manliness, they are capable of holding their own with the youth of any land and of any age. More high seriousness of purpose might be desired for them, and a better comprehension of the importance of the intellectual side of our nature, but being Southern boys, they have the defects of their own and of their progenitors' qualities. Still, when all is said, they impress any fair judge as being just the stuff out of which a great civilization ought to be evolved. They are as good Americans, in the true sense of that term, as are to be found in any section of the Union; they have inherited the best qualities of their ancestors; they are free from the clogs of slavery; and if they have yet to struggle against political and religious intolerance, they will surely emerge the stronger for the contest.—W. P. Trent, in Atlantic Monthly.

NEWEST CUT IN DIAMONDS.

Fashion Decrees that it Should be Long and Pointed.

There is a new cut in diamonds. With the ever-changing mode in all things, gems, too, have their turn, and by those who can afford the luxury new jewels and the latest designs are an absolute diversion, if not a necessity.

At present diamonds of this style are not cut in this country, but come from France ready for setting, long and oval (almost identical in shape with the Marquise ring), and are set alone. No circle of stones is added to the new cut, they must be solitaire.

As with all new things they are expensive. In cutting much of the stone is taken off in order to make the pointed ends. The facets are most beautifully cut, and often smaller or finer than is usual. Thus they catch every ray of light. This makes the stones particularly brilliant. The least possible gold or platinum is used in mounting these gems, as it is not intended that anything shall detract from their beauty.

It is in rings exclusively that this new shape is used. They vary in price according to the weight, from $500 to $3,000. Notwithstanding their expense, all of those which recently arrived in this city from Paris have been sold.—New York Press.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"Hogan's Alley," with the original company with Gilmore & Leonard and their latest edition of this popular nonsensicality, will be the attraction at the Stillman Music Hall tonight. With this season the farce enters upon its third year of phenomenal success, everything that is new having been added to make it the laughbeater of the world, and again the Yellow Kid comes into prominence with a batch of originalities. In this edition he is in his element with his sweetheart Nelly, played by the vivacious little soubrette Mazie King, all the original characters being faithfully portrayed, Hogan and his rival Brogan being played by the propounders of Irish wit, Gilmore & Leonard, while the part of Mrs. Brogan falls in the hands of Miss Mina Shirley. Amongst the many features calculated to extract tears of laughter is "The New Hogan's Alley," the Cycle Club and the Illuminated Roof Garden. The company comprises many well-known performers which cannot fail to please.

GREETED WITH A SHOT GUN.

A Brave Man is Rev. George Hauser When Burglars Are Around.

If there are any burglars or thieves who anticipate making a raid on the home of Rev. George Hauser, of Duer street, they had better decide to stay away, for this minister is prepared to meet all comers. Last evening at a late hour Mr. Hauser was awakened from his slumbers by someone who was evidently trying to get in the house. Immediately he went to the window with his shot gun, which he keeps loaded, and saw someone leaving his yard on the run. It was too dark to distinguish who the party was, but Mr. Hauser discharged his gun, not with intent to kill, but for the purpose of frightening.

The report had a good effect, for the man never did stop running. Soon afterward Marshal Schenck appeared on the scene in answer to the report of the gun, and after learning the trouble he, together with Mr. Hauser, made a thorough investigation. Nothing was found missing, but there were evidences that someone had tried to get into the house.

THE SOMERVILLE FAIR

the second heat in the last race when "Claybourne," one of the favorites, reared up on his hind legs and fell backward on his driver. Neither horse nor man were seriously injured, however. E. B. Allen, the favorite starter, from Flemington, officiated in his usual capacity. The judges were J. W. Ballentine, Charles Opdyke and Myers M. Hodge, of Somerville. E. B. Allen, of Somerville, acted as clerk in the judges' stand.

The first race, the 3-minute class, trotting for a purse of $200, went to "Theresa B," belonging to David Tuers, of Montclair, in three straight heats. The times were 2:25½, 2:24½, 2:27½. After finishing second in the first heat, "Aeolian," James Wilcox, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., carried off three heats in the 2:20 class, trotting for a purse of $250. The first heat went to "Prince Eugene," from a North Branch stable, in 2:24½. "Aeolian" won his heats in 2:22½, 2:23 and 2:23½.

The last event was a free-for-all, purse $300, in which "Syra," the property of Elwood Smith, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., won three straight heats, breaking the track record in the last. The heats were driven in 2:19, 2:18¾ and 2:15½. The track record had been 2:18. There were no Plainfield entries in any of the events.

could not release Mr. Smalley. This was a phase of the matter that Smalley had not considered. He stated as his reasons for wanting to be released from the bond, that Vaughn cut up so many "capers" he was afraid the court would come upon him for the money.

A heated discussion then took place between Lawyer McClure, who was appealed to by Sweeney, who by this time had got into hot water, and DeMeza. Justice Mosher refused to have anything to do with the matter as he claimed not to have jurisdiction, so there is nothing for Smalley to do except to take Vaughn to Elizabeth and deliver him to the court, at the same time asking to be released from the bond.

Now there appears to be nothing in the way of Vaughn's marriage to Hattie November 22d. Stewart and his wife are at odds over the approaching nuptials, but they have secured papers of separation, and are living apart. Hattie and Vaughn, the cause of all the trouble and misery, are happy in each other, and in two short months will tread the path to Hymen's altar.

The argument between Lawyers McClure and DeMeza waxed warmer and warmer. Mr. McClure insisted that Justice Mosher had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that he had no power to release Smalley. Finally, Mr. McClure said he was tired of the controversy, and went Vaughn's bond himself.

Discharged in Court.

Barney Cronly was given a hearing in Justice Mosher's court this morning on a charge preferred by Barney Eifenstein of kicking him. Eifenstein had two witnesses on his side, but, when they got on the stand, their testimony was in favor of Cronly. Willie Sweeney represented Cronly, and made a motion that the prisoner be discharged as there was no evidence to hold him. This the Justice granted.

SOLDIER IN TROUBLE.

NEW YORK VOLUNTEER TAKEN ILL IN THE STREET.

A Plainfield Young Woman Found Him and Took Him to the Hospital for the Night—Left This Morning for Home.

Muhlenberg Hospital sheltered one of Uncle Sam's heroes last evening in the person of Thomas A. Mellville, of Company G, First Regiment, N. Y. Volunteers. How this soldier happened to be in Plainfield no one knows, but he was found on the street early last evening by a young woman of this city, who assisted him to the hospital.

It was learned that Mellville was suffering from exhaustion as a result of an attack of malarial fever, and while walking about he fell in the street. He did not exactly know how he came to be in Plainfield, nor could he explain much about himself. He is 42 years of age and unmarried.

He was kept at the hospital over night, and this morning was allowed to go. He immediately returned to New York to his home. The name of the young woman who took Mellville to the hospital has not yet been learned. She did not give her name, but said that she would return to the hospital today to see how the soldier was getting along, but she will be disappointed in her errand.

An Odd Funeral Custom.

Swiss funeral customs are most peculiar. At the death of a person the family inserts a formal, black-edged announcement in the papers asking for sympathy, and stating that "the mourning urn" will be exhibited during certain hours on a special day. In front of the house where the person died there is placed a little black table, covered with a black cloth, on which stands a black jar. Into this the friends and acquaintances of the family drop little black-margined visiting cards, sometimes with a few words of sympathy on them. The urn is put on the table on the day of the funeral. Only men ever go to the churchyard, and they generally follow the hearse on foot.

INTENSE SUFFERING

FROM DYSPEPSIA AND STOMACH TROUBLE.

Dr. Redwell relates an interesting account of what he considers a remarkable cure of acute stomach trouble and chronic dyspepsia by the use of the new discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He says: The patient was a man who had suffered to my knowledge for years with dyspepsia. Everything he ate seemed to sour and create acid and gases in the stomach; he had pains like rheumatism in the back, shoulder blades and limbs, fullness and distress after eating, poor appetite and loss of flesh; the heart became affected, causing palpitation and sleeplessness at night.

I gave him powerful nerve tonics and blood remedies, but to no purpose. As an experiment I finally bought a fifty cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a drug store and gave them to him. Almost immediate relief was given and after he had used four boxes he was to all appearances fully cured.

There was no more acidity or sour watery risings, no bloating after meals, the appetite was vigorous and he has gained between 10 and 12 pounds in weight of solid, healthy flesh.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are advertised and sold in drug stores yet I consider them a most valuable addition to any physician's line of remedies, as they are perfectly harmless and can be given to children or invalids or in any condition of the stomach with perfect safety, being harmless and containing nothing but vegetable and fruit essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal.

Without any question they are the safest, most effective cure for indigestion, biliousness, constipation and all derangements of the stomach however slight or severe.

The Advantage of Teaching.

Returning from school with a pumpkin seed in her hand a little girl informed her mother that her teacher had taught her that the seed was white but the pumpkin was yellow. The mother asked: "What is the color of the vines?" The five-year-old said that her teacher had not taught her that. "But," said her mother, "you know, for you have seen the vines in the garden." "Of course I have, but we are not expected to know anything until we have been taught."—The Philistine.

ICE TO BE MADE BY ARTIFICIAL MEANS.

Mild Winters To No Longer Decide Summer Prices.

THE HYGEIA'S NEW PLANT.

EXPECTED TO BE IN OPERATION IN THE COURSE OF A WEEK.

The Westinghouse System to be Used—Capacity of the Plant Will be Twenty Tons a Day—Nothing But Filtered Water to be Used—Ammonia an Important Factor in Congealing the Water.

The art of manufacturing ice is by no means a new thing, but in the course of a week, one of the best up-to-date plants will be in operation, and the people will have an opportunity of purchasing ice that is absolutely pure and at a reasonable price that will not fluctuate with mild winters. For this plant the people of Plainfield can thank the Hygeia Ice Company, of which Harry G. Runkle is the president. Associated with him are some of the best business men in town, including DeWitt C. Ivins, James Clark, and a number of others.

The plant is located on North avenue between Richmond street and the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. The spot is ideal in every particular, and a very modest but thoroughly complete building has been erected. The grounds are nicely graded and fine lawns will, by another year, be seen surrounding the building. The Hygeia Ice Company was organized sometime ago, and early in this year work was commenced to erect a plant. During the past summer little was thought of the plant, and very few people know what has been accomplished. After the building was erected the company made a contract with the Westinghouse, Church, Kerr Company, of New York, to furnish them with an ice-making plant, to be the very latest throughout, and the company has succeeded in accomplishing their desire, for they have secured the best in the market. The Westinghouse Company sent Axel Lofberg, one of their experienced men, to this city to superintend the construction of the plant, and recently a representive of The Daily Press called on Mr. Lofberg. This man was found to be very obliging and willing to explain the working of the system, which will no doubt be of interest to everyone in this city.

The system is known as the Westinghouse system of freezing, otherwise known as the block system. There are two 100-horse-power boilers, one 100-horse-power compound engine, two quadruple belt driving ammonia compressers with a capacity of making twenty tons of ice per day. There is a freezing tank 6x6 feet high, 25 feet long with twenty-four coils of pipe. On each side of the coil ten tons of ice can be frozen, making ice twelve inches thick. It requires from six to seven days to make clear ice. The best of lumber has been used in making the tanks, and endless electric-welded full-weight heavy pipe has been used for the coils.

After the freezing tank is filled ammonia is expanded into freezing coils and then commences the freezing. An hydros-ammonia is used in this system and it takes up the heat from the water in the freezing tank and forms ice on the coil pipes. At the same time the compressors are taking the evaporated ammonia in freezing coils and compresses it into the condenser, and from the condenser water is obtained to sprinkle the condensing pipes. In doing this the water takes the heat from the ammonia, and the ammonia then goes from the condenser to a liquid receiver, which is used as a storage for ammonia, and is ready for use again. This ammonia will last a long time, provided there are no defects in the pipes. The pipes are under a 300-pound air pressure.

The water used for freezing is from a deep artesian well. It first goes through a primary filter and then through a regular sand-filter. The water is constantly filtered by means of a circulation pump which takes water from the freezing tank through the filter and forces it back into what is known as the "head bay." It is then circulated through every coil in the freezing tank.

The ice is harvested by means of a steam-cutter of Westinghouse patent. When the plant is under full headway ice is being made constantly. As fast as it is made it is removed and room is made for more water to freeze. There is attached to the large freezing tank a fore-cooler tank in which the water is kept and cooled before it goes into the freezing process. After

PLAINFIELDERS PLEASED

WOULD HAVE SENT A SOLID DELEGATION FOR FOSTOR VOORHEES.

Now They Are Glad That There Isn't Going to be Any Contest and Think it Will Advance Party Interests.

The withdrawal of Congressman Mahlon Pitney from the Gubernatorial contest was a genuine surprise for the Republicans of Plainfield as well as the rest of the State. It cannot be doubted but that had Pitney remained in the race for the Republican nomination, Plainfield would have sent a solid delegation for Foster M. Voorhees. Voorhees is from Union county and is very popular here as in other parts of the State. He had the support of the Republican organization and while there might have been a few disgruntled politicians who would not support him and prefered Pitney, there is no doubt but that this city, at least, would have stood firmly by the Acting-Governor.

When the announcement of Pitney's withdrawal did come, the local politicians were surprised. They were also well pleased for it took an unpleasant factor out of the coming campaign that they dreaded. It united the Republicans on one candidate and prevented a split that might have seriously interfered with the chances of the G. O. P. candidate.

This narrowing down of the race for the nomination to one man will greatly reduce interest in the primaries which are to be held Monday evening. Delegates will then be elected to the Gubernatorial convention at Trenton, Sept. 22d, when the Republican candidate will be chosen. There now seems little doubt but that Voorhees will be nominated by acclamation.

FOR A RESPONSIBLE POSITION.

Examination for County School Superintendent Soon to be Made.

It may be of interest to a great many people to know that Thursday afternoon, September 22d, at 3 p. m., candidates for the position of county superintendent of public schools to fill the position now held by Superintendent Holmes will be considered. The committee on education, having charge of this matter consists of J. Owen, of Montclair; B. H. Campbell, of Elizabeth; S. St. Jonn McCutchen, of North Plainfield; Samuel Pierson, of Morristown; S. R. Morse, of Alantic City; Judge Francis Scott, of Paterson; Otto Crouse, of Jersey City. They will meet at the Battin High School, Elizabeth, and the meeting will take the form of a conference in which various candidates will be sized up as to their personal qualifications.

The present holder of the position is a candidate for the place, and no doubt he will have plenty of opposition. Any person can apply for the position and appear before the committee. It is customary for the committee on education to make a recommendation to the State Board of Education as to who they think should have the place, and the recommendation is usually adopted. Any information about the contest will cheerfully be given by any of the members of the committe on education.

DID SHE YELL "PEEK-A-BOO?"

Mrs. Clicknor, Tired of Hickey's Stares, Let Him Have a Little Sarcasm.

The Clicknors and the Hickeys aired their joint troubles in the city court this morning. It all arose over the fact that Mr. Hickey sometimes stood in the rear of his premises and looked toward the domicile of Mrs. Clicknor. The latter personage said that Hickey stared at her. Hickey says she yelled "peek-a boo" at him on one occasion. Then it is said that Hickey felt called upon to address a remark to Mrs. Clicknor's daughter. It wound up, according to the Hickey story, in Mrs. Clicknor calling her neighbor some naughty names.

The Judge listened to it with patience and then declared that they were all not guilty, but they must not do it again. Then the Clicknors and the Hickeys departed.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At the regular meeting of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., last night, a committee was appointed, consisting of Henry Liefke, Peter VanFleet and C. L. Leland, to draw up a set of resolutions of condolence to be sent to Mrs. E. E. Marshall. Another committee, composed of J. D. Moon, V. W. Nash and J. W. A. Bauersachs, was instructed to draft another set of resolutions to be presented to International Lodge, No. 6, of Niagara Falls, the members of which took charge of Mr. Marshall when he was taken ill there.

INCREASED TAX RATE DUE TO THE COUNTY.

Mayor Wilson Addresses Taxpayers of the Borough.

THE BOROUGH GOVERNMENT

IT HAS BEEN CONDUCTED AS ECONOMICALLY AS POSSIBLE.

The Actual Taxes for Municipal Government are Less Than Last Year but an Increase in the County Rate Makes the Total a Trifle Higher—A Comparison of Taxes of the Two Years.

Mayor John F. Wilson, of the borough, has issued the following public letter:

To the Taxpayers of North Plainfield:

Your Mayor and Council have made a determined effort during the past year to keep the expenses of the borough at the lowest figures possible consistent with the maintenance of that standard of public service and improvements which our citizens demand and have the right to expect.

As the result of their efforts, it was confidently expected by them that this year a reduction of the tax rate would be possible, and it is gratifying to be able to say that so far as those items of the tax which your local authorities control are concerned, a material reduction has been made, the borough rate being 81 cents this year as against 83 cents last year, and the special school rate being 58 cents this year as against 59 cents last year.

This result has been accomplished only by the most careful management of public affairs, and will doubtless meet with your cordial approval.

There has, however, been an increase in those items over which your Mayor and Council have no control whatever, namely, the county tax, which comes within the province of the Board of Freeholders, and which has increased from 49 cents last year to 53 cents this year, an increase of four points, so that in spite of three points reduction in the local rate, the total rate this year is one point higher than last, but for this your borough authorities are in no wise responsible.

It is confidently asserted that our assessments are more equitable and fair as between our citizens than ever before. Some have been increased, and some, excessively assessed heretofore, have been reduced, that each shall pay his fair share.

The following is a comparison of the tax bill of last year and of this year, and shows the rate per cent. on each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation, and the different items which go to make up the whole. The total rate last year was $2.19 and this year by reason of the increase in county rate it is $2.20. But for that increase it would be $2.16:

	County Rate	State School	Borough	Board of Health	Special School	Total

It will be seen that the school tax is the largest item, being over thirty-eight per cent. of the whole tax.

Every one hundred dollars paid in tax is appropriated as follows:

Public Schools	$ 38.19
County Expenses	24.09
Borough Expenses	36.82
	$100.00

The above is submitted to the public with the belief that our citizens are entitled to know and interested in all our public affairs.

John F. Wilson,
Mayor.

Dated, September 16th, 1898.

Death From Creeping Paralysis.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Sept. 17—The death of Miss M. L. Stout, aged seventy-one years, a resident of this place, occurred Thursday of creeping paralysis. She was the first of five sisters to die. The other sisters are all advanced in years, but are hale and hearty. The funeral services will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the house. The deceased was an aunt of Chauncey F. Stout, of the borough.

Died in His Eightieth Year.

The death of John V. Hulick, of Gladstone, occurred last evening. He was the father of Daniel L. Hulick, of Duer street. He was 80 years of age and leaves five children and a wife. Mr. Hulick was a tailor by trade and was one of the first men to be employed by Mr. Schepflin on West Front street. He resided in this city for many years.

SKILLED MECHANICS IN A LABOR UNION.

Machinists and Moulders Hold a Preliminary Meeting.

HEARD A SENSIBLE TALK.

A LABOR LEADER WHO DEPLORES STRIKES AT ALL TIMES.

William Perrine, Business Agent of the Moulders' Union, Explained the Benefits the Men Would Receive by Affiliating With the Proposed Organization—Bosses Will Be Interviewed

There is a good prospect of the machinists and moulders of this city organizing into a local branch of the International Association of Machinists and the Iron Moulders' Union of North America.

A preliminary meeting was held last night in one of the lodge rooms in Washington Hall, which was addressed by Wm. Perrine, of New York, business agent of the Moulders' Union, and George G. Cameron, of New York, organizer of the Association of Machinists, and at another meeting to be held Thursday evening further steps will be taken to complete the organization if there is a desire among the workingmen here to do so.

There are no such organizations here. The men think if there were, wages would be kept up to a fair average and hours would be uniform. Mr. Perrine's remarks were much enjoyed. He is a workingman himself and sympathizes with the men. Holding the important position in the union that he does, he is able to speak intelligently of it. Among other things Mr. Perrine said he didn't believe in strikes. This he had determined five years ago. Seven out of ten strikes, he said, were the fault of the men, and the same number were unnecessary. A plain, sensible talk with the bosses in many instances would procure for the men what they wanted without the strike.

Mr. Perrine said that by tomorrow the bosses in town would know about the meeting and would be on their guard. Some time between now and Thursday Mr. Perrine will have a talk with the foremen and bosses of the several shops and prepare the way for the future steps. There were about thirty men out last night, but a little missionary work will be done before the next meeting, and there will no doubt be a larger number present.

STOLE BIRD'S STAMPS.

It Was a Collection That He Prized Highly for Their Associations.

Last week Lewis Bird, of the borough, had a valuable collection of foreign and domestic postage stamps. Today they are gone. Bird thinks that they were stolen by a sneak thief who has been in the office of his brother, Lawyer George Bird, where the stamps were. He has notified the police, and a vigorous search will be made for the guilty one.

The collection comprises 450 stamps, many of them of considerable value. They were all gathered eight or ten years ago when Bird attended school, and he thinks a great deal of the collection. He is unable to place a money value on the stamps, as he has never had them catalogued, but prizes them highly because of the pleasure he experienced in gathering them.

The stamps were all in an album, and were ordinarily kept at home. Bird is studying law with his brother, on East Front street, and brought the collection down town the other day to show to an acquaintance who had asked to see it. The album was left lying around on the desk or in the book-case until yesterday, when Bird saw this acquaintance and invited him in to look over the stamps. Then they were gone, and patient searching failed to reveal them. Bird has no clue to the thief, and doesn't know whether they were stolen by someone who entered the room during his or his brother's absence, or whether a member of the light-fingered fraternity picked the album up and hid it under his coat in the midst of a conversation.

Ate Watermelon.

The members of Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, held a watermelon sociable at the home of Mrs. Wm. E. Koyer, of East Third street, last night. It was an impromptu affair and arrangements were made for it Wednesday night. Songs and recitations were the order of the evening, and a good time was had by all. The committee in charge consisted of Wm. B. Ayres, chairman; Mrs. William E. Koyer and Miss Dora Bennett.

FIREMAN BADLY HURT WHILE DOING DUTY.

Severely Burned by Explosion of Nitric Acid.

GEORGE FEIRING THE MAN.

HE WILL BE LAID UP AT HOME FOR SOME TIME.

Was Fighting a Fire on a Central Freight Car When the Carboy of Acid Exploded and Sent the Liquid in a Shower Over His Body—Severely Burned His Flesh and Set Fire to Clothes.

An early morning fire, unimportant in itself, became a notable one through the serious injury of one of the paid members of the Plainfield fire department. George Feiring, driver of the chemical engine, was badly burned by the explosion of a carboy of nitric acid while endeavoring to extinguish the burning fluid.

There came a call by telephone at fire headquarters this morning at 7:15 o'clock. Second Assistant Engineer Jennings was on duty. He hurried to the freight-house, whence came the call, with the chemical engine. Chief Doane was notified and ordered No. 2 hose wagon there also. The Chief followed in his wagon.

When the Chief arrived Feiring, the driver of the chemical, was standing on a flat car on track No. 1 handling the stream from the chemical. The car was one of three loaded with carboys of nitric acid en route for the powder factory at Pompton Lakes. The cars were part of a west-bound freight train.

During the various vicissitudes of transportation, one of the large glass carboys, which contains ten gallons of the dangerous acid, was broken. The acid spread over the car setting fire to the straw and woodwork of the packing and also starting a blaze on the side of the car.

The flame had been seen by one of the men at the freight-house who telephoned to the fire headquarters for aid.

Feiring had climbed on the car and was fighting the fire with the chemical stream when a carboy right at his feet exploded with a great roar. The flaming liquid was precipitated fifteen feet in the air, falling in a shower on the defenceless fireman. Feiring wore his regular working suit and had his sleeves rolled up.

With a yell he threw the hose from him and sprang to the ground just as Chief Doane came up. The Chief heard his calls and seizing the hose, turned the stream on him. Meanwhile Feiring had slipped out of his burning clothing.

The acid had fallen in great spots on his bare arms and ate right into the flesh. Other drops of the acid fell on his face around his mouth. There was a large burn on his left cheek, near his nose and another close to his eye. On the back of his neck there was a large burn made by the flying acid. His clothing caught fire and was eaten full of holes by the acid. His underclothing was also badly eaten.

A can of soda from the chemical engine was brought and the contents spread over the injured parts. Then Feiring was bundled into the Chief's wagon and taken to headquarters where Dr. Clawson was hurriedly summoned and dressed the burns. Then William Addis, Jr., put the injured fireman in a hack and took him to his home on Harrison street.

It will be a week or more before Feiring will be able to be out again and probably longer before he can return to duty. The wounds are painful and it will be necessary to wait for them to heal up.

In Good Sanitary Condition.

Inspector Pangborn, of the Borough Board of Health, has made a thorough inspection of the residence of Mrs. Harned, 19 Craig place, and finds that there is but one case of typhoid fever there, and that was under the care of a trained nurse. He reports to the Board of Health that the house and outbuilding are kept in the best sanitary shape. The house of Mrs. DeBaud, 10 Craig place, has also been inspected and the condition of things there is reported to be perfectly sanitary.

Didn't Pay Funeral Expenses.

P. Casey & Son have brought suit against Michael and Jonn O'Keeffe for $94 for burying their brother, who died three months ago the 26th of this month. The bill includes a casket, burial robe, gloves, carriage hire, etc. The case was to have been tried this morning, but upon motion of the plaintiff's counsel it went over for one week.

HARD AT WORK NOW.

MANY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS ENROLLED THIS YEAR.

Senior Class Small—Three Post-Graduates Back—Improvement and Changes in Course and Methods—The Enrolled.

Two weeks have passed since the opening of the Plainfield High School, at the end of the long vacation, and the regular routine of work is going forward smoothly and without incident. The attendance this year is larger than last in the lower grades. The Senior class, however, is smaller.

There are now registered as pupils in the High School 139 young people. They are divided as follows: Senior class, including three post-graduates, 22; Junior class, 24; Third class, 34, and Fourth class, 59. The three post-graduates, who have returned this year to continue their studies, are Miss Edith Clark, Miss Gertrude Cathcart and Henry Pierce.

There is no change in the different courses over that of last year except that the commercial course is now well under way and has started its second term, taking up new subjects and advanced work. Then the modern languages have been taught one year, and the second-year class in German has been started.

In the scientific department there has been much improvement made through the introduction of new apparatus, which will give Mr. Meredith more scope in explaining the different sciences and allowing the pupils to work out some of the experiments for themselves.

The school library, which has for some time been stowed away in an obscure corner of the building, has been brought to light and placed in the new bookcases in Assembly Hall that the Board ordered last spring. They are a great improvement.

A HORSEMAN KILLED.

He Was Driving a Stallion, When the Bit Broke and Fretz Was Thrown.
[Special to The Daily Press.]

Somerville, September 17.—Reed Fretz, a horse dealer, who was well-known throughout New Jersey and Pennsylvania, met with a frightful accident here yesterday morning, which resulted in his death last evening. He had been showing some horses here at the Somerset County Fair. Yesterday morning he was driving a stallion which has a running record of 1:45½ from the fair grounds into town. As he turned into Main street, the bit broke, and the stallion ran down Main street at a fearful rate. In front of Reusswig's drug store the sulky ran into the carriage of Miss Amy Davy, overturning the carriage and throwing Miss Davy out, but not seriously injuring her.

Fretz was thrown about forty feet and landed on his head and shoulder in the middle of the street. His skull was fractured at the base of the brain, and he never recovered consciousness. He died at about 6 o'clock last evening. The members of his family arrived before his death.

The Soldier's Prayer.

The Royal Santiago Circle, Mothers of American Protectors, will hold their prayer and praise service Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Stewart, John street, near Hope chapel. Subject: "The Lord's Prayer Written by a Soldier on a Battlefield." The meeting will be led by Mrs. Wm. J. Ford.

Pastor Downey Home.

The friends of Rev. W. Montgomery Downey will be pleased to learn that he has returned from his vacation and will assume charge of the services as usual at the Church of the Redeemer.

Mrs. R. F. R Huntsman and family, of Westervelt avenue, returned yesterday from a summer outing in Maine.

L. B. Bromfield and family, of East Sixth street, have returned after spending the summer in the Catskills.

J. Parker Mason and family, of Central avenue, are home from their summer outing spent in the Adirondack Mountains.

CITY SEES VALUE OF TROLLEY FRANCHISE.

New Conditions to be Made by the Common Council.

PAST ACTION RESCINDED.

NEW ORDINANCE FOR STREET RAILWAY RIGHT TO BE DRAFTED.

Common Council Took Important and Unexpected Action on Advice of Corporation Counsel—Plainfield Streets are Very Important to the Success of the Scheme of the Private Trolley Promoters.

The City Council held the shortest meeting on record last evening. It required just six minutes to transact the business of the evening. All the members were present and President Baker called the members to order at 8 o'clock. Six minutes later the meeting adjourned.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the trolley matter. Mr. Barrows moved that the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend their tracks be received. It was received and read, after which Mr. Barrows stated that the corporation counsel had advised that inasmuch as the Board of Freeholders had given notice that they intend to make a fight for the control of certain city streets for the county trolley it would be better for the council to rescind all previous action on the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and start over again from the beginning.

This action was concurred in by the other members of the Council and Monday evening, Oct. 3d, was set as the date when the petition of the trolley company would be received, at which time a public hearing will be given on the matter.

This concluded the business of the evening, but the action taken means far more than appears at first thought. Within the past few days certain facts have come to the knowledge of the Council that have opened their eyes. They are now confronted with the fact that the trolley company, represented by Thomas Nevins as president, has secured the franchises to construct and operate a trolley line between Elizabeth and Fanwood, and that all that is now needed to complete the line is the right of way to come into Plainfield from Fanwood. All of this is in opposition to the John Kean scheme.

In view of these facts it is understood that the Plainfield Street Railway Company stands willing to do most anything to secure the franchise connecting Fanwood and Scotch Plains with Plainfield.

When the Council learned these facts the members began to think that they might as well get something for the franchise in return for giving the company a life-long lease for practically nothing, while John Kean had given $250,000 for the right of way from the Board of Freeholders. For this reason the ordinance has been rescined and a new start will be made. In starting over again the Council will be very careful in drafting an ordinance and will see that the city gets all that is possible within reason for the franchise they propose to give.

Lawyers Debated on Legal Points.

After a lengthy trial in which the two lawyers debated on various legal points, Charles Saueracker was ordered to appear in City Court next Saturday morning when Judge DeMeza will pronounce sentence on him. Saueracker was represented by Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. W. A. Codington was the lawyer for the complainant, Charles Doyle.

Described Work in the Camps.

John Whiting, of New York, who has been engaged in Y. M. C. SITUATION AT MANILA

No Extra Force Needed by Gen. Otis.

TROUBLE NOT EXPECTED.

Reassuring Telegrams Received from Him. A Crisis Rendered Unlikely by the Departure of Insurgents from the Suburbs The Customs Administration.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The following dispatches have been received from General Otis:

Manila, Sept. 16.

Adjutant General, Army, Washington:

In my opinion, based upon present indications, no further force required. Insurgent leaders in politics and army in excitable frame of mind, but better portion amenable to reason and desire to make approved reputation before civilized world.

OTIS,
Commanding.

Manila, Sept. 16.

Adjutant General, Washington:

Telegraphed situation briefly yesterday. Insurgents have accepted demand and evacuated entire city of Manila, except small force in one outlying district. No difficulty anticipated and no concessions made to them. They express strong desire to maintain friendly intercourse with United States government in all particulars. They organized congress Thursday at Malolos, twenty miles north of city to frame plan of government.

Manila very quiet. Military government being perfected gradually and large force policing and cleansing city. Health of command satisfactory. Trade and commerce active. Treasury receipts since August 14, $540,000, Mexican current money. Philippines monthly expenses will aggregate at least $350,000; nearly one-half required to subsist 13,000 Spanish prisoners. Believe that receipts will largely exceed expenditures. Tariffs and duties imposed, as directed by president on July 12, but received in currency of country, as on gold basis would almost double former Spanish duties. United States laws applied for admission of Chinese and opium; sales of licenses for lotteries and other pastimes opposed to public morals discontinued.

OTIS,
Commanding.

The dispatch saying that Aguinaldo has assembled all the Filipinos at Malolas gives no apprehension to war department officials, as they feel satisfied that the opportunity for a real crisis was past when Aguinaldo removed his forces from the suburbs of Manila. So long as the American forces in and about Manila are left untrammeled, there is no disposition to restrict Aguinaldo in holding meetings of his followers outside of the immediate field of American operations.

Dr. Lindheim Dead.

New York, Sept. 17.—Dr. George W. Lindheim, a surgeon of the Eighth New York volunteers, who had charge of two hundred men of that command on their recent journey from the camp at Chickamauga, died yesterday at his home, No. 945 Railroad avenue, from malignant typhoid fever. He was 27 years old and had been a member of the Eighth for two years.

He was formerly a Red Cross nurse, and on going into active service was assigned to the hospital corps. Exaggerated reports of the condition of the Eighth's men in his charge were sent out during the progress of the detachment from Chickamauga, but on arrival here it was found that none was dead; since then most of the men have recovered, and Dr. Lindheim's death is the first to occur.

He Couldn't Be Bothered So Often.

A Walker County preacher, who farms for a living, has been growing in popularity as a performer of marriage ceremonies for some time, and recently he found that the demands thus made upon his time seriously interrupted his farm work, and, as the marriage business brought no pay, he set about to devise some means to escape the interruptions it imposed. He wrote his ceremony on a sheet of foolscap and nailed it on his gate post with the following instructions underneath:

"If anybody wants to get married they can just drive up here and read the ceremony, lay the license on the gate post and drive off.

"P. S.—If you have got any woolen socks or home-knit suspenders you want to leave, just pitch 'em over in the yard and the first time I see you I'll say thanks."—Atlanta Journal.

No Runaway Horses in Russia.

Runaway horses are unknown in Russia. No one drives there without having a thin cord with a running noose around the neck of the animal. When an animal bolts the cord is pulled, and the horse stops as soon as it feels the pressure on the windpipe.

THE ALAMO ARRIVES.

With Troops from Pennsylvania, Illinois Wisconsin and District of Columbia.

New York, Sept. 17.—The United States transport Alamo (No. 6) docked at Bay street, Pennsylvania Railroad wharves, at an early hour yesterday morning with 501 men, 16 officers and 20 civilians on board.

The ship was eight days from Ponce, Porto Rico, to New York, and during four days of the voyage she was driven through a howling hurricane, during which many of the men were violently seasick.

There was no serious case of illness on board when the ship was docked, and all were able to march to the trains in waiting to take the troops home. The following trops were on board the vessel:

Companies F, G and H of the Second Wisconsin regiment, Company A of the First Illinois infantry, Company H of the First District of Columbia, Battery C, Pennsylvania volunteers, Company A of the First Illinois, and Company H of the First District of Columbia constituted the provisional battalion of engineers.

The troops were in command of Major Gruetzniacher of the Second Wisconsin. The officers reported a comfortable trip, but many of the men complained of the rations served them and declared that the fresh meat shipped for the officers was spoiled before half the voyage was completed owing to a shortage of ice. The officers declared that they had no complaints to make.

There were two mascots and three stowaways on board the transport. The latter were members of the Nineteenth regulars, who were homesick. One of them, named Diviney, was very ill when the transport docked, and was taken to the Jersey City hospital.

The mascots were two natives of Porto Rico. One was a small boy, who had attached himself to Major Sackettt of the engineer corps. His name is Joe. He is dressed in the regulation suit of kahki.

SECRETRY DAY RESIGNS

Assistant Secretary Moore Also Gives Up His Office.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The cabinet was in session an hour yesterday, Secretary Alger being the only absentee. Secretary Day tendered to the president his resignation as secretary of state and took leave of his cabinet associates.

Assistant Secretary Moore of the state department also tendered his resignation to thte president.

A telegram from General Otis at Manila was read, showing that the situation there was entirely satisfactory. The instructions to the peace commission were gone over for thte last time and officially approved.

Senator Gray, who is detained in Philadelphia, will not come to Washington, as his time will be limited, but will go direct from Philadelphia to the Campania, upon which the commissioners will sail to-day. The other peace commissioners left for New York last night.

The French ambassador is back from a three weeks' outing at Lake George, Lake Champlain and in Canada. M. Cambon and M. Thiebautcalled at the state department yesterday to say good bye prior to Judge Day's departure for Paris and to convey to him in behalf of the French government assurances that every courtesy and attention would be given the American commissioners.

The French government has invited the commissioners to meet in the famous Salon des Ambassadeurs, which is a part of the foreign office, and is one of the most sumptuous apartments in Europe. The invitation has been accepted.

It is probable that M. Cambon himself will leave for Paris in about two weeks, but this is not finally settled. In case he goes, it is said the trip would not have any significance in connection with the meeting of the peace commission.

THE FLEET REORGANIZED.

Only Thirty-two War Vessels to Be Retained on the North Atlantic Station.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The secretary of the navy has ordered a complete reorganization of the North Atlantic fleet on a peace basis. The fleet at present consists of about one hundred vessels. Only thirty-two will be retained on the North Atlantic station. The others have been detached, but not yet assigned to stations.

The four ships purchased from the Morgan line at the breaking out of the war—the Prairie, the Dixie, the Yankee and the Yosemite—together with the Badger and the Panther, which have been used as marine transports, are ordered to League island, Philadelphia, where they will be held in reserve.

The ships retained in active service on the North Atlantic station are as follows:

Battleships—Indiana, Massachusetts and Texas.

Armored Cruisers—New York and Brooklyn.

Monitors—Amphitrite, Miantonomoh, Puritan and Terror.

Cruisers—Cincinnati, Detroit, Marblehead, Montgomery, Bancroft, Newark, New Orleans and San Francisco.

Gunboats—Mayflower, Castine, Machias, Marietta, Nashville, Princeton, Topeka and Wilmington.

Auxiliaries—Fern, Hist, Potomac, Scorpion, Wasp, Resolute and Alvarado.

Ambassador Hay's Successor.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 17.—Ex-Secretary John W. Foster was a caller at the White House yesterday.

It is supposed that he was sent for by the president with a view to considering some questions in connection with the appointment of an ambassador to England.

The president is a good deal troubled over this appointment. The men who desire it most are not the ones fitted for it, and those whom the president would like to appoint do not care for the place.

Spanish Peace Board.

Madrid, Sept. 17.—It is reported here that the Spanish peace commission will be composed of Senor Montero Rios, president of the Senate; Senor Villarrutia, General Cerreo, General Ascharraga and Senor Uzzais.

But it is added that further changes are possible.

HISSES FOR GEN. TORAL

He Gets a Rough Reception from His People at Vigo.

SILVELA ASSAILS SAGASTA

Gen. Linares Replies to the Accusations With Disdain. The Queen Regent Signs the Law for Ceding Territory. Spanish Ambassador Pays a Farewell Visit to the Queen Regent.

Madrid, Sept. 17.—Toral, who surrendered the Spanish army at Santiago to the Americans, arrived at Vigo from Santiago yesterday. A great crowd awaited his arrival on the pier, and greeted the general with a storm of hisses and abuse. The demonstration was so violent that General Toral returned to the ship, deciding not to land at Vigo.

El Libral says that General Linares, formerly governor of the province of Santiago de Cuba, has wired Count de Almenas as follows:

"The responsibility for our misfortunes is directly traceable to persons like you, bearing titles and holding seats in the chamber for their own benefit, who imagine that they can with impunity injure those who suffered silently and even attempt to divert their rewards. I, who honorably fought, reply to your accusations with disdain."

Senor Silvela, the leader of the Conservatives, has issued a manifesto calling upon his adherents to use their efforts, when peace is concluded, to place his party in power.

Sagasta and his government, Silvela declares, are entirely responsible for the awful loss of Spanish lives, the destruction of the Spanish navy and the surrender of Spanish territory.

El Liberal publishes a report of an interview with Senor Silvela, in which he denounces Premier Sagasta as the cause of the latest and worst of Spanish misfortunes.

Senator Sagasta, leaving the palace yesterday afternoon, referred to the interview as being of no importance. The ideas contained in it, he said, were intended to represent his proposed utterances in his undelivered speech in the Cortes. Silvela, he said, had been unwilling and unactive in the country's emergency.

Senor Sagasta said that he did not consider the distturbances at Vigo upon the occasion of the arrival of General Toral of any importance.

The queen regent has signed the law authorizing the cession of territory.

Senor Leon y Castillo, Spanish ambassador to France, paid a farewell visit to the queen regent yesterday upon the occasion of his return to Paris.

EVACUATION OF PORTO RICO.

Formal Withdrawal of Spanish Troops to Begin To-morrow.

San Juan, Island of Porto Rico, Sept. 17.—At their meeting Thursday the Spanish evacuation commissioners agreed to begin the formal withdrawal of their lines within two days. They will evacuate Laros, San Sebastian and Aguadilla, in the northwest of the island, withdrawing toward the capital. Under the armistice they could not withdraw their outposts without permission.

Detachments of the Eleventh infantry will occupy this territory and raise the American flag. The abandonment of other outposts will follow. The Spanish commissioners understand perfectly that the evacuation of the islands must be in accordance with the terms of the protocol and as soon as transports can be provided.

Transports from the fever infected ports of Cuba cannot, they say, be used to convey the uninfected troops from Porto Rico. The troops from Cuba and Porto Ric oare to be landed at different ports in Spain. The Spanish authorities here cannot control the transports in this respect. They must await the pleasure of Madrid. Our commissioners realize the force of this argument and they are willing to make reasonable concessions.

The Klondike Gold Fields.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Advices have been received here to the effect that the White Pass and Yukon Railway will be completed within a few days to the summit of the pass, twenty miles from tidewater at Skaguay.

Work was begun last April and nineteen hundred men have been steadily employed since.

The road, which is three feet gauge, and laid with fifty-six pound rails, is already in operation for freight traffic, two locomotives and eight flat cars being in operation, and there have been shipped from Seattle three more locomotives, ten flat cars, one baggage car, one combination passenger and baggage car, and one passenger coach. These will be placed in service as soon as they reach Skaguay.

It is proposed to extend the road to Fort Selkirk, a distance of 380 miles from Skaguay.

Don't Like Colored Paymasters.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The war department is still considering the color line in the pay department of the army. There are two colored paymasters in the volunteer staff. One is R. R. Wright, who has his son, R. R. Wright, Jr., as his clerk, and the other is John R. Lynch, the ex-representative from Mississippi.

There is much opposition to both officers among southern troops, and when Lynch was assigned to pay the Second Texas volunteer infantry, about a month ago, the men refused to receive the money from him.

Since that time the troops of the regiment have not been paid and there the matter stands.

American Missions Attacked.

London, Sept. 17.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily News says reports have been received there of serious rioting at Ho-Chau, fifty miles from Chung-Kiang. The American and French missions have been attacked and the latter burned.

Big Tobacco Scheme.

Edinburgh, Sept. 17.—The London correspondent of the Dundee Advertiser learns that a great combination for the purchase of the tobacco growing in the United States and Cuba is proposed in London.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

The Business of the Country is Expanding and More is Being Done.

New York, Sept. 17.—Business is passing well through the difficulties that attend the winding up of a war, which are generally greater than those involved while the war is in progress. The rush of orders kept back while the war lasted, by those who thought it shrewd not to take any chances, has lifted prices a little and caused a larger demand for the time than can continue, but though it has passed there is ample evidence that the consuming demand is very large. How large can only be judged after some weeks of waiting, but once more it looks as if those who wait longest are likely to pay most. The business of the country is expanding so that payments through clearing houses in the second week of September were 22.5 per cent. larger than in 1892, and for two weeks 12.0 per cent. larger. From these and railway returns, and such trade reports as are instructive, it must be concluded that much more business is being done than in the best of past years, though not always with much profit.

Wheat has come forward much more freely, and the price has advanced two cents. It is supposed that the advance is largely due to milling demand coming upon a narrow supply. Exports are large, 3,007,976 bushels, flour included, from Atlantic, and 201,052 bushels from Pacific ports, and for two weeks 5,697,320 bushels from both coasts, against 10,796,853 last year. Widely differing accounts of foreign supplies and demands do not explain the market, but it may be noticed that a large flour contract has been closed at Seattle for Russia, and receipts of wheat for two weeks of September have been 14,663,895 bushels, against 14,697,106 last year. One certainty there is, that the foreign demand will be smaller and the American crops larger than last year.

With the starting of 19 furnaces idle a month ago, partly not included as yet, the weekly output September 1st was 213,043 tons, against 206,777 August 1t, and the decrease in stocks 116,929 tons in two months, indicates a consumption but little below a million tons per month. Structural work is the heaviest ever known at Pittsburg, though smaller than last year at New York.

Important cotton mills have stopped and print cloths hold 2.06 cents, with other cotton goods unyielding, but cheap material hinders operations for those who have to sell goods made from higher priced cotton. Woolen mills represent rather better orders, although much machinery is idle, those who have not old wool bidding much below the current prices, which are so far maintained that sales for two weeks have been only 6,635,300 pounds, against 86,629,400 last year, and 17,015,100 in the same weeks of 1892. In boots and shoes progress of the manufacture is also stopped by dear material, and dealers are buying as little as they can, but prices of leather do not change, and hides are slightly stronger.

Stocks are a shade higher, averaging nineteen cents per share for the week, though the speculative industrials average 22 cents per share lower.

The returns of foreign trade show $35,429,950 excess of exports over imports in August, against $40,920,445 under the extraordinary conditions a year ago, with the biggest export movement ever known in August. With less than $4,000,000 paid by specie imports less exports, and liberal allowance for interest and the like, the country has added more than $23,000,000 to its unliquidated demands against Europe, and $2,600,000 gold has been started this way. Failures in two weeks have been in amount $2,127,452 against $4,352,631 last year, and $7,909,462 in 1896. Manufacturing have been $743,105, against $904,178 last year, and $4,246,148 in 1896, and trading $1,301,347, against $1,622,956 last year, and $3,180,149 in 1896. Failures for the week have been 174 in the United States, against 204 last year, and 23 in Canada, against 40 last year.

STORM MADE 5.000 HOMELESS

Terrible Result of the Hurricane that Swept the Windward Islands.

London, Sept. 17.—James S. Hay, governor of Barbadoes, telegraphs to the colonial office that the latest accounts of the effects of the hurricane which swept the Windward islands last Saturday night and Sunday were even more terrible than previous reports indicated. Ten thousand huts were either destroyed or badly damaged and 50,000 persons are homeless.

The lord mayor of London will open a fund at the Mansion House for the relief of the sufferers by the hurricane.

Sir Cornelius Moloney, governor of the Windward islands, cables to the colonial office that the British administrator of the island of St. Vincent has informed him that the supply of food there is running short, and asks that a steamship with supplies be sent at once.

Accordingly Sir Cornelius will send to Kingston five hundred barrels of fish and one hundred barrels of rice by the next mail steamship.

On the island of Trinidad the people are without food or shelter, and orders have been given to her majesty's ships in the West Indies to supply them with provisions, which can be procured from Jamaica and Halifax sooner than from any other point.

European Gold for Us.

New York, Sept. 17.—The firm of Zimmerman and Forshay announce that the steamship Lucania, leaving Europe to-day, will carry $30,000 in gold consigned to them.

The steamship Fuerst Bismarck, which arrived from Europe yesterday, brought fifteen thousand pounds in gold consigned to Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., and $20,000 consigned to Kountze Brothers.

The steamship Germanic, which arrived from Europe Thursday, brought eighty thousand pounds in gold consigned to Lazard Freres.

Forty-two Strikers Arrested.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 17.—The strike among the miners in the third pool has reached a crisis, so far as the civil authorities are concerned.

Forty-two of the strikers, including Vice President Dodds, who had charge of the strike, were arrested by Sheriff Kennedy and his deputies yesterday. They were sent to Washington, this state, where bail was entered later in the day.

MILES-ALGER TROUBLE

Important Disclosures Expected Later.

MILES IS SLOWLY GAINING

The President Not Ignoring the Situation.

A Congressional Inquiry to Be Forced by Gen. Miles' Friends. Miles' Recommendations Are Rejected.

Washington, Sept. 17.—There are some recent developments in the Alger-Miles situation which are gratifying to the friends of General Miles. Important discoveries of a documentary nature have been made since the general's return to Washington, and it is said that the interview between the president and the general commanding was a productive one.

General Miles is still confined to his home and has determined to take no immediate action. There is no doubt judging from the reports in the war department that there will be some disclosures of a sensational character later. The matter has not been entirely ignored by the president, in spite of the prevailing belief that he has observed absolute neutrality. He is greatly displeased with certain discoveries he has made since General Miles's arrival here, and it is understood that he has so expressed himself to those whom he deems responsible for a very awkward situation.

General Miles's friends, who possess the information to justify it, will obtain a congressional inquiry, the object of which will be to let in light upon some remarkable incidents—in short to give publicity to the whole affair. There will be no escape from this inquiry, and no way of evading its effects by those who have most to gain from secrecy and silence. General Miles proposes to contribute no further to the popular discussion of his grievances; the next step will be something more formidable.

Washington, Sept. 17.—General Miles is much improved, having no fever today. On the advice of the attending physician, however, the general will remain in bed for the present. The plan for a rest from duty is about given up, and he is expected back at army headquarters soon.

Miles's Recommendations Rejected.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Gen. Miles's recommendations in regard to disposition of troops pending their service in Cuba, are evidently being rejected. He had written a long letter to the secretary of war, suggesting that the regulars and volunteers be sent to military posts, where they would be in comfortable quarters. He holds, in common with other officers of large experience, that troops kept long in camps, no matter where the camps are located, will be sick, and he insists that the army will be unfit for service in Cuba if sent to southern camps.

COL. ROOSEVELT'S EAGLE.

Taken to Central Park by Rough Riders. Tears at Parting.

New York, Sept. 17.—Fifteen of the Rough Riders, led by S. A. Kennedy, went to Central Park yesterday with the big eagle the regiment had presented to Colonel Roosevelt, and which had been the regiment's mascot during the war.

Colonel Roosevelt decided to send it to Central Park for a time, where it should be seen by visitors. It is a splendid bird, measuring seven feet and a half from wing to wing.

Kennedy and the others took the eagle to the office of Superintendent Smith, giving that official the following note:

"This is the golden eagle (the Indians call it the war eagle) which the Rough Riders had as their mascot. Just at this moment I have no place to keep him. Will you keep him for me? I will arrange the terms later.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The eagle had a bit of manila rope fastened to one leg. The bird was accepted by Superintendent Smith and placed in a cage with other eagles. Kennedy kissed the bird on parting, and several of the Rough Riders were so affected at taking leave of the bird that they cried.

Dr. Angell on the Cretan Situation.

London, Sept. 17.—The morning papers publish an interview with the retiring United States minister to Turkey, Dr. James B. Angell, who is a passenger on the White Star line steamer Teutonic, which left Queenstown yesterday afternoon for New York. Dr. Angell expressed somewhat despondent views as to the condition of Crete.

"The powers," he said, "must act rigorously. In any event they will find they have hard work before them. The sultan is a cute and determined man who has acquired extraordinary prestige with his people since the Turko-Grecian war. Turkey will desperately resist giving up Crete. America has no interests there save those of humanity."

Schofield at the White House.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 17.—General Schofield called at the White House yesterday and had nearly an hour's conference with the president regarding the matter of his acceptance of a place on the commission to investigate the conduct of the war. On leaving, the general said that the matter was still in abeyance, but probably a decision would be reached at another conference to be held to-day.

The Cretan Rioters.

Candia, Sept. 17.—The steamship Augustine, with the ringleaders of the riots on board, will sail hence to-day and will be convoyed by the British warship Camperdown.

Colonel Chermside, formerly commander of the city garrison, has arrived here on board the gunboat Halcyon.

A Federal Judge Appointed.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Judge A. C. Thompson, who was a member of congress from Ohio in the Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-first congresses, has been appointed United States district judge for the southern district of Ohio, to succeed Judge Sage, who has been retired.

MASSO'S PROCLAMATION.

An Address to the Army. The Debt Owed to America.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Senor Quesada of the Cuban junta has received an address to the Cuban army, issued by President Masso of the Cuban republic. In part it is as follows:

"The United States of North America, from the moment the cry of February 24 was given, rose alarmed, casting its eyes across the small sea which separates us towards this bloody and agitated land.

"Moved by our convulsions, the United States could not continue to live the pleasant life which their prosperity guaranteed them, and which other countries, indifferent to our misfortunes, have continued to live.

"The United States gave in their cities hospitality to our people; in their manufactories our rifles were made; from their shores came numerous expeditions; their press, with immense and constant clamor, called for justice, praising our triumphs, publishing our sufferings, encouraging us with their sympathy and promise of help, while it protested against and condemned the atrocities of Spain.

"American diplomacy drove the infamous Weyler out and terminated the criminal policy of concentration; the United States have continued their great work of humanity and justice, sacrificing their own peace, offering their own treasure and giving their own noble blood, constituting themselves the executioners of their verdict by which the empire of Spain is forever extinguished in the Antilles, and Cuba becomes sovereign in the enjoyment of her independence.

"Every Cuban heart, therefore, instead of bitterness and sorrow, must be proud of having done its duty and grateful to its protector.

"The American people, our ally of yesterday, our host of to-day, our friend always, is contemplating Cuba and will witness our constitution. Let Cuba be worthy of herself and she will be worthy of the friendship of the United States.

"The Cuban army will do its part, it having fought under the motto embodying our ideals: Country and liberty. We have at last a country and will deserve liberty."

AURANIA AT QUEENSTOWN.

Towed Into Port by the Steamer Marino. Crank Shaft Broken

Queenstown, Sept. 17.—The Cunard line steamer Urania, Captain McKay, from New York on September 6, for Liverpool, which was yesterday reported off the south coast of Ireland, disabled and in tow, arrived here at two o'clock in the morning.

The captain of the Aurania reports that the crank shaft broke at 9.20 p. m. on September 13. At 5.15 o'clock on the following evening, while the steamer was 110 miles west of Fastnet, the British steamer Marino, Captain Webster, from Montreal on September 2 for London, sighted the Aurania and subsequently took her in tow.

All on board the Aurania are well. The sea was calm during the passage, and no unusual incidents, with the exception of the breaking of the shaft, are to be recorded.

The Aurania will wait here for the arrival of a tug, which will tow her to Liverpool. All the passengers will be landed at this port.

As the Aurania, in tow of the British steamer Marina, was entering the harbor here, the steamer Glenmore, which was outward bound, passed between the two steamers and severed the tow line. The broken hawser became entwined in the propeller of the Marino. The Marino has since been endeavoring to clear the tangle. The Aurania was towed to an anchorage by a tug.

THE DREYFUS SCANDAL.

The Cabinet to Vote To-day for a Revision of the Matter.

Paris, Sept. 17.—The newspapers here say that he minister of justice, M. Sarrien, has completed the examination of the documents in the Dreyfus case, and will communicate to the ministers at the cabinet council to-day his intention to refer the matter to a commission competent to undertake a revision of the proceedings. The general opinion is that the cabinet will adopt the proposal for a revision of the case. The only member likely to vote in the negative is the minister for war, General Zurlinden, who yesterday informed the minister of justice that he intended to resign if it developed that he did not agree with the rest of his colleagues.

The Figaro, Matin and Rappel say that they believe that, in case General Zurlinden resigns, M. Brisson, the premier, is resolved to take the portfolio of minister of war and give the portfolio of minister of the interior to M. Vallis.

According to the Gaulois, the result of the decision of the minister of justice will be a ministerial crisis, as, this paper claims, other ministers will also resign.

France Urged to Hang on.

Paris, Sept. 17.—The Echo de Paris, in an article on the situation in Africa, says that General Kitchener would not dare to fire upon the French forces under Major Marchand at Fashoda, for France is behind that force for good or bad.

England, the paper declares, must consent to a European conference unless she wants war.

The Journal urges inflexibility on the part of France, as the surrender of Fashoda would cause the downfall of the government.

Liberte and Le Temps contend that Fashoda was open to the first comer.

Plot to Poison Corean King.

Seoul, Corea, Sept. 17.—It is reported here that a high official of the palace named Ko has made a confession that he ordered the cook of the royal household to poison food intended for the king and the crown prince, both of whom became seriously ill on Sunday last.

The official further confessed that the poisoning plot was instigated by a former interpreter attached to the Russian legation here, who was once a court favorite, but who is now in disgrace.

Gen. Toral in Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 17.—The steamer Leon XIII has arrived at Vigo, with General Toral and 2,478 soldiers and officers from Santiago de Cuba.

COMING EVENTS.

Sept. 18—W. D. Murray will address the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at 4:15 p. m. Violin and vocal solos. Fans and lemonade.

The Colored Man Wants to Know.

It will be remembered that for the last couple of years the colored brethern of the Republican party in Plainfield have been raising ructions after every election, owing to the fact that they have come out at the little end of the horn in the distribution of offices and other perquisites of political supremacy. But just as regularly as another campaign rolled around the white leaders indulged in honeyed words of what the future had in store for them and on election day the usual number of votes were rounded up from among the colored population.

It is not a local feeling now, however, that is stirring the colored Republican to action to find out just where he will be at after the votes are cast and counted. The feeling of dissatisfaction which has been reflected moderately in the case of the Plainfield G. O. P. is now being felt by the State leaders. The colored brother is getting warmed up to the situation. Twelve thousand of the colored votes there are, a no mean consideration for the Republicans of New Jersey, but it is averred by the dusky politicians that they have been treated most shabbily by the present State administration. The instance of William Kline, of Plainfield, being turned down for a doorkeeper in the last Legislature is one of them. Now the same colored leaders propose to have some sort of an understanding before the votes are cast.

A call has been issued for a convention to be held next Wednesday afternoon, but the executive committee of the Republican colored committee have been divided on the question and some refuse to sign the call, claiming that a convention would not better the conditions as far as the colored voters are concerned.

The members of the regular State committee have warned the officers of the colored State committee, that if they make trouble by holding a convention and passing resolutions they will be severely remembered in the future, and this warning has probably killed the convention. But those who are anxious for the convention are thinking that they cannot fare much worse in the future at all events than they have in the past.

A Public Disgrace.

The manner in which a lot of young fellows who are studying law in Plainfield offices have made their appearance in the local justices' courts, and particularly that of Justice Mosher, for the past few months, has become a matter for ridicule and disgust on the part of the majority of people.

The way in which the most of these cases are conducted, the flippant charges, the burlesque prosecutions and the mocking disposition, is a reproach upon the fair name of justice. It seems to have reached that point that every clash between neighbors, relatives, or those engaged in business transactions is straightway haled before a justice of the peace only to end in a fiasco that were it not so abominable would be amusing. It may be good practice for the boys, but is a poor thing for the community, and the quicker a halt is called in such affairs the better it will be.

With such a state of affairs existing it is no wonder that a good many people would like to see the office of justice of the peace abolished.

Mr. Marsh a Juryman.

In the drawing of the United States Grand Jury at Trenton yesterday the name of Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield, appears. Mr. Marsh has had years of experience with juries, but it has been in the work of convincing them to his certain point of view as a lawyer rather than being influenced himself by an impartial consideration of the case. Now, however, he will have a chance to feel just how it is to be a juryman himself. Though the duty is not conspicuous nor the emoluments great it is considered quite an honor to be drawn on the United States Jury.

GENERAL SIR HERBERT KITCHENER.

The British flag floats over Khartoum, General "Chinese" Gordon and Hicks Pasha are avenged and England has taken a stronger hold upon her possessions in Egypt. The brilliant campaign which led up to these results was under the personal direction of General Sir Herbert Kitchener.

The Bubonic Plague.

Less than two years ago a genuine alarm spread through the civilized world growing out of the threat of the plague which was focalized in Bombay, India. It presented exactly similar features to the "black death" which traveled from the Levant at different periods in mediæval times and transformed many parts of Europe into vast graveyards. Its ease of infection and rapidity of march gave emphasis to the danger. All the advances of medical science and sanitation, all the barriers of an elaborate quarantine system, it was feared, might not be fully proof against that tramp of death. The ignorance and fanaticism of western Asia and of eastern Europe, still operative on the verge of the twentieth century, lay there, an unfenced road and breeding ground. But, as it happened, the menace died away to an echo.

Much was then learned of the nature, agencies of transmission and treatment of the bubonic plague. Professor Koch of Berlin has just announced the result of some further investigations of this awful scourge. We learn from him that there are four centers of this plague, where it is endemic, ceaseless in its ravages, though most of the time limited in its operations. To the three already known those in the province of Hunan, China; in Tibet and on the west coast of Arabia, near Mecca, Dr. Koch adds a fourth in the German hinterland of Africa. From these centers of propagation the disease is liable under favoring conditions to march again, like the armies of Genghis or Timour, as communication between the countries of the world becomes more and more intimate. But forewarned is forearmed, and the powers of science and government need not be caught napping. But that danger has not ceased to exist from centers of endemic operation is now assured. It is also claimed that considerable progress has been made in the direction of artificial immunity by inoculation. We fear this is as yet quite problematical. The only true safety is in vigilance and prevention, the attitude of being constantly on guard against surprise.

The magnificent record made by American warships in the actual exigencies of battle has greatly impressed foreign observers. Already indications of large government orders from abroad are in the air, one of the commercial fruits of war. Though we appreciate the compliment, we might hint that our achievement has been a matter of brain mettle as well as of gun metal, armor plate and machinery.

Naval Chaplain McIntyre has been criticising Admiral Sampson and Captain Bob Evans with a sharp tongue and will be court martialed. He should not wear shoulder straps on the sacred cloth if he would unsheathe his principal weapon unnecessarily.

Nurses at the sick beds of dying soldiers relate the same story full of the deepest pathos of human nature. In their dying delirium it is not the sweetheart whose name is called, but "mother, mother, mother."

To enjoy reading is a perpetual insurance against being bored. This is because we have such a wide variety of friends to choose from. One can always drop an intellectual acquaintance without giving offense.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Plainfield has eleven letter-carriers, only two of whom are allowed the borough. That division is by no means a just one. The population will prove it. The borough sadly needs better mail service, though the carrier awheel who whistles "Wearing of the Green" is much admired and always warmly welcomed by the servants along his line.—Borough correspondent in Bound Brook State-Centre.

Some of the county papers are hinting that Elizabeth wants all the county offices. This is not true. Elizabeth wants only her proportionate share. But if the rest of the county does not desire the offices or has not available candidates to present to the people, Elizabeth cannot be censured if she steps in and offers first-class, winning candidates. Elizabeth does not desire offices at the present time as much as other sections of the county desire her to take them. All the county seems just now to look to Elizabeth for a candidate for State Senator, and seems to have agreed that no better man than Judge Cross could be selected. He has not only the ability and experience, but is so well liked that he would molify any sectional or factional grievances if they were found to exist. —Elizabeth Journal.

The father of Governor Voorhees was an unostentatious visitor at the State Fair laat week. He resides in Clinton, Hunterdon county, and is a bank manager there, a modest and even diffident man, much respected and always the gentleman. He has been an ardent Republican of the old-fashioned kind, and innocent of the political scheming. He was secretary of the State Senate for several years some twenty years ago, and ran for Congress on the Republican ticket in the hopelessly Democratic district of those days. He was a friend and warm admirer of the late Frederic A. Potts, and has had the regard of all the leaders. His son resembles him more than his manner would indicate, and the Dutch blood crops out in both of them at times. The elder Voorhees does not often mix in politics now, and has little to say in Hunterdon county manœuverings, but that little is always influential with the best class of citizens in that prosperous section.—Newark Sunday Call.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

George Coombs, of Shirley, Salem county, caught an owl in his barn that is different from any ever before seen in that neighborhood. The feathers are brown and gray mixed and very fine and silky, and it has an oddly shaped head. It is thought to have come from the south.

For several nights of late a number of small boys living in the vicinity of Liberty street, West Second street and Elmwood place, have been annoying the neighbors in that locality by stealing grapes, apples, etc., and the neighbors are getting tired of the practice. The boys ruin the grapevines and the apple trees and otherwise make a nuisance of themselves. S. C. Peck, of West Front street, is one of the residents that has suffered from these depredations and he informs The Daily Press that he has a list of the boys' names and that if they repeat their trespassing he will have warrants issued for their arrest and will see that they are dealt with by the law.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 17—Some time next month the Methodist church will celebrate its 25th anniversary. It is intended to make the occasion one of the pleasantest in the history of the church. The exercises will begin on Sunday night and last over until some time in the week.

There will be no services in the Methodist or Presbyterian churches tomorrow night on account of the union services at New Market.

Miss Kate Lunden will address a W. C. T. U. meeting at the home of Mrs. Mary Squire, Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The first fall meeting of the Ladies' Orchestra will be held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles Coriell.

Albert Hyzer and wife, of Brooklyn, who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Warden, have returned to their home.

Sunday, September 25th, will be observed as rallying day in the Presbyterian Sunday-school.

Rev. Dr. Jamison's morning subject tomorrow will be, "The Land Without a Sea."

M. Larrabee has returned from Brookfield, N. Y., where he has spent the summer.

George I. Clark and family, of Brooklyn, have been guests this week of A. Powell.

Daniel Richardson has gone to Syracuse, N. Y., where he has entered a law school.

Miss Beck, who has been visiting in western New Jersey, has returned home.

The gentlemen are bowling for a prize this afternoon on Schepflin's green.

Miss Laura VanNess, of Easton spent yesterday with Miss Lulu Stark.

Robert Lambert, of Somerville, was a visitor in town yesterday.

The building loan will hold a meeting Monday evening.

John Fleming is building a new barn on his premises.

Miss Mabel Coleson is visiting in Passaic.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of the Daily Press.)

New Market, Sept. 17.—Peter Osborn has been under the weather.

There will be a union temperance meeting in the Baptist church tomorrow night.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 17.—Judge Clark has issued summons in contract case of Brown against Schenck. Summons returnable Sept. 21st.

The weather permitting, a large crowd will no doubt turn out this afternoon to witness the second of a series of road races, arranged by the young men of the villiage, two-and-a-half miles out Mountain avenue and return, finishing at Buckwell's corner. There will be seven entries and a good race is promised.

Peter Frazee, the mason, started the foundation on the Stagg house, corner of Grove street and Stout avenue, Friday. Work will be rushed, as Mr. Stagg and family are anxious to move to Scotch Plains and settle in their new home.

Albert Hollingsworth who has been spending his vacaion with his father, Loftus Hollingworth has returned to his studies at Lehigh University.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 17.—Some of the property owners in town are very much wrought up by the action of Chairman Embree who, at Thursday evening's meeting of the Township Committee, tried to put through an ordinance compelling the property owners to lay flag walks in front of their places. The owners claim that plank walks have done the work for many years and that they are still as good and serviceable as the stone walks.

Messrs. J. J. Coger, E. S. Bloodgood and C. K. Darrow have been selected trustees of the Baptist church, and L. G. Venn has been appointed the clerk of the board of trustees.

George Francis Train will appear at the entertainment to be given for the benefit of the Children's Country Home in the Westfield Club Hall October 3d.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

A BEFLOUNCED ERA IN FASHIONS.

Alpaca Obtains Favor for Autumn Gowns.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

The flounce movement is making itself more strongly felt than ever, as can be readily seen by the first model. This gown is made of black and white checked alpaca, so soft and clinging as to resemble veiling closely. The skirt is cut in three-tier fashion, and the bodice turned back from a white vest of tucked taffeta, with white cloth revers heavily braided with black. It closes near the waist with link buttons of turquoise cabochons, and a stock tie of soft turquoise lends a touch of color at the neck. The newest alpacas are not to be despised, and are becoming much employed for between-seasons dresses. That of a buff tone, very like tussore, is popular, and so is the smoke blue and pale green shot with white.

But to return for a moment to the fad for flounces. It is sincerely to be hoped that it will abate somewhat before winter really sets in, or else we may look forward to being dragged down under a great weight of flounces long before Christmas time. Common sense will surely prevail, and women will not consent to groan under the burden of flounced cloth as well as flounced fur. The latter we are sure to wear, for furriers say that the deeply flounced capes in seal or sable are to be more used than any other style. These are both graceful and charming, but if skirts are not left plain, the weight of winter clothing will be more than the average woman can stand.

Princess gowns are much in evidence, and then again they are not, for they are so modified in various ways, and decorated in styles so novel, as to be scarcely recognizable.

Some of the new princess gowns are fastened from the neck to the hem with small round silver or gold buttons.

Parisians have revived the fashion of wearing coats of a different color from the skirt. There is a decided suggestion of the picturesque about the second model, and it is easy to realize the charm of the narrow, sweeping triple skirt of dark blue cloth, with its elongated coat of fawn cloth cut away from the front and sloping toward the back. The only trimming employed on skirt or coat is a double machine stitching. Attention to such trifles as the lace cravat at the neck will bestow upon even this costume added superiority.

Silk, satin and lace coats are not new, but they gain in popularity as the season advances and are constantly being modified and made more beautiful. Those of lace are worn with skirts of every description, from the thinnest of silk mousseline de soie to the thickest wool stuff. All sorts of lace are used, but with the wool skirts the heavy designs only are considered smart.

A Dainty Frock.

A very attractive toilette for afternoon, is made of flowered foulard. The gored skirt is trimmed at the foot with three narrow ruffles of the material, cut on the bias, the top flounce forming a narrow heading.

With this is worn a bodice which is made with a tucked yoke of white silk, with a fichu like arrangement over each shoulder, trimmed with narrow ruffles and finished with two bows of black velvet ribbon. The sleeves are tight fitting trimmed with groups of three tucks from top to bottom, and finished at the wrist with a frill. A black velvet belt is drawn around the waist and tied in a short bow in back.

Worth Knowing.

Nauseous medicines nowadays possess none of the terorrs that many of us remember when "powders" were given in jam and castor-oil in hot milk, as pharmacists have invented no end of ways of giving the nastiest drugs without any flavour at all.

Castor-oil, cod-liver oil, quinine, and things of that disagreeable kind are made up in little flexible capsules, which slip down the throat like a strawberry.

These capsules are also made in two parts; so that anyone can buy them empty, and put the powder or other drug in himself, sealing them, and then swallowing them without knowing that the drug has a taste.

Then there is the round wafer-paper, in which can be enclosed any kind of bolus, pill, or powder, and which, when moistened, can be swallowed with ease.

Even the grape and strawberry have been turned to account; and there is no more pleasant way of taking a bad-flavored drug than by scooping out the middle of the fruit and putting in the drug.

Pills are now made much smaller than they used to be, and the various coatings render them quite tasteless and easy to swallow.

Finally, when none of these devices can be used, the physician can fall back on gymnemic acid, which temporarily paralyses the sense of taste, and allows one to swallow anything, however bad.

In taking a pill, by the way, most people get into exactly the position they should avoid. They throw back their head, opening the passage to the lungs and closing the way to the stomach. The right thing to do is to look at the toes.

Giant Loaves.

The biggest loaves in the world are those baked in France and Italy. In France they are made in the shape of very long rolls, five feet, and in many cases even six feet each.

The bread of Paris is distributed almost exclusively by women, who go to the various bake-houses at 5:30 a. m. and spend about an hour polishing up the loaves.

After the loaves are thoroughly cleaned of dust and grit the "bread porter" proceeds on the round of her customers. Those who live in apartments or flats find their loaves leaning against the door. Restaurant-keepers, and those having street entrances to their premises, find their supply of the staff of life propped up against the front door.

The wages earned by these bread carriers varies from a couple of shillings to half-a-crown a day, and their day's work is completed by ten o'clock in the morning.

Handsome Fall Models.

A handsome model for an autumn tailor gown is made of pale heliotrope cloth in a bourette weave, figured with tufts of white camel's-hair. The jacket of heliotrope cloth turns back with revers of olive-green velvet, showing a blouse vest of white cloth braided in green and gold, with narrow belt to match. The skirt is open up each side to the waist, revealing panels of white cloth with cloth straps crossing them piped with velvet and almost covered with the green and gold braidwork.

The Children's Hour.

Mothers should never be too much occupied with their social or household duties to help their little ones with their daily tasks or lessons. A mother's first duty is to her children, and she should devote at least one hour of each day to them if she wishes to secure their confidence and retain her hold on their affections.

SUPERSTITION OF ACTORS.

They Rank Next to Sailors in Adhering To Signs.

Next to sailors, stage folk are probably the most superstitious people in the world. Not only are there numerous curious beliefs that have general vogue in the profession, but almost every actor and actress of note has his or her pet superstition. Very few actresses will wear opals. "An opal will kill the best piece ever put on the boards," once remarked a well known actress. To quote any lines from Macbeth in the theater, save when the tragedy itself is being played, is supposed to bring bad luck, and for the same reason the "tag" of a play is never spoken at rehearsal. Mrs. Leslie Carter, it is said, refuses to go on the stage without a four-leaf clover pin, which she has worn for many years. During the belfry scene, when "The Heart of Maryland" was running in New York, it became unfastened and dropped on the stage. She did not miss it until she reached her hotel. Then she drove straight back to the theater and asked excitedly to have a search made for it. Great was her rejoicing when a gentleman who had picked it up pulled it out of his pocket and handed it to her. Many of the Italian ballet girls, when travelling, take with them a piece of bread from their last meal in their native land, tied in a rag and worn as a charm. It is their belief that, so long as they wear this, they will never be in want of food.—Woman.

DENTISTRY IN ZOOLAND.

"Toothache? Just tie that end to the diseased member and I'll fasten a stone to the other."

"Now I'll just chuck the stone over the limb and out goes your tooth."

A SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

FORMER PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S BENEFACTION.

School Formed Where Ambitious Poor Boys Will be Given the Instruction They Crave. Its Originator and Head Was of This Class.

A deserving charity, and one which is worthy of the heartiest and most substantial support, is the farm school for boys about to be established on former President Cleveland's farm, three miles from Princeton, N. J. The school, which is really still in the embryonic stage, has already received undue and immature publicity, owing to the mention of Mr. Cleveland's name in connection with it, and it has even been exploited by the yellow journals, in their usual sensational manner, as the "Grover Cleveland Farm School."

It is necessary to mention this at the beginning in order that a clear understanding of the aims and scope of the institution may be gained. There is no intention on the part of those directly interested in it to name the school after Mr. Cleveland. That would be distasteful to him, and, inasmuch as he is the first and greatest benefactor, his wishes will be respected.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

Nor is the school designed as a home for the surplus juvenile population of the city slums. It aims to take boys, not indiscriminately, but after careful inquiry as to their circumstances, and make useful and self-respecting men of them. It aims to educate them with class book and trade. It aims through the medium of a healthy country life, to foster ambitions which another and more restricted atmosphere might stifle.

In short, this novel institution aims to make good men of boys who already have a desire to be good men, but who are lacking in opportunity, and sometimes in incentive. The boy who merely wants a home, and displays no further interest in his future, will not be tolerated.

The originator of this movement is a young man, who knows of his own experience the struggles and heartburnings of the ambitious boy who wants to make something of himself. The great passion of his life is a consuming sympathy for such boys. For years he has schemed and planned and racked his brain to find the best means of going about the work on a solid basis. And at last, through the generosity of Mr. Cleveland and several other philanthropic gentlemen, he sees daylight ahead.

This young man is John Henry Vroom. His early boyhood was spent in Camden, N. J. At the tender age of thirteen he was obliged to leave school and found employment as a cash boy in one of Philadelphia's big department stores. The knowledge that he was earning his own living, or at least contributing to his own support, did not altogether take away the sting born of the knowledge that his studies must be neglected.

He was a studious little chap, and soon became known as "the boy with the book," on street cars, in the ferryboats plying between Philadelphia and his home in Camden.

Often would the little cash boy gaze bitterly at the fashionable women in silks and satins and think how much they could do for a boy who was eager to educate himself, if they only would. He told himself then that if when he grew to be a man he was in a position to do so he would devote his life to just such boys as he figured himself out to be.

And now the ambition of the little cash boy is about to be realized. All that is needed to insure its complete fulfillment is the aid of a few more men like Mr. Cleveland, who has not only placed his farm at the disposal of Mr. Vroom, but who has already spent the sum of $2,000 upon it in way of improvements.

Holzminden. Einem furchtbaren Unwetter, das über unsere Stadt niederging, ist das Wahrzeichen Holzmindens, der Thurm der evangelischen Kirche, zum Opfer gefallen. Der 64 Meter hohe Thurm wurde 1888 vom Blitze getroffen, brannte damals theilweise ab und wurde 1889 wieder neugebaut. Der Thurm ist jetzt in Glockenstuhlhöhe abgeknickt. Das Tosen des Orkans war so gewaltig, daß selbst die Bewohner der Nachbarhäuser den Einsturz erst bemerkten, als sie die Trümmermassen auf der Erde liegen sahen. Glücklicher Weise ist Niemand verunglückt und auch die Häuser in der Nähe des Thurmes blieben unbeschädigt.

CHAPTER XIV.

At Delverton Hall the two ladies continued to maintain the independent positions they had taken up with regard to Sir Roy's telegram. Lady Garth persistently ignored it, and met any accidental allusion that Evangeline made to the approaching visit of Lilac Marvel or the marriage with complete silence or an occasional indignant protest. Evangeline, on her side, went quietly about the house, superintending the preparation of a suite of rooms for their expected visitor, and making a hundred little arrangements for her comfort and pleasure—arrangements which her ladyship seemed not to notice and did not interfere with.

A DANGEROUS EXPERIMENT.

In Order to Convince a Jury a Lawyer Drank Poison.

Kansas has her "lady" soldiers, but Nebraska has a man who surely is equipped for conquest in any clime, if courage is any sign. He is now a brigadier general and his name is Colby, or Kolby. In a cause celebre in Omaha he defended a husband against the charge of having poisoned his wife. The entire State became interested in the long trial. Autopsies were held and poison enough to kill ten people was extracted and placed in evidence. The case seemed certain to go against the defendant. Everybody said he was guilty and would go to the gallows; everybody except Colby.

In the summing up Colby had the glass containing the poison placed before him, and in a vigorous peroration said: "Why, Your Honor, and gentlemen of the jury, to say that this is poison is to make chemical analysis a fraud for all time. There is absolutely nothing in this powder that could harm a man, or woman or child. The question is whether my client poisoned his wife or not. He did not. To show you the utter harmlessness of this 'deadly' potion I will eat it here in your presence." With that he tossed down his throat the entire contents of the glass. The court gasped, the prosecution was paralyzed, the jurors nearly fainted, while a great revulsion of feeling took possession of the audience that choked the room.

In the agitation of the moment Colby, pretending to be greatly unnerved by his effort, slipped out of the courtroom door, closed it behind him and then ran across the street to his office as hard as his legs could carry him. There he found physicians in waiting with a stomach pump and such antidotes as were needed to quiet the action of the poison, for deadly poison it was. They got to work on him and in a few minutes he was well enough to drink a tin-cupful of red liquor and return to court. When the jury saw him sit down quietly at the bar it brought in a verdict of "not guilty." Such a man would make a good soldier.—New York Press.

PRINCIPALITY OF MONTENEGRO.

An Independent Little State and Determined to Remain So.

Though but imperfectly known in America, and for that matter in western Europe, the tiny principality of Montenegro is a land full of interest, and destined in the near future to play no small a part in the history of eastern Europe. Modern Montenegro, the smallest independent state in Europe, after Monaco, Andorra and San Marino, dates from 1851. The government of the principality is an absolute monarchy, hereditary in the princely family of Petrovitj Niegoche, by order of masculine primogeniture. Notwithstanding the oft repeated pretensions of the sublime porte, Montenegro has always refused every kind of suzerainty on the part of Turkey and has remained to this day an independent state. In the hands of this autocratic prince, Nichola I, are concentrated all the political, administrative, judiciary and military powers of the principality.

The Montenegrin army is wonderfully strong for so small a nation, and consists of 24,000 men, divided into two divisions of 12,000 men each. Each of these divisions includes two brigades. Every Montenegrin brigade is formed of five battalions, splendidly armed with Minie and Thomas Sedert rifles. The reigning prince is the commander-in-chief of the army; under him is a chief of the staff, with two generals of division and four brigadier generals. The army consists almost entirely of infantry, with a small contingent of artillery. To their great physical strength, marvelous agility and keen eyesight, the Montenegrin joins a remarkable knowledge of everything pertaining to the science of warfare. But what in particular characterizes the Montenegrin as a warrior and what makes him superior to any European soldier is his strong sense of individuality, his pride of independence, which enables him to perform the most wonderful acts of courage. Though small, the Montenegrin army, owing to the special characteristics of its soldiers, is a force that will play a leading part in the next conflagration in eastern Europe.—Providence Journal.

It was Evangeline who wrote and congratulated her cousin upon his engagement, sending the letter to the Seven Cents mines, which, in his last communication, he had spoken of visiting in a couple of weeks at the farthest. His mother decdied not to write by that mail at all, "since his plans were so uncertain;" and it was entirely on her own authority that Evangeline had added to her own letter the explanatory postscript—

"Aunt Gwen will write later, when she has seen Lilac, to whose arrival she is looking forward, of course, with great interest."

This postscript had required some thought, for Evangeline could not tell her cousin a direct lie about his mother's feelings towards the girl he was about to make his bride, and at the same time she could not bring herself to tell him the whole truth, and render him anxious by letting him know how very hostile Lady Garth was to the idea of welcoming Lilac. It was perhaps fortunate that Roy, when he read the postscript, was too much taken up by the Major's accusation to give it serious thought.

At last came the exciting day when the Gemini was expected to reach Liverpool, and Evangeline could restrain herself no longer.

"The ship Roy mentioned in his telegram is expected to reach port early this afternoon," she said at breakfast; and Lady Garth raised her gold pince-nez to her aristocratic nose and stared across the table.

"Well, Evangeline?"

"If anybody comes by it, they will be here this evening, auntie."

"I am not expecting anybody," said her ladyship, in a tone that prevented her niece from saying any more, even if the old lady had not commenced talking about other things.

As evening approached, and at any moment Roy's Californian fiancee might arrive, Evangeline became very excited. There was not only the absorbing question, "What will she be like?" awaiting an answer, and soon to receive one, but also the still more absorbing question, "What will Lady Garth do when Lilac Marvel really arrives?"

Her ladyship, in spite of her efforts to conceal the fact, was experiencing quite as much excitement as her niece. Under her aristocratic calm, which might have deceived a stranger, Evangeline noticed a hundred little signs which told her that Lady Garth was devoured by a fever of anxiety and impatience. She moved restlessly about the house, unable to give her mind even to the care of her favorite ferns; and her niece noticed that, when she made a pretence of netting—netting was her ladyship's chief hobby—her slender aristocratic fingers trembled so much that she had to lay the work on one side.

The trains that stopped at the little station at Delverton were few and far between, and there was scarcely any doubt that, if the Gemini reached Liverpool at the expected time, the passenger whom Evangeline expected would arrive by the nine-o'clock train, the last that day. Towards nine, therefore, her ladyship's restlessness became greater than ever.

"If you will tell Williams to get the brougham ready, I think I will drive down to the village," she said at last.

Evangeline glanced questioningly at the calm aristocratic face, which expressed nothing.

"The brougham is waiting now," she said. "I was going to drive down to the station."

Evangeline was surprised when her ladyship answered calmly—

"I will call there, then, instead of you, dear, on my way. You wanted to meet the last train?"

"Yes, auntie. Shall I come with you?"

Lady Garth shook her head, and there was something in her quiet resolute manner which made Evangeline more than a little afraid for the friendless girl who was coming from over the sea. There was, however, no opposing her aunt's evident intention of going alone, and Evangeline soon gave up the attempt, and set herself to wait as patiently as she could for the brougham's return.

What would happen, she kept asking herself, if, as she expected, Lilac came by the train? And why had her aunt chosen to meet her alone? Evangeline lost herself in a maze of conjectures; and, when, after what seemed to her to be the lapse of several hours, she caught the sound of the brougham-wheels coming up the gravelled drive, she threw open the door in her excitement and ran down the broad stone steps which fronted the house.

The moonlight made it almost as light out of doors as the lamplight did in the house, and the brougham was clearly visible coming along the drive out of the shadow of the arched trees. Evangeline, with her usual impulsiveness, was at the carriage-door as soon as the vehicle stopped, and she was quite startled and disappointed to find Lady Garth alone inside.

"You are foolish to come out without a shawl, dear," said her ladyship, in a tone that seemed to her observant niece to express distinct satisfaction; and Evangeline asked no question until the brougham had driven away to the stables. Then, as they stood in the hall together, she said rather diffidently—

"You went to the station, Aunt Gwen?"

Her ladyship nodded.

"I told you that you misread Roy's telegram," she said, with a smile of triumph. "You see nobody has come by the ship he mentioned."

"But there might be some delay, auntie, and Lilac may come to-morrow."

"No, dear; we should have had a letter or a telegram."

The letter came as she was speaking. It had arrived by the nine-o'clock train, and the postmaster seeing it marked "Immediate," had brought it up himself to the Hall, although there was no regular delivery.

The man stood upon the steps looking somewhat thirsty as he explained it all, and Evangeline took him through to the kitchen to be rewarded for his trouble, while Lady Garth walked up to her boudoir with the letter in her hand which Roy had written and somebody had posted in Liverpool.

CHAPTER XV.

Lady Garth's boudoir was a sanctum into which even Evangeline dared not enter without invitation, and, after the obliging postmaster was gone, she waited restlessly for her ladyship to summon her or to come in search of her with the news that Sir Roy's letter contained. She was dying with impatience, although she had no doubt that her reading of the telegram was the right one, to hear all the details of her cousin's engagement, and to learn what had led to the hurriedly arranged visit of his fiancee to Delverton Hall.

The girl's curiosity was kept on the stretch for a long time, however; and it was long past the usual hour for retiring when she ventured to tap at her aunt's locked door and ask if she might come in. She was becoming alarmed at the long silence, and was quite relieved when her ladyship answered, unlocking the door and inviting her to enter.

"Come in, Evangeline," she said gravely; "I have news to tell you of Roy."

As she spoke, she seated herself again in the low easy-shair by the side of her little work-table, on which stood a pink-shaded reading-lamp, that threw a delicate glow upon her thin stately face. It seemed to Evangeline as if the face had grown a little older since the arrival of the telegram—perhaps since the arrival of the letter—since she had not noticed the change before that night. Lady Garth motioned her to another easy-chair by her side, and took the letter from the table where it had been lying. Evangeline noticed that her aunt's hands shook more than ever in doing so, but her voice was quite firm when she spoke.

"This letter was written at the time Roy sent his telegram," she said, "and fully explains what he meant by his obscure message. As I said at the time, Evangeline, you were too quick in jumping to the conclusion that anything like a definite engagement existed between Sir Roydon and the young lady who is coming to visit us."

Lady Garth watched her niece's face keenly as she made the announcement, and credited her with being a good actress when it showed disappointment rather than relief.

"But, auntie, surely they must be engaged if Lilac is coming here?" she exclaimed in surprise; and the old lady adjusted her gold pince-nez carefully before replying.

"Some sort of an arrangement certainly seems to have been entered into which in the circumstances justifies us in receiving Miss Marvel; but what engagement there may exist is undoubtedly a provisional one, and seems to me to have been entered into by Roydon merely as a form, to enable him to befriend the young lady, as he would not otherwise be able to do. It seems Miss Marvel warned my son of an attempt which was to be made upon his life by her relatives, and assisted his escape from the house in circumstances which render it impossible for her to return there. She was thrown, therefore, in a way, into Roy's charge, and his Quixotic generosity has almost led him a little too far, I think, in sending her here nominally as his fiancee."

"But does Lilac understand that the engagement is 'nominal?' asked Evangeline quickly, with something very much like indignant scorn in the tone with which she repeated the modifying adjective.

Her ladyship answered haughtily—

"You do not suppose, dear, that Roy would do anything dishonorable? It is clearly understood that the engagement is not to be binding unless it is ratified in England. That, of course, will not happen. When Miss Marvel arrives—she is spending the night at Liverpool, by-the-way, and will come on to-morrow evening—when she arrives, if we like her, we shall no doubt be able to find her some pleasant employment. According to the letter, she is very nice and ladylike, and would do for a companion for Lady Bettaby, perhaps. Her ladyship said in her letter that she is losing hers in a month."

Evangeline stood up, bewildered.

"May I look at Roy's letter, auntie? I do not understand 'nominal' engagements. What I want to know is whether I am to treat Lilac Marvel, when she comes, as a future member of the family or as a servant-girl in training?"

Lady Garth held up her delicate hands in mild protest.

"My dear Evangeline, how recklessly you speak! We are not bound to let Miss Marvel see, immediately she comes, in what light we regard her. She will, of course, be our visitor, to whom we are under obligations for having nursed Roydon through his illness, and for having perhaps saved his life as well. When she has been here a little while it will be time enough to decide exactly what attitude to maintain towards her."

"But, my dear aunt Gwen," went on Evangeline, unchecked, "ever since the telegram came I have decided upon the precise attitude I am going to maintain towards her. All that I have heard so far is that she is a sweet, lovable, refined girl, and is going to marry Roy. If there is nothing in this letter to remove any of those impressions I have received from Roy's previous epistle, I am going to receive Lilac as a sister and as the future mistress of Delverton Hall. May I see what Roy has said?"

But Lady Garth was carefully folding up the Baronet's letter and putting it away in the pocket of her dress.

"As in all probability you will one day be Lady Garth yourself, Evangeline," she said judicially, "I think it would be better if you did not see this communication, which Roydon has evidently written in a moment of excitement and generosity after owing his life, as he believes, to Miss Marvel. I must beg of you to take my word for it that the engagement is a purely provisional one, as Miss Marvel herself will no doubt tell you. She seems to have acted in a very proper spirit, and to have insisted herself that the hastily-entered-into arrangement should not be considered binding. I hope you will not think that we look at it in any other light."

"I am afraid that I cannot quite understand the light in which I am supposed to look at it," said Evangeline, shrugging her shoulders. "I do not recognize different degrees and species of engagements. I always thought there was only one sort of engagement for an honourable man; and, until I hear to the contrary from Roy himself, or from Lilac, I shall continue to think my cousin an honourable man, and to consider Lilac as his future wife."

She spoke warmly and straightforwardly, presenting a strange contrast to her companion's cold quietness; but her voice changed instantly when she saw an expression of real pain contracting Lady Garth's thin face. Her ladyship covered her eyse with her hands, and in a moment her niece had thrown herself upon her knees by the old lady's side.

"Forgive me, auntie! I did not mean to be unkind. But I am so sure that Roy loves this sweet lovable girl from the prairie, and intends to make her his wife, that I cannot help feeling impatient when you speak as if his engagement means nothing at all."

"I did not think you would add to my unhappiness in such a manner, Evangeline," said Lady Garth, with such weariness and pain in her voice that her niece began to cry.

"What is it you want me to do, auntie?" the girl asked plaintively; and her ladyship answered with more self-command.

"I want you to receive Miss Marvel as a friend only—a friend whom we value very much because of the services she has rendered Roydon—but nothing more."

"And ignore her engagement to Roy altogether?" added the girl quickly. "I cannot, Aunt Gwen. It would be cruel to Lilac and unjust to Roy!"

Her ladyship rose, her face hard set.

"Then any further talk is useless," she said, with chilling severity. "It is a small thing that I have asked. If you care so little for my wishes, I am sorry I have taken the trouble to express them."

Lady Garth swept out of the room as she spoke, and scarcely caught the girl's pathetic answer—

"I do wish I could, auntie; but you know that I cannot."

WHEN SPECTACLES WERE NEW.

The Size According to the Rank of Wearer—Some as Large as Ones Hand.

In the days when spectacles were introduced the world was not all wise. Glasses became so fashionable that the people did not wait until necessity compelled them to adopt the new custom. Whether their eyesight was bad or good, those who would be stylish wore spectacles. In Spain they formed part of the costume of every well-dressed person.

The object of the wearer in putting on glasses was to increase the gravity of his appearance and render himself more directly imposing. A young monk who had, through the assistance of his family, caused his order to succeed in an important lawsuit, felt himself liberally rewarded when the prior, having embraced him warmly, testified his gratitude by saying, "Brother, put on spectacles."

The glasses of spectacles were proportioned in size, not to the eyes, but to the rank of the wearer, those worn by the Spanish nobles being as large as one's hand. The Marquis of Astorga, Viceroy of Naples, after having had his bust sculptured in marble, particularly enjoined the artist not to forget his beautiful spectacles.—Youth's Companion.

Harbor Scavengers.

When the full fishing fleet is at the wharf thousands of gulls gather about the end of the dock. Some of the small boys who dangle legs and a fish line over the edge in the expectation of catching a smelt or two amuse themselves by throwing far out into the water two large pieces of fish tied together by a stout string. The voracious birds do not stop at swallowing a bit of rope, and if a gull reaches each end of the string at the same time there is a great fluttering, splashing and crying. Besides providing an amusement for the idlers at the docks, these wild birds do a great service to the public. They are the natural scavengers of the harbor and pounce upon everything edible and devour it with an omniverous appetite. Were it not for the gulls the vicinity of the fish wharves would reek with the flotsame and jetsam of the fishing vessels and warehouse.—Boston Transcript.

GOLF.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Park Golf Club Wednesday evening the following new members were elected: John Valiant, James Middledith, W. J. R. Thiers, F. C. Jennings, Dr. R. Waldo Emerson, Dr. C. B. Mathewson, Rev. W. M. Downey, H. Crowe, F. S. Green and L. Myers. The club feel quite proud of their new grounds, especially as they are so easy of access, being directly on the line of the trolley. The membership is rapidly nearing the limit mark, and only a few more members can be received. At the meeting the house committee were instructed to make arrangements for a formal opening in the near future.

Yesterday afternoon on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club a team from Leal's School played a match of 18 holes with the Stay-at-Homes with the following result: Whitney Baker beat Aubrey Crowe 13 up; Lester Glenny beat George Richards 1 up; Morris Dumont beat Frank Talmage 6 up. The contestants managed to get a great deal of sport out of the match, and at some future time another match will be played.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

HOGAN'S ALLEY—Directions for making.—Take a few sets of scenery of the tenement house district, unnumerable wild sentences bearing no relation to each other, a half-dozen peroxide soubrettes, a typical bowery boy and girl, a couple of Irish comedians, some more alleged actors, plenty of chewing gum and broken brogue, mix well with songs and dances, jumble all together in a bag, shake violently, the meanwhile yelling like Comanche Indians, and then dump the whole lot out on the stage, and there you have it—well done.

After setting for three hours in Music Hall that is the nearest to a correct description of what "Hogan's Alley" is that the writer can possibly conjure up. Anyone who thinks that they can do better may try their hand at it and will be presented with a yellow ticket entitling admittance to the gallery the next time the aggregation comes to town. "Hogan's Alley" cannot be classified as either good, bad or indifferent. There were a few good specialties in the performance, but the amount of gush slammed-banged in and around them spoiled the best effect. Gilmore & Leonard are all right as Irish comedians in the act they have been doing for several years past—just slightly changed now.

One of the features of the exhibition of war views and lecture next Thursday night by Rev. H. W. McKane, will be the vocal offerings by Mrs. L. McKane, contralto soloist. Mrs. McKane has sang with much success in England and was a pupil of the celebrated Prof. John Tower, of Manchester. The pictures under direction of Prof. Parker, of Schnectady, N. Y., are said to be of superior assortment and depict scenes of Cuban life, camp life and the conveyance and landing of troops at the several hospitals. A good entertainment is assured all who attend.

the ice is harvested it is removed in cakes weighing 500 pounds by a hand-crane to the two ice storage warehouses with a large capacity, or it can be shifted to the place where the ice wagons receive ice for delivery and for shipment on the cars, if necessary.

The large freezing tank is 60 feet long, 25 feet wide and 6x6 feet high. Every piece of pipe and the endless coil inside is made doubly strong, and every precaution has been taken to have the system perfectly installed.

One great advantage about the plant is that a sufficient amount of room has been left in laying it out to install a duplicate of the present system, so that the capacity can be increased to forty tons a day. By the first of next week a test of the plant will be made, and if it works satisfactory then the process of freezing will be commenced at once. There is nothing left at present to do to complete the plant but to finish up a few odds and ends, and this will take but a few days more.

SNOWED UNDER AT THE POLLS.

On Account of Voting for $40,000 to Build the First Telegraph Line.

Dr. Gatling, the gun man, is a relative of Gen. Lew Wallace, and tells the following story about the latter's father:

"David Wallace was a member of Congress from an Indiana district when S. F. B. Morse asked the government to give him $40,000 for the purpose of building the first telegraph line from Baltimore to Washington. Wallace was a member of the committee to which the bill providing for the appropriation was referred, and it happened, when the matter came up for consideration, that he was absent. The vote in committee was a tie, and so Wallace was sent for. He voted to give the inventor the $40,000, and accordingly the bill went through.

"This happened along toward the end of Wallace's term, and when he went home to strive for re-election he found that the news concerning his action on the Morse telegraph appropriation bill had preceded him. A man named Wm. Brown, who afterward became prominent in Congress, had been nominated by the democrats and he was conducting a vigorous campaign.

"In those days joint stumping tours were customary, and the two candidates went from place to place through the district, asking for the votes of the people. Brown's platform consisted of only one plank. That was the criminal record of his apponent.

"He would get up before a crowd of voters and ask them if they had heard how Wallace had voted to give $40,000 of the public's money to a man who proposed to transmit messages by means of a wire between Baltimore and Washington. The ridiculousness of such a thing was so apparent that Wallace's action could not be considered as a mere mistake. It was clearly an outrage upon the people—a deliberate swindle.

"'You may not believe,' Brown was in the habit of concluding, 'that any man with a spark of common sense would vote away the public funds for the furtherance of such a chimerical scheme, but the gentleman is here before you. Ask him if I have told the truth or not, and let him explain his action if he can.'

"Wallace, of course, admitted that he had voted away the money, and he tried to explain what Morse intended to do, butit was all in vain. His constituents made up their minds that he was either a fool or something worse, and he was, therefore, snowed under at the polls.

"It is gratifying to know that Wallace lived to see the telegraph established as an important factor in civilization, but I suppose there are people in that district who still think he was a fool and that he deserved defeat."—Cleveland Leader.

Warned Gould of the Cost.

Paul Gore, now clerk at the Auditorium Annex, was room clerk at the Grand Pacific for several years. He tells a story in connection with Jay Gould's first visit to Chicago. Mr. Gould had registered at the Grand Pacific, and was standing in the lobby with his hands in his coat pockets, looking like a countryman in town.

The little millionaire approached J. P. Vidal, who was clerk at the house, and modestly asked him what would be the best way for him to go to Lincoln Park. Vidal, not knowing who Gould was, gave him the necessary instruction as to street cars, etc. Gould heard him through and then said: "But could I not go in a carriage?"

"Yes, you can; but it is a little expensive," said Vidal.

"Well, as this is my first visit, I think I will try to stand the expense."

"All right, but to whom shall I charge the carriage?" asked the clerk.

"To Jay Gould," came the quiet answer. Vidal almost fell to the floor, but Gould got the carriage.—Chicago Times-Herald.

FAIR ATHLETES WILL PLAY BASKET BALL.

High School Girls Will Continue Their Games.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED.

ANNUAL MEETING OF G. A. A., OF HIGH SCHOOL HELD.

Miss Pruden Chosen President and Miss Randolph, Secretary and Treasurer—Will Have Class Basket Ball Teams—To Play in Whittier School—And Two Coaches Cannot Serve.

It is the young women of the Plainfield High School who are now showing the most interest in athletics. The movement started among them last fall looking toward the advancement of athletics has steadily grown and this fall is resumed with renewed energy. Meanwhile, there is a remarkable lack of interest in all athletic sports among the boys of the High School.

The success of the different class basket ball teams last winter has encouraged the girls to take up the game again this fall. Those who played last year are anxious to enter the game again while there are a number who, while new at the game, wish to learn and will take an active part in the coming contests.

The annual meeting of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School was held last week to elect officers for the coming year. Miss Jessie Pruden, one of the most active advocates of bas ket ball in the Senior class, was chosen president. Miss Bessie Fitz Randolph, another of the basket ball enthusiasts from the Senior class, was elected secretary and treasurer. Miss S. Lena Bass, one of the instructors, was elected to the board of managers, which will consist of the two officers and herself.

At present, basket ball will be the only kind of exercise that the girls will take part in. There will be three teams at any rate and possibly four. The question of coaching will come up for two of the coachers, Walter L. Long and George Proctor Smith, have left school and will probably start on a business career, which will prelude their coaching the teams. While the girls are beginning to have a good idea of the game, they still feel that they need the advice and direction of someone better skilled than they.

The second floor of the Whittier building will be continued to be used as a gymnasium for the basket ball games. Now that the cold weather is almost here, arrangements are being made for the beginning of practice which will be necessary before any regular matches are played. The captains are yet to be chosen, but they will probably be announced shortly.

THE STATE ENDEAVORERS.

Twelfth Annual Convention to be Held at Asbury Park.

The twelfth annual convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of New Jersey now promises to be one of the greatest organizations. It is to be held at Asbury Park Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and as September and October are the especially attractive months at the seashore, many thousand young people will take in this convention and thus improve the opportunity for a delightful sojourn at that popular shore resort.

Both local and State committees are doing all in their power to secure ample accommodations for all who may come, and have arranged a most thorough and profitable programme of speakers. Among them the following gentlemen will have a most prominent part: Rev. Dr. McArthur, Rev. S. Parke Cadman, Rev. A. W. Spooner, Amos R. Wells, Rev. Cornelius Brett, D. D., Rev. J. Clement French, D. D., Rev. Amory Bradford, D. D., Rev. W. H. Faunce, D. D., Rev. J. E. Keigwin, Hon. James A. Bradley, Willard R. Hamilton.

It will be advisable as far as possible to make application for hotel accommodations at as early a date as possible, and those doing so should address David Harvey, Jr., Asbury Park, N. J.

Quick Payment of Life Insurance.

D. W. Littell, treasurer of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has just received a check from W. O. Rubsen, supreme secretary, for $3,000, to pay for insurence on the death of their late brother, David A. Bowman, who was a member of Plainfield. It has been eleven days since the proof claim was filed.

—Two hundred baskets of fancy peaches for canning or table use are now on sale at Neuman Bros. grocery store.

THE SENATORIAL SEAT.

VOORHEES' PLAN IF NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR.

He Will Resign as Senator Immediately and Then as Acting-Governor Order a Special Election to be Held.

Camp Voorhees, Sea Girt, Sept. 19.—Acting-Governor Foster M. Voorhees, answering the question of a Tribune correspondent yesterday as to whether he intended to resign as Senator from Union county before or after the State convention, said:

"I have not been nominated yet. In case I am so honored by the Republican party, I intend to resign as Senator immediately after the nomination is offered to me, the same to take effect when the Senate convenes in January next. I shall then, as President of the Senate and Acting-Governor, issue a writ for a special election to fill the vacancy caused by my resignation, the election to be held on the same day as the general election for Governor and members of the General Assembly in November. This course, I believe, does not violate the State Constitution, and my friends coincide with me in this respect."

BIBLES WENT LAST.

HEROIC DEVOTIONS SHOWN BY SOLDIERS ON SAN JUAN HILL

Did Not Part With Their Bibles Till the Last Thing—John C. Whiting Relates His Experiences With Soldiers.

John C. Whiting, of New York, formerly of this city, spoke last night to the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society, of which he was at one time a member, concerning life at the army camps, where he has been serving as a Y. M. C. A. secretary during the summer. He spoke of the love shown by the men for "Uncle Sam," and of the absence of the spirit of revenge, especially among the men who had seen actual service. He told of the brave attempts of men who were only fit to be in the hospital to keep from showing how ill they were, and related some pathetic stories of individual cases of illness and death. There was a bright side to many of these cases, the men, having during their illness, become earnest Christians, through the influence of the workers among them.

Mr. Whiting spoke especially of the openness of the soldiers to Christian influences, and told how it was well known that thousands of men had been seen night after night in camp reading their Bibles and testaments; and that after the battle of San Juan Hill the smaller accoutrements of the men were found nearest the bottom of the hill, shown that they had been thrown away first, then their rations, and nearest to the top, not thrown away until the last moment, when it became absolutely necessary, the Bibles and testaments issued to them by the Christian Association. At the close of Mr. Whiting's talk, the society voted to send a generous appropriation from the treasury to aid a young man whom Mr. Whiting had spoken of, who had his family to support, and who is now slowly recovering from the fever, constantly incurring expense instead of being able to care for others.

SCOTCH PLAINS ROAD RACE.

Chapin, a Thirty-Second Handicap Man, was the Winner.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, September 19—The second of the series of road races, arranged by Roger Haskard, was run off Saturday afternoon over the Mountain avenue course, starting from Buckwell's corner, 2½ miles out and return.

The first division, the forty-five-second men, got away at a fast pace; then followed the two thirty-second men, Chapin and Marsh. Maguire started at scratch, and had he not set such a fast pace at the start would no doubt have been with the leaders at the finish. He was only about 100 yards behind at the turn, but the pace he had set for himself killed him, and he was unable to catch the bunch on the home stretch. The race narrowed down near the finish to Chapin and Marsh, the thirty-second men, and they made a very pretty finish, only about a wheel separating them. Chapin crossed the line a winner in the fast time of 13 minutes and 55 seconds. Marsh finished second and Joe Alberts finished third. Maguire finished fourth and tied Chapin for time prize.

GOLFERS GATHER AT THE HILLSIDE LINKS.

Many Excellent Scores Made Saturday Afternoon.

PLAY FOR THE FISK CUP.

REGULAR CLUB TEAM DEFEATED A LONG ISLAND TEAM.

A Good Representation of the Fair Sex Present on the Grounds—Play was Continued Till Darkness Set In—Former Mayor Gilbert on the Course—Visitors Next Saturday Afternoon—Detailed Score

The enthusiasts were out in large numbers last Saturday on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and all day members and friends of the club were to be seen making the rounds of the course. The course was in fine condition and many excellent scores were made. In the morning there was general play, but the afternoon was devoted to play for the Mrs. Fisk cup. In addition to this contest there was a large number of players on the course who were not making scores for the cup. The number of young players out was small, most of those not in the contest were middle-aged persons and were out merely for practice and the sport of the thing.

There was also a good representation of the fair sex, some of whom played, while others enjoyed the cooling breezes to be found in the shade on the large veranda at the clubhouse.

Some of the players complained of the weather being a trifle warm, and this lowered somewhat their ambition to make low scores. In the contest for the Mrs. Fisk cup the following scores were made:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
A. A. Tilney	96	15	81
Henry Ryder	102	18	84
W. B. Richards	93	7	86
W. F. Murray	106	16	90
Fred Walz	106	14	92
H. W. Beebe	108	14	94
C. Wharton, Jr.	108	14	94
H. C. Tracy	127	18	109

The players remained on the course until nearly dark and it was with reluctance that they left then. A feature of the occasion was the dinner and social time which followed in the clubhouse. There were about twenty-five members who remained to dinner, and it was nearly 10 o'clock when all of the members left for home.

Among the noted players on the course last Saturday were former Mayor Alex. Gilbert, William Palmer Smith and Miss Edith Hyde. Their faces are new on the course and they apparently enjoyed the sport immensely.

Last Saturday a seven-men team from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club went to West New Brighton, S. I., and played a match at golf with the Harbor Hill team of that place. The Hillside team was victorious by a score of 18 to 8. Below will be found the score in detail:

HILLSIDE.		HARBOR HILL.
Glenny	4	Otto Hockmeyer	0
O. F. Walz	0	W. A. Hamilton	4
J. H. P. Wharton	4	J. A. Morton	0
Stockton	0	A. B. Elliott	4
Shepard	8	R. H. G. Walker	0
Saugstad	0	J. O. Jamison	0
Morris Dumont	2	W. Lawson	0

One week from next Saturday the Harbor Hill team will come to Plainfield and play a return match on the Hillside links.

Another Acid Fire.

The same car of carboys of nitric acid that proved so serious to George Fiering, driver of the chemical engine, caught fire again this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock. The car was being moved when a carboy that had evidently been already cracked, suddenly gave way and another fire started. The car was immediately pulled up to the water tower, where the engines take water, and was flooded. The flames were extinguished without any more trouble.

Dog Poisoners in the West End.

A valuable hound dog owned by W. O. Baldwin, of West Fourth street, was killed last Saturday afternoon by poison. Mr. Baldwin says that he would not have taken $50 for the dog. A dog owned by D. Webster Littell, of Union avenue, was also poisoned last week. Both of these owners have information which leads them to believe they know who is poisoning dogs in their neighborhood.

To Make Horseless Carriages.

Articles of incorporation were filed Saturday at Elizabeth by the organizers of the Amerizan Automobile Company with a capital of $500,000. The incorporators are Max H. Crampton and Throop Mason, of New York, and Willard M. Miner, of this city. The office of the company is located at the latter's home, 428 East Sixth street.

Foundation for a Church.

The work of laying the foundation for the new Calvary Baptist church on Central avenue, will be started in a few days.

PRESENTED WITH A CANE

A PLEASANT AND COMPLETE SURPRISE FOR S. A. GINNA.

Bethel Chapel Sunday-School Honor Their Superintendent With the Gift of a Gold-Headed Cane, Suitably Inscribed.

A pleasant and complete surprise was given to Former Councilman Stephen A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Ginna is superintendent of the Sunday-school at Bethel chapel and his many friends who attend the Sunday-school and church presented the superintendent with a handsome gold-headed cane bearing the inscription "To S. A. Ginna, from the Sunday-school of Bethel chapel."

The presentation was made by Alfred W. Duxbury, assistant-superintendent of the school, and the whole affair was such a surprise to Mr. Ginna that he was at a loss for words to respond to the presentation speech. He did, however, regain his composure and in a neat speech most heartily thanked all those who contributed towards the handsome and substantial gift.

The presentation was planned two months ago and since that time those in charge have been steadily, but quietly working to complete the plans which were carried out with perfection. The cane was purchased of Asa Collier, the Park avenue jeweler, and the cane is of the finest material.

Mr. Ginna appreciates very much the expression of good will and kindly feeling evidenced and will ever hold in remembrance the presentation.

Is The Bridge Safe?

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Sept. 19—It has been claimed by some people that the bridge dividing Somerset and Middlesex counties at Bound Brook is not much traveled and that a new bridge is not required. A few days ago a tally of the traffic was kept for one day. During the day 211 wagons passed over the bridge, 160 bicyclists, 146 people on foot and five heavy wagons that caused the beams to sway three inches out of place. The counties have been notified that they will be held responsible for any accident that may occur.

Her Twelfth Birthday

Miss Stella Vermeule, of Jackson avenue, celebrated the twelfth anniversary of her birthday last Saturday. The young hostess gave a party to a number of her friends and the time was passed in playing games and in listening to vocal and instrumental music. During the hours of the celebration, which were from 2 until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a repast was served. Miss Vermeule received a number of very useful presents from her friends.

After Another Franchise.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, September 19—Tomorrow evening the Brunswick Traction Company will apply to the Council for a franchise to operate a trolley line on East Main street over the Pierce property. The work of macadamizing Mountain avenue from Main street to the Presbyterian church and thence along Watchung avenue to the foot of the mountains is now in progress.

Germans Had a Day of Pleasure.

A number of the members of the Gesang and Turn Verein went yesterday by stage to Stirling where they enjoyed the day with the society at that place. The day was passed in singing, speech-making and in eating lots of good things provided. It was after dark when the Plainfielders returned, but they all said that they had had a good time.

Arranging for a Fair.

The A. O. H. have called a special meeting for Wednesday night to make arrangements for the fair that is to be held in T. A. B. Hall October 13th. The proceeds are to go towards building the new Catholic church in the eastern part of the city, and the A. O. H. are to have an active part in the affair.

Off for College.

Among the young men who left today for college are Harry Woltman and Arthur Lederer who have entered Princeton. Among the young ladies, Miss C. Kemp has gone to Wellesley, and Miss Helen Osgood, Miss Bessie Hunt and Miss Constance Patton to Smith.

Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium to Open.

The physical department of the Y. M. C. A. will be opened next Monday night for the use of the members. The formal opening will take place later. The gymnasium and dressing-rooms have been thoroughly overhauled and are in the best condition.

But One Contagious Case.

There is at present only one case of contagious disease in the borough, that of Allan Laing, of Craig place.

Mrs. A. D. Phillips, of Central avenue, is quite ill at her home.

MANY WANT TO CAST VOTES FOR VOORHEES.

Scramble for Election to Gubernatorial Convention.

PRIMARIES HELD TONIGHT.

LIVELY CONTEST IN PROSPECT IN FOURTH WARD.

Colored Republicans Want Recognition and Will Have a Ticket Ready—Third Ward Will See a Love Feast—Five Men Nominated in First Ward—Lively Contests Promised.

Despite the fact that there will be no contest for the Gubernatorial nomination at the Republican convention at Trenton next week, there will be a general scramble throughout the State to secure the positions of delegates to the convention. There are a number of politicians who are anxious to be officially present at the convention which will nominate the man whom they consider practically certain to be elected. Tonight the primaries will be held at which the delegates will be chosen.

Only in the Third ward of this city is there the promise of a clean slate to be carried through without opposition. In the other wards there is likely to be a contest. In the Fourth it promises to be particularly lively.

Five candidates have been nominated in the First ward and will be presented to the Republican voters of the ward to select their representatives to the convention from. As Foster M. Voorhees is to be the only choice of the Republican party to run for Governor of the State, there will be no contest as to whom the different delegates are to be pledged. In fact, as far as Plainfield is concerned, there would be none in any case, for all the G. O. P.ites of this city would assuredly back Voorhees against any other name that has been mentioned. There are, however, a Lumber of Plainfielders who are anxious to be there when Voorhees is nominated and consider it only their due for past services to the party. As a result, the five candidates in the First ward have been put up by their friends and backers and each little group will do its best to push the candidacy of its choice.

The five men who have been named in the First Ward are Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, J. B. Coward, J. Fred MacDonald, Alexander Mallison, Councilman J. F. Buckle David C. Smalley. It cannot be said that any of the quintette are the special favorites of the party. As far as the party is concerned, they are all good men and will make a good representation. It will lie with the individual Republicans of the ward to say.

To all appearances there will be no exciting times in the Second Ward primary. One ticket, Nelson Runyon and W. H. Drayton, has been nominated and there is little prospect of there being much of a contest.

There is every promise of a harmonious time over in the Third Ward tonight. Only two men have been nominated for delegates, Assemblyman Roger F. Murray and Ernest R. Ackerman. While it's possible for another ticket to be run through at the last minute, there is very little probability of it and those two well-known Republicans are likely to go to the convention without any opposition.

There are only two men named in the Fourth Ward but another ticket has quietly been arranged and the Fourth Ward primary promises to be by far the most exciting one of the four. The two men already nominated are W. A. Westphal and Daniel Galbraith. They are looked upon as standing for what might be termed the regular workers of the ward. While they are satisfactory to many, there is another contingent of voters who want recognition through other candidates. The colored men of the ward are not satisfied. It was their hope that one of their race would be sent to the Gubernatorial convention thus recognizing their share of the work done for the party. The nomination came not, however. So the colored men have gathered together on the quiet and are planning a little surprise for their white friends. It remains to been seen which side will be victorious. The colored men will have a ticket bearing the names of two of their prominent workers ready for distribution and hope to win at the ballot.

Tent Meetings.

The Bible lectures and Gospel sermons will be continued every night this week at the Adventist tent, Somerset street and Linden avenue. Subject, "The New Birth, or Bible Conversion." Tomorrow night "The Three Baptisms," referred to by John.

TOM TIMBO'S HARD LUCK

SOME MISCREANT RODE OFF ON HIS BICYCLE YESTERDAY.

Stolen in Broad Daylight While Standing in Front of His Store—A Short Time Ago His Old Wheel Was Wrecked.

Tommy Timbo is having rather hard luck with his bicycles at present. It was only a little while ago that a farmer ran into his old one and totally wrecked it. Yesterday, some unknown miscreant calmly walked off with the new wheel and now Tommy is mourning its loss without any particular prospect of ever seeing it again.

Yesterday afternoon, the wheel was left standing in front of Timbo's store on North avenue. There was a crowd of young men about the entrance, most of whom were well known to the proprietor. It was about 1 o'clock when Tommy went to look for his wheel to find it gone. At first it was thought that somebody was playing a joke but the wheel didn't turn up and it soon became evident that the wheel was gone to stay. The remarkable fact was that although there was a crowd about the store all the time, nobody could remember having seen anyone take the wheel.

The theft was reported to the police but there is little chance that they will discover the thief. The wheel was an Eclipse No. 49180.

BOWLING ON THE GREEN

A NEW BRUNSWICK PLAYER WON A HANDSOME PRIZE.

Another Pleasant Day for the Enthusiasts of the Scottish Game at the Home of Christian Schepflin, Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, September 19.—Another ideal day for bowling was Saturday, and the gentlemen of the Middlesex Bowling Club spent the afternoon on Christian Schepflin's green rolling for the gentlemen's prize given by H. Brewster Willis, of New Brunswick. The prize was a handsome silver cigar case, with cigar cutter and match holder combined. The case held two compartments separated by perforated partitions, with place for sponges to keep the cigars moist.

The prize was a beauty and well worth winning, and the members exerted their utmost skill to secure it. Twenty-two contestants competed for the prize, but the contest finally narrowed down to two brothers, Alexander W. and Robert M. Pittit, both of New Brunswick, and was won by Alexander W. Pittit by a score of 11 to 10.

The contest was a close one all the way through, and some excellent bowling was done on both sides. Both the last contestants rolled good balls, and it was impossible to pick the winner until the last ball had been rolled. Even then it was almost a tie, and the judges were required to measure the distance between the balls to decide. The winner only won by a few inches.

The game lasted until nearly 6 o'clock, and was watched by those who had been outplayed with a great deal of interest. This week there will be no bowling, but on the following Saturday another prize will be put up for the gentlemen. This will probably end the matches for this season.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Justice Mosher Called in to Tie the Nuptial Knot.

A quiet home wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, at the home of Edward Dooly, of East Fourth street, when Randolph Montangue, of Newark, and Miss Mary Eliza Mundy, of Virginia, were united in marriage. Justice Mosher performed the ceremony.

Both parties originally came from Virginia, and are friends of Mr. Dooly's. All concerned preferred a civil marriage, so a justice of the peace was called in instead of a minister. After the wedding a reception was held at which refreshments were served, and towards night Mr. and Mrs. Montangue left for their home in Newark.

To Give O'Keeffe a Reception.

Arrangements are being made by the members of the Catholic Club to give a reception Wednesday night at the clubhouse in honor of Dennis O'Keeffe, of the Detroit, who is home for a few days visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Keeffe, of West Fifth street. O'Keeffe returns to his ship Thursday.

Water Main Bursted.

Yesterday one of the mains of the Plainfield Water Supply Company located on West Front street, near Plainfield avenue, burst and it kept employes of the company busy during most of the day repairing the break. A considerable amount of water was wasted, but otherwise no damage resulted.

EXPERTS WITH GUN MEET AT BRUNSWICK.

The Reservoir Gun Club Scored a Victory.

ANOTHER SERIES PLANNED.

OTHER EXCITING MATCHES HELD DURING THE AFTERNOON.

Climax Club Has Two Wins and Dunellen and Reservoir Clubs One Each—A Large Attendance—The Next Shoot to be Held at New Brunswick—Another Series About November First.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Sept. 19—There was a great gathering of trap-shooters from all over the State Saturday afternoon at the grounds of the Reservoir Gun Club, of this city, when the fourth shoot of the Central New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League was held. It resulted in a win for the team from the Reservoir Club. The Climax Gun Club, of Plainfield, has now secured two wins for the trophy offered by the Peters Cartridge Company, and one victory each is the share of the Dunellen and the Reservoir Clubs.

In the drawing for the next shoot, the New Brunswick Club won and the next shoot will be held here on the afternoon of Saturday, October 1st. After the series for the Peters Cartridge Company trophy is over, a series of shoots will be arranged with live birds. This series will be started about November 1st, when good strong flying birds can be obtained.

The summaries are as follows:

STREET WORK.

Only a Small Gang at Work, But Street Commissioner Hurrying Work.

With only a small gang of men at his command Street Commissioner Gavett is hurrying up work on the streets as much as possible. Contractor Bowden has almost finished Westervelt avenue. There is a little touching up to be done, but with that exception the street will be finished by tonight.

Today the steam roller will be taken to East Fifth street and work will be begun there. The roller will be kept there until the street is finished. This will be a relief to the wheelmen. The next work begun will be on the corner of Spooner avenue and West Fourth street, where the gutters will be lowered and the culverts changed.

A drain is to be laid from the dip on Central avenue near Randolph road along a proposed road through property belonging to Randolph Stelle. This will do away with the mud hole on Central avenue which has been such a nuisance to the neighborhood.

Solos by William Holmes.

William Holmes, of Front street, has returned to the choir at the First Baptist church, and last evening he sang two solos very acceptably. B. T. Barnes has also returned to the choir in his usual position as basso.

HOW MANILA FELL

Augustin Says General Merritt Accepted Spanish Terms.

EXPLAINS HIS DEPARTURE

The Capt. Gen. of the Philippines Refused to Accept Responsibility for Either Capitulation or Resistance Under the Circumstances. Capt. of the Kaiserin Augusta Wished to Be the First to Cable News.

Rome, Sept. 18.—The Tribuna publishes an interview which its correspondent at Aden had with General Augustin, formerly governor general of the Philippines. In the course of the interview General Augustin recounts various events which took place during the defence of Manila, which city, he says, was without resources, without a sufficient force, without artillery, without supplies and without hope of receiving reinforcements from Admiral Camara.

After the attack on July 31 by General Greene, and that of August 2 by General Anderson, supported by the Pennsylvania volunteers, the blockade was made more stringent, and as a result of the operations conducted by General Merritt, further resistance became impossible.

The committee of defence were divided, some being in favor of capitulation, while others advised extreme resistance. General Augustin, who was without instructions, declared that he would not assume the responsibility of capitulation or of resistance, which would bring about the sacrifice of thousands of peaceful persons, and resigned his command to General Jaudenes, confining himself to figuring among the defenders of the town as an ordinary soldier.

The general attack on the place was made by the Americans, the line of defence was broken and the capitulation was effected. The conditions imposed by the Spaniards were accepted by General Merritt, who entered Manila at the same time that General Augustin left it on board one of the boats of the German cruiser Kaiserin Augusta.

On this boat he found his family. They had been rescued by Admiral Diedrichs, who had previously come to an agreement with Dewey.

General Augustin explained the hurried departure of the Kaiserin Augusta by the fact that the admiral desired to send the German emperor the first news of the capitulation. The Kaiserin Augusta steamed from Manila to Hong Kong in thirty-eight hours, which was extraordinary speed.

At Hong Kong General Augustin and his family took passage in the Princess Heinrich for Genoa. Just after leaving port the steamer was overtaken by a violent cyclone, and for a time was in serious danger, many articles of baggage being lost. Senora Augustin fell and fractured her left wrist.

General Augustin denied that his wife had been a prisoner of Aguinaldo. She and the children were going to Pampaye by rail. This district was occupied by insurgents. The family was protected by a regiment of militia commanded by Captain Blanch, and after many adventures reached the coast and embarked in a native boat, which saved them.

General Augustin arrived at Naples yesterday and left for Madrid. He has intended resuming his seat in the Senate.

Wheeler to Retain Command.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Orders will be issued from the war department to-day for the disposition of the five regiments of regular cavalry now at Camp Wikoff in command of Major General Wheeler.

Three of them are to be sent to a camp hereafter to be designated within one hundred miles of Huntsville, Ala.; the Second regiment is to go to South Dakota to relieve the Eighth regiment, with headquarters at Fort Meade, and the Ninth is to be distributed throughout Arizona and New Mexico to relieve the Seventh. The Seventh and Eighth, upon being relieved will join the three regiments from Montauk.

Major General Wheeler will have command of the cavalry which is to form part of the army of occupation for Cuba and Porto Rico.

Maria Teresa Floats To-day.

Washington Sept. 19.—Captain Crowninshield, acting secretary of the navy, has received a cable message from Commodore Watson, at Guantanamo stating that the wreckers have recovered ten six-inch guns from the Spanish flagship Maria Teresa and placed them on the collier Leonidas. The commodore says it is expected the Spanish ship will be floated to-day and he will start for home on Tuesday. He is under orders to take command at the Mare Island navy yard.

The reports received at the navy department indicate that the big tropical hurricane which did so much damage in Barbadoes did not strike near the United States naval vessels at Caimanera, but passed to the eastward.

Champagne for Christening.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 19.—Governor Tanner has decided that the battleship Illinois shall be christened with champagne, and sent a letter to that effect to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Jessie Brown Hilton and Helen L. Wood, the committee of the Womon's Christian Temperance Union, which protested against christening the battleship with wine.

Fastest Half Mile in Harness.

Philadelphia, Sept. 19.—At the Belmont track, at Harbeth, Saturday, Star Pointer, in an effort to reduce his own mark of 1.59 1-4, broke the track record of 2.03 1-2, held by John R. Gentry, paced a mile in 1.59 3-4, and, incidentally, went the half in 57 1-4, the fastest half mile ever made by a harness horse at either gait.

Shoots Another Son.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Fred Picknell, an Adirondack guide, while hunting Friday, fired at a distant object in the woods. He was horrified to find that he had killed his youngest son Philip. Last year Picknell killed another son in a similar manner.

NO MEETINGS AT HAVANA

Commissioners Preparing to Take Up Quarters on Shore.

Havana, Sept. 19.—General M. C. Butler, one of the commissioners appointed to arrange for the evacuation of Cuba by the Spaniards, went aboard the steamer Resolute Saturday morning for the purpose of conferring with General Wade and Admiral Sampson, the other members of the commission. No meetings of the commissioners have been held as yet.

Saturday night the Spanish commissioners met at tthe palace of General Parrado, second in command in Cuba.

The members of the American commission are still on board the Resolute, but expect to take up their quarters at the Trocha hotel to-morrow. They will pay $150 a day for their board and the use of the building. They are all in good health.

Captains Hart and Coster and Dr. Laine have paid a visit to the civil governor and requested that sanitary improvements be made at Degado, where the Trocha hotel is situated, in order to prevent an increase of malaria, which is already prevalent. They also requested that the streets be lighted by electricity. The civil governor at once recommended to the mayor that he should give orders that immediate attention be paid to the request of the commissioners.

REORGANIZING THE ARMY.

Plans to Meet Condition Arising With the End of the War.

Washington, Sept.17.—General Miles and Acting Secretary Meiklejohn are contemplating several important questions involved in the reorganization of the army on the basis of the changed condition arising since the war. The change, it is said, is not to be to a peace basis, but rather an intermediate stage between a war basis and a peace basis, owing to the many requirements in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, Hawaii and elsewhere.

As a result of a talk with the president, the changes to be made are fully matured, but they will not take the form of definite orders until early next week or soon afterward.

In general the plan consists in reducing the volunteer army about one-half—a branch of the work which is already well under way—and then redistributing the remaining forces, regular and volunteer, to Manila, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Cuba, the Ladrones, etc., at the same time maintaining sufficient garrisons in the United States. The number of men required for the outlying possessions is being carefully considered, but a final decision is somewhat dependent on the decision of the commissioners at Havana, San Juan and Paris.

A Priest's Hidden Riches.

Mount ernon, N. Y., Sept. 19.—After nearly a year of searching in the cellars and garrets of an old rectory, a hoard of gold and securities, aggregating in value many thousand dollars, left by Father Albinger, deceased, for twenty years pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Victory in this city, has been discovered by agents of County Treasurer Carpenter.

There were found twenty-five old German purses, each of which contained one thousand marks in German gold, and a tin box in which were ten thousand dollars' worth of securities.

The old purses filled with gold and the securities, with whatever may be found in the safe deposit vault, will be turned over to the German consul in New York for Father Albinger's sisters in Germany.

French to Leave Fashoda

London, Sept. 19.—From Cairo, and from an entirely independent source, the Daily Mail learns that France has assumed a conciliatory attitude toward Great Britain, and has declared that the expedition of Major Marchand is quite unofficial.

The Sirdar will offer to take Major Marchand to Cairo, and it is probable that the major will accept, and that troops.

Admiral Montojo Suspended.

Madrid, Sept. 19.—The supreme council of war has decided to suspend Admiral Montojo and Major Sostoa, director of the Cadiz arsenal.

Montojo was in command at Manila when Dewey's squadron sank his vessels.

No Sin to Kill a Tax-Gatherer.

In the new volume called "Social Hours With Celebrities," by the late Mrs. W. Pitt Byrne, republished in England, is a story told by Cardinal Wiseman, who had a great fund of Irish anecdotes. A rough Irish lad entered the confessional of a priest and hinted at sanguineary revelations. "What, murder is it ye mane?" "Indade, an' it is, father, and a many of them. What, father, now, if it might be a matter of six or eight?" He recounted a grewsome list. "I don't think there were any more," he said, doubtfully as he closed. "Now, what were all these people?" sternly demanded the confessor. "Well, father, they were jist tax-githerers.' "Tax-githerers is it, ye say?" exclaimed the priest; "now why didn't ye tell that at first? There was no need taking up me time; ye don't come here to gossip; ye come here to confess yer sins."

How Australia Regards America.

The mode of sending the message of condolence to the President of the United States regarding the Maine disaster was discussed by the Australian Premiers now in Melbourne before it was despatched. One or two of the Prime Ministers held that it should be sent through one of the Governors and the Secretary for the Colonies, but Mr Reid brushed such arguments aside. The people of the United States, he contended, were not "foreigners" in the sense that those of France or Russia were, but our kith and kin; so he decided to send the message direct to President McKinley.—Melbourne Herald.

TWO MINISTERS OUT

Zurlinden and Tillaye Resign from the French Cabinet.

MANY FORGED DOCUMENTS

Committee to Consider the Matter Will Meet Wednesday. Esterhazy Confesses Gen. Chanoine and Senator Godin Appointed. Public Opinion Changing for Revision.

Paris, Sept. 19.—General Zurlinden, the minister of war, and M. Tillaye, the minister of public works, have tendered their resignations.

General Zurlinden's written resignation, sent to Premier Brisson, was as follows:

"I have the honor to beg you to receive my resignation as minister of war. An exhaustive study of the papers in the Dreyfus case has convinced me too fully of his guilt for me to accept, as the head of the army, any other solution than that of the maintenance of the judgment in its entirety.

M. Tillaye in the letter transmitting his resignation made an apparent bid for public favor. He wrote:

"The council having decided to appoint a commission to consider the request for a revision of the trial of the convict Dreyfus, I am unable to accept any share in the responsibility for that step, which, in my opinion, involves a revision of the case."

Later in the day another cabinet council was held, at which General Chanoine, commander of the First division of the First army corps, department of the north and the Pas de Calais, was appointed minister of war, in succession to General Zurlinden, and Senator Godin representing French India, was appointed minister of public works, succeeding M. Tillaye.

The committee summoned by M. Sarrien to decide upon the question of the proposed revision will begin to consider the matter on Wednesday next.

At the first meeting of the cabinet ministers Saturday it was decided to submit the documents in the Dreyfus case to a commission to be selected by the minister of justice, M. Sarrien. The ministetr of war, General Zurlinden, and the minister of public works, Senator Tillaye, left before the council adjourned, which was interpreted to mean that they did not agree with their colleagues in the matter and intended to resign.

Esterhazy Confesses.

London, Sept. 19.—The Observer says that Count Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy has been in London for ten days. The fact, the paper says, is known to very few here, and it is not suspected in Paris. Count Esterhazy is occupying a flat near St. James's street and Pall Mall (S. W.). He has shaved off his moustache and it is not easy to recognize him.

He added that out of the one thousand documents in the Dreyfus dossier approximately six hundred were forged, and that he was prepared to show by whom and in what circumstances the forgeries were committed.

He explains that there is no longer justice for him in his own country, and says that what he did was done in blind, unquestioning, brutal obedience to orders from a superior.

"If I were ordered to take a gun and shoot my own brother, I would do so without hesitation," Count Esterhazy declared.

Gen. Miles at Work Again.

Washington, Sept. 19.—General Miles returned to duty Saturday looking little the worse for the touch of fever with which he suffered. He had a conference with Acting Secretary Meikeljohn. He has appointed a board, consisting of Lieutenant Colonel Marion P. Maus, inspector general United States volunteers; Major W. H. Daly, chief surgeon United States volunteers, and Captain J. B. Morton, assistant adjutant general United States volunteers, to look into the condition of the immune regiments which have been raised by the United States directly. These are now quartered at Jacksonville, Fla., Anniston, Ala., Galveston, Tex., and at Lexington, Ky., and the board will visit these points. The inspection is preliminary to the execution of the plans of General Miles for the selection of garrisons for Cuba and Porto Rico.

Red Cross Work in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—The Red Cross is considering the expediency of building a large home for convalescents in the foothills back of Oakland, but will not do so unless the government first consents to allow convalescents to be sent there.

If this project is not carried out, a large annex to the present home at the Presidio will be built to accommodate the demand from tthe division hospital, and also to make room for convalescents returning from the Philippines.

Spain's Commission Named.

London, Sept. 19.—A dispatch from Madrid says that the Spanish peace commissioners appointed are Montero Rios, president of the Senate, who is president of the commission; General Correo and Senors Abarzuza, Villarrutia and Garncia.

The Spanish commission, the dispatch adds, will start for Paris on September 25.

To Be Buried at Arlington.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The war department has decided that the body of Brigadier General Haskell, who died suddenly in Columbus, O., Friday, will be buried at Arlington, although the exact time has not been fixed.

Major Roberts has been instructed to send one commissioned and six noncommissioned officers from Columbus as an escort to the body.

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

MONTAUK A PERMANENT CAMP.

As Long as Troops Are Kept in Cuba and Porto Rico.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 19.—While Camp Wikoff will, within a few days, be deserted by all troops with the exception of guard details, it is still intended to maintain the camp as a permanent institution, to serve the purpose for which it was originally established, in the event of emergency arising.

It is recognized that the necessity for such a camp will exist as long as there is occasion to keep American trops in Cuba and Porto Rico.

In the event of yellow fever gaining a hold Montauk will serve as an army quarantine hospital, and if considerable numbers of troops are sent home from time to time, invalided from the effects of the tropical climate, Camp Wikoff will be used as a place of rest and recreation just as it was at the close of the late campaign.

Extensive provisions made with this idea in view will make the camp site available at a few day's notice. All that will be necessary will be to pitch tents, for the floors will be kept ready in storage, and the extensive system of water supply, with all the pipe lines, steam pumps and tanks, will be kept in condition for impending use.

There are fair roads now running all over the camp, and the freight yard and quartermaster's storehouse will render easy the question of supplying the troops with what stores are necessary. Near the station the engineers have constructed a permanent road by which trops can be safely taken from trans and transported into the heart of the camp.

In both the general and detention hospitals commodious frame wards heated by stoves have been erected, so that the patients now remaining may be well sheltered when cold weather comes and so that the hospitals may be ready for occupation at any time of the year.

Major Brown, who has been in charge of the general hospital from the first, has been directed to write a history of the camp, covering all the sanitary features in full detail. This will be submitted to the war department within a few days.

Dr. John Hall Dead.

New York, Sept. 19.—The Rev. Dr. John Hall, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in this city, died Saturday morning in Bangor, county Down, Ireland, in the residence of his sister.

Dr. Hall was on his annual visit to Europe. He was suffering from heart trouble and his health was broken down. He had been seriously ill for two days before his death.

His wife and sons, the Rev. "Tom" Hall, and Professor Robert Hall, were present at the bedside of Dr. Hall when he passed away.

He was one of the most famous preachers in America, and his fame did not rest upon that foundation of eloquence which made the names of his contemporaries—Beecher, Phillips Brooks, Talmage and others known from one end of the country to the other.

He was not an orator. He had not the gifts which sway emotions and carry hearers along. He was a man of overpowering personality, of tremendous force. He was a deep thinker and a ripe scholar.

For thirty years Dr. Hall presided over the richest church in America, the beloved pastor of a church that numbered 2,400 people.

Dr. Hall's fame was won in New York by the force of his character, his good work among the members of his congregation, his many charities and his interest in public affairs, although he took no active part in them.

He was a prodigious worker. Whereas pastors of other large and rich churches in New York have two and three assistants, Dr. Hall did all the work connected with his church alone.

No church in America has contributed such large sums to missionary, educational and charitable work as the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. The voluntary contributions averaged $200,000 a year for many years. It has long been a social and religious center, and it includes in its membership men of enormous influence. The aggregate wealth of the members of the church has been estimated at $400,000,000.

Dr. Hall was born in county Armagh, Ireland, on July 31, 1829, and had therefore passed his sixty-ninth birthday. He was of scotch parentage. His father, who was an elder in the Presbyterian church, died when John, the eldest son, was nineteen years old.

After receiving a classical education he entered Royal college, Belfast, and after his graduation he took the course of the General Assembly's Theological College. He was licensed to preach the gospel in 1849.

Dreyfus Hiding in South America

London, Sept. 19.—George R. Sims, the playwright and journalist, has long maintained that Dreyfus was rescued from Devil's island two years ago through the instrumentality of a French syndicate organized to secure the liberation of prisoners in penal settlements who can pay heavily for their freedom.

Sims now says: "The real difficulty the French government is in with regard to Dreyfus is to find him. When he was rescued from Devil's island two years ago and a substitute left in his place, the government officials, terrified at the outcry which would be raised in France, accepted the substitute.

Aguinaldo Claims European Backing.

Manila, Sept. 19.—A high official of Aguinaldo's government declares that the dictator has succeeded in securing financial backing from a European nation. He declines to say what nation it is.

According to his talk the insurgents will be prepared for any contingency, no matter what the result of the Paris peace conference may be.

Two Battles in Formosa.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 19.—Mail advices from Japan state that another formidable rebellion against Japanese rule has broken out in Formosa, this time in the southern part of the island.

Two battles have been fought, one near Taiohu, the other near Taihoku. The tribes were defeated by the Japanese troops and the police. Many were killed and wounded on each side, but details are not obtainable.

FATHER WAS WRONG

Frank Perkins Comes Home With Daughter's Supposed Remains.

FINDS HER ALIVE AND SAFE

The Bridgeport Mystery Deepens. Grace Perkins and Her Lover Return Home After a Week's Vacation. A Grave Dug and Funeral Services All Arranged. Mourning is Turned Into Joy.

Middleboro Depot, Mass., Sept. 19.—Marion Grace Perkins arrived at her home in Middleboro Saturday, alive and well. At the same time her father was on his way from Bridgeport with the body of the murdered woman whom he had positively identified as that of his daughter. Charles Bourne, who had been absent from home since Grace bade her aunt at Onset farewell, two weeks ago Thursday, came on the same train with the young woman. Neither of them will say a word. But Mrs. Perkins, the mother of Grace, says everything is all right, and thatthe young people are married.

Where they have been their friends will not tell. They arrived here shortly before 5 p. m on a train that came from Taunton, Mass. It is said that the marriage was solemnized and that the pair spent the time either at Wareham or Tremont, about sixteen miles from this place.

The arrival of the young people at their homes makes the mystery surrounding the murder of the girl found in Yellow Mill pond at Bridgeport all the greater. There is a resemblance between Grace and the head of the dead girl.

There is joy in the home of the Perkinses and in the one of young Bourne. As a matter of fact the entire community is rejoicing. The report that Grace Perkins and Charles Bourne would return together was kept quiet. It is true that it had been announced by the friends of the young man that he would come back to Middletown on Saturday evekning, that he would be in the family pew in the Methodist church Sunday morning, and that he would return to his work early Monday, just as though the name of Chas. Bourne had never been mentioned since the discovery of the mutilated body in Yellow Mill Pond.

But that Grace Perkins would return as well, nobody had dreamed.

The secret had been well kept. The town had gone into mourning. A grave had been freshly dug on the little hill near the home of Grace Perkins, where the body of the murdered girl was to have been laid at rest. The florist had been busily engaged all day turning out floral pieces and everybody had expected to attend on Sunday the funeral of poor Grace Perkins.

Mr. Perkins had gone to Bridgeport earlier in the day to bring the body of the girl whom he had identified as his daughter to his home on Center street. The undertaker of this place had his hearse in readiness to go to the depot at Taunton, where the body of Grace was to be brought for transfer to Middleboro.

May Be a New Haven Girl.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 19.—The news of Grace Perkins returning alive to her home in Middleboro was not a great surprise to the heads of the New Haven police. When the body was first identified as that of Grace Perkins, Captain Brewer of the New Haven police department said: "I do not believe it. I believe that we have here in New Haven a clew that will lead to the identification of this body as that of a New Haven girl. I will not disclose her name, but this girl has been missing for some time. Her condition was the same as that attributed to the woman whose body was found cut up at Bridgeport. Our investigations will now be pursued with renewed vigor."

Vesuvius Growing Angry

Naples, Sept. 19.—A state of gloomy apprehension prevails among the population regarding the eruption of Vesuvius, which is hourly becoming more active and menacing. Streams of lava are spreading in every direction. The most threatening of these flows through the Vedrino valley, which is almost filled.

The observatory, which originally stood at a height of 610 metres, is now only 27 metres above the sea level, owing to the sinking of the ground.

Seven new craters have formed around the central one, and this has not tended to diminish the fears formerly felt, which were based upon the eruption of stones and scoriae, similar to that which occurred in the year 1872.

The Sultan Yields

Candia, Island of Crete, Sept. 19.—The sultan has ordered Djevad Pasha, the military commander in Crete, to accede to the demand of the British admiral, Gerard Henry Noel, for disarmament, thus complying with the ultimatum of the admiral. A British military detachment to-day occupied the entrance to the fort, and it is rumored that the Ottoman troops will be withdrawn and a British force will occupy the town.

J. Pierpont [illegible] Breweries.

Cincinnati, Sept. 19.—A special to the Commercial Tribune from Wabash, Ind., says: A syndicate headed by John D. Rockefeller and J. Pierpont Morgan, together with the American Malting Company, is trying to gain control of the breweries in the smaller cities of northern Indiana.

Two Earthquake Shocks in Maine.

Portland, Me., Sept. 19.—Two earthquake shocks occurred in Deering on Saturday morning. The first was felt at 10.45 o'clock, lasting seven seconds, followed after an interval of eleven seconds by a second shock lasting five seconds.

Italians to Have a Parade.

New York, Sept. 19.—One hundred and fifty-seven military and civic Italian-American societies of New York will to-morrow celebrate the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Italian national holiday with a parade, to be followed by a festival.

THE ARMY INVESTIGATION.

The President Will Probe the Charges to the Bottom.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Evan P. Howell of Atlanta, Ga., who was asked by the president to serve on the commission to investigate certain departments of the army in connection with the war, was at the White House Saturday and formally accepted the appointment. In his interview the president assured Mr. Howell that it was his purpose to secure a commission which, without fear or favor, would probe to the bottom the charges made by newspapers and individuals involving the efficiency and integrity of officers of the army, and give the country the facts. The secretary of war had asked for an investigation, and the president thought it due to all concerned that the investigation be made at once by a commission in whose honesty of purpose and ability there could be no question.

Under he citrcumstances, Mr. Howell assured the president that he would gladly accept the appointment, as he regarded it a duty which no citizen should evade. Mr. Howell thought that there would be no necessity for the commission to leave Washington during hte inquiry. Offices for its use would be secured in or convenient to the war deparmtent, where the official records would be a thand.

The only purpose of the presiden tin securing if possible nine members of the commission is to lighten the labors of the individual members. According to his idea the work of the commission could be divided among sub committees so that the larger the commission the easier would be the work for the individual members. If, however, the president was unable to secure the services of nine members, he would proceed with seven. He expected that in any event the commission would be completed within the next few days.

The men who already have accepted, or who, it is confidently expected, will consent to serve, are Colonel Sexton, General Dodge, Mr. Denby, Mr. Howell, Dr. Gilman and Dr. Keene. As to the power of the commission to compel officers and others to testify as to facts within their knowledge, the president assured Mr. Howell that if the commission met with any difficulty, which, however, he did not expect, he would know the reason why.

After a conference of half an hour with the President Saturday, General Schofield announced that he would not serve as a member of the Commission to investigate the conduct of the war.

QUARANTINE RAISED AT PONCE.

No New Cases of Yellow Fever. Officers Sail for Home.

San Juan, Sept. 18.—Reports received here from Ponce say that no new cases of fever have developed there, and the opinion is growing that the existing cases of sickness have been incorrectly diagnosed.

The quarantine has therefore been raised, and Lieutenants Elkings and Wardman, of Major General Brooke's staff, and Lieutenant Fielder and six cadets from the cruiser Cincinnati, sailed for New York, to-day on board the British steamer Carribee, Captain Scott, which had arrived from St. Thomas.

The Spanish authorities have offered to Rear Admiral Schley six thousand tons of coal at $6 a ton. He has sent a dispatch to the department at Washington for instructions.

It is reported that Captain General Macias to-day received information from Madrid that two steamers had sailed for San Juan for the purpose of embarking trops for Spain.

Hospital for Sick Cavalrymen.

New York, Sept. 19.—Mrs. M. B. Stevens, Mrs. C. B. Alexander and Colonel E. A. Stevens of Castle Point, Hoboken, have offered the Country Home, at Basking Ridge, as a convalescent hospital, where the sick cavalrymen brought home from Porto Rico may be restored to health.

The house, which is an ideal one, was purchased by the Stevens family for $6,000 in 1844, and is conducted under the auspices of the Church of the Holy Innocents in Hoboken. It is a two-story frame building, surrounded by six acres of land.

Preparations are now going on at the home for the reception of the soldiers under the management of Mrs. Palmer Campbell.

New Departure in Money Orders.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The public will greatly appreciate the convenience afforded through an order just issued by Mr. Heath, the first assistant postmaster general, which authorizes postmasters to issue money orders payable at their own offices. This practice has not been heretofore followed, and the new departure will be an accommodation to a great number of people, who, not having accounts at a bank, desire to follow this economical and absolutely safe method in payment of bills.

Gen. Wheeler Renominated.

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 19.—At the Democratic primaries in the Eighth Congress district Saturday Major General Joseph Wheeler was unanimously renominated to serve his ninth term in Congress.

A good vote was polled as a mark of the high regard in which the hero of Santiago is held at home.

General Wheeler made no canvass, simply announcing in a letter written while he was before Santiago that he desired re-election.

Mr. Watson on the Legal Commission.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The president has appointed ex-Representative David K. Watson of Ohio a member of tthe commission engaged in the work of codifying the criminal and penal laws of the United States. The appointee at one time was attorney general of Ohio. The retirement of Judge A. C. Thompson, a member of the commission, who was Saturday appointed federal judge of the southern district of Ohio, made a new appointment necessary.

Mussulmans Must Disarm.

Candia, Island of Crete, Sept. 19.—Admiral Noel, the British naval commander here, has handed to Edhem Pasha, the Turkish governor, a demand for the disarmament of the Turkish population. The pascha is awaiting the instructions of the Turkish government on the subject.

COMING EVENTS.

Sept. 24—Wm. D. Murray will speak of the Y. M. C. A. army work in the Seventh Day Baptist church at the morning service.

Sept. 25—Tom Graham, the Scotch evangelist, will speak and sing at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m.

Elston M. French for the Assembly.

If Elston M. French concludes to become an aspirant for the Democratic nomination of Assemblyman in Somerset county, as some of the party leaders are urging him to do, he will at once bring to the approaching campaign a strong factor for the Democrats to settle on with splendid chances of winning.

In the office of Assessor of North Plainfield Mr. French has already demonstrated his aptitude for public duties, and in his rapid rise in the local business world he shows every qualification that would appeal strongly to voters to support him in the knowledge that the county would possess an active and able representative in the lower House of the Legislature if he was there. His youth, his energy and his personal popularity would contribute to give the campaign an activity that few other candidates could command.

In North Plainfield Mr. French would undoubtedly receive a very large complimentary vote from Republicans, and together with a full party vote he would roll up such a majority that it would require but a reasonable amount of support from other sections of Somerset county to ensure his election.

Mr. French would certainly make a strong candidate for the Democrats.

A Deplorable Condition.

The North Plainfield township school trustees are not looking after the rising generation in a proper manner when they fail to make provision for the attendance of children in the eastern end of the township at the Scotch Plains Public School. There are perhaps a dozen children practically debarred from securing the greatest of all American gifts—an education—through living too far from the regular township school and not having the school trustees arrange for their instruction at Scotch Plains. The matter can be adjusted for $3 per pupil with the Scotch Plains officials, a sum too small to stand in the way of its acceptance by North Plainfield.

Leave Out The Daily Press.

Who is doing this fighting of the Bergen plan? Who? Well, at least six newspapers—the Plainfield Press, Cranford Chronicle, Summit Record, Union County Democrat, Contractor and Gazette, and The Republican. And there are good citizens in the fight, too. A column might be filled with names. There is a conspiracy against the county and—there is war.—Westfield Republican.

The editor of The Republican is slightly off in classifying The Daily Press as an opponent of the Bergen plan. As a newspaper, The Daily Press is printing all the news that is going in reference to the project. If it happens to be for or against it is what the news makes it.

The Trolley Franchise.

After all, if the interference of the Board of Freeholders with the city in granting the trolley franchise to the local company for its eastern extension is going to open up a way for the Common Council to demand something more substantial than was at first proposed for privilege of using the streets, then certainly all's well that ends well.

Where the Blame Belongs.

The public letter of Mayor Wilson, of the borough, to the taxpayers, which was printed in The Daily Press Saturday, puts the blame for the increased tax rate where it belongs—on the county officials. North Plainfield has never had a better administration of local affairs than it is enjoying at present.

Gordon Avenged.

The remarkable campaign of the Anglo-Egyptian army under Sir H. H. Kitchener, which culminated in the crushing defeat of the Mahdist forces at Omdurman, just opposite the ruins of Khartum, on the Blue Nile, is more than ordinarily significant. Here, near where the martyred Gordon fell with the English flag almost in sight, General Kitchener has finally smashed the whole fanatical dervish following. England has added another splendid soldier to the muster roll of her military genius. He belongs to the superb group among which Marlborough and Wellington stand foremost. A campaign fought with more acute prevision and mathematical certainty from the first to the last step cannot be cited in recent annals except perhaps the first part of Moltke's campaign against the French. The achievement was a great one, but its political consequences are likely to be greater. The only justification of war is that it sometimes opens the way for a more certain advance of civilization. That has been done by Kitchener Pasha. The tenacious clutch of the self styled khalifa and his dervish hordes on the upper Sudan has been for many years the impassable barrier, across whose zone there was no passage north or south.

Now the march of progress is opened to the great African lakes, and the dream of that empire builder, Cecil Rhodes, has become practicable. The newly cemented friendship between Germany and England makes the advent of railway and telegraph across the eastern middle belt an assured thing, and the opposition by the Portuguese in the Zambezi region can be brushed away without trouble. The connection between South Africa and Egypt by steam and electricity has made a giant stride in the success of Kitchener Pasha, and the next score of years will probably see through travel between Cape Town and Alexandria. Political obstacles removed, the physical obstructions to be overcome are not to be compared with those conquered by the engineers of the Siberian railroad. The dramatic feature of the great victory at Omdurman flows out of its association with the lamented Gordon, who fell pierced in Khartum by a dozen lances 14 years ago this month. Its true significance is that it has demolished the last absolute barrier in the march of civilization on the dark continent.

A Halcyon Sky.

Our own recent war came to a swift end, happily disappointing expectation. Great results accrued from an unprecedently small loss of life by the casualties of battle. Very soon the czar's invitation to the world's great powers to participate in a peace conference for the purpose of at least a partial disarmament astonished humanity. This proposition emanating from a source so potential for the ends of peace or war was a trumpet blast, stirring and delighting the hearts of all good men. It unfolded a new vision of possibilities, such as no lover of his kind had dared hope for. Less than a fortnight later came the news that Germany and England had entered into an alliance and had agreed on a satisfactory basis for the settlement of their commercial and colonial interests in Asia and Africa. They had found a common understanding as to their relative operations to be far more helpful than a condition of bickering and distrust. Almost simultaneously it was reported that the warcloud in the Chinese imbroglio as between England and Russia had dissipated before the power of an agreement as to their mutual claims. Each agreed to respect the other's sphere of influence and to forbear kindling the flames of discord by illegitimate and cunning intrigue.

Whether or not there proves to be in practice a full realization of the hopes provoked by these auspicious phases of diplomacy, one thing is reasonably assured. England, Germany and Russia, the three European powers of commanding influence, will studiously refrain from any action which will disturb the hopes of peace. Italy and Austria, though not parties to any indicated negotiation, for their conditions do not involve it, are known to be in warm sympathy with the prospect of a world at peace. And France, however fretted by irritation at the defeat of hopes which war alone could gratify, is powerless alone. There is promise of a halcyon sky and once more Milton's divine lyric on the Christian nativity may be true:

No war nor battle sound
Was heard the earth around.
The idle spear and shield were high uphung;
The hooked chariot stood
Unstained with human blood,
And kings sat still with awful eye,
As if they surely knew their sovereign lord was by.

The phrase of Spanish hospitality in welcoming the visitor is, "All that I have is yours." This is probably what General Macias in the name of Spain said to General Brooke coming in the name of the United States. It had ceased to be hyperbole.

A young man is rich in all the future which he dreams. The old man is poor in all the past which he regrets. There are many millionaires who would exchange some of their millions for a cup of forgetfulness.

The most dangerous vices are virtues, which have put themselves into perverse and inharmonious relation to life.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The astute Summit Herald says that the three Union county Assemblymen are entitled to a renomination. Verily: if Mr. Murray or either other, declines, there's Westfield's turn next. The Herald also denies the rumor that Summitt has a Senatorial candidate, and suggests that it is Springfield that is rolling forward.—Westfield Republican.

* * * * *

Presumably The Republican will not get thanked for discussing the Democratic candidate for Governor; but inasmuch as Mayor John F. Wilson, of North Plainfield, is prominently mentioned for the office, we feel like saying that, having met the genial gentleman, and knowing how highly he is esteemed, we should say that he would be a candidate worth fighting.—Westfield Republican.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The North Plainfield correspondent of the Bound Brook State Centre says:

A few days ago Alfred Bonnell, of North Plainfield, was in Homan's blacksmith shop, and taking a large sledge-hammer from a helper he beat a five-minute tattoo on a red-hot iron that a blacksmith was fashioning into shape. Mr. Bonnell is in his 94th year hale and hearty. He can be seen almost any clear day in the suburbs of the city, taking long walks. He was born in Passaic Valley and learned the trade of bellows-maker in his youth.

The fine specimen of coral presented to the Public Library by the widow of the late David M. Demarest has been placed in the main room of the art gallery. The books presented by Mrs. Demarest at the same time are soon to be put in circulation. Another gift of much value is that recently made by Hugh Hastings, State historian of New York, who has presented his valuable report, containing the papers of Gov. Daniel D. Tompkins, embodying a history of the War of 1812, and showing the important part borne by the State of New York in this second war with Great Britain. This last has been placed in the reference department.

A goose once saved Rome, so the story goes, but the residents of West Fourth street, in the vicinity of Central avenue, do not see any reason why that bird should be immortalized forever afterwards, especially by one of their neighbors, whose flock of these noisy fowls annoy the neighborhood with their uncouth calls. Yesterday the geese wandered out on the street car tracks, and stood gapping at a car rapidly approaching, until the motorman slowed down and by a frantic waving of his arms persuaded the stupid creatures to get out of the way. A flock of ducks, which also forms a part of this poultry farm, add their resonant "quacks" to the noises made by the geese, and make the people living around there feel like going out gunning with a shot gun. It is said that a complaint may be made soon to the authorities.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 19.—No arrangement has yet been made by the North Plainfield Township Board of Education by which the scholars over the brook may be able to attend the Scotch Plains school. It is said the parents are much incensed and some have blamed the Scotch Plains Board. But when they have had the matter explained to them they will be able to see where the blame lies. It is only a matter of $3 per scholar for the school year, and it seems a shame some arrangement is not made so that the children will be able to receive this year's schooling.

ASTHMA CAN BE CURED.

A Noted Physician Will Prove This to Sufferers in Plainfield, Thursday.

The progress of modern medical science has led to the discovery of successful methods of treatment for most of those maladies once regarded as incurable. Asthma has always been regarded as belonging to this obstinate class, baffling the skill of the greatest physicians. Thousands of sufferers know by their own experience that little if any relief has been afforded them by the methods heretofore employed. Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann the noted physician has, after a life long study of Asthma and kindred diseases, discovered a remedy which not only gives instant relief in the severest cases of Asthma, Hay-Fever and Bronchitis, but has actually cured thousands whose cases had been pronounced incurable. So complete is his confidence in his remedy, that to overcome the skepticism of the public growing out of the failure of other remedies, Dr. Schiffmann requests this paper to announce that all day Thursday, Sept. 22nd, he offers a liberal sample box of "Schiffmann's Asthma Cure" free of charge to all persons applying at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store, 143 W. Front street. He believes that an actual test will be the most convincing and in fact the only way to overcome the natural prejudice of thousands of Asthmatics who have heretofore sought relief in vain. Persons living out of town will receive a package free, postpaid, by writing direct to Dr. Schiffmann, 315 Rosabel St., St. Paul, Minn., before Sept. 30th, as no free samples can be obtained after that date. Send simply your name and address plainly written on a post card.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 19.—Temperance workers from all over the county will be in Westfield Wednesday to attend the fourteenth annual open session convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. which will be held in Willard Hall. Mrs. Bourne, the State president, will deliver an address in the morning, and in the afternoon Mrs. Underhill, of Rahway, will conduct a Bible meeting. The evening meeting will be held in the Methodist church and the principal address will be made by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the church.

It is rumored that the Central Railroad Company will shortly move their freighthouse nearer Central avenue and make a freight yard where the building now stands. This would do away with drilling trains so near the depot and the crossings would not be blocked so often.

The hotels about the town were closed tight yesterday and many a thirsty man said unpleasant things about the Township Committee who had sent out orders Saturday night that all places must be closed and kept closed all day.

The Press is on sale at the news store of Charles Whittke, on Broad street.

The Republican primary tonight in the township rooms at 8 o'clock.

LINCOLN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Lincoln, Sept. 19—The members of the newly-formed German Club, held their second meeting Thursday evening at the residence of President Brugger. Considerable business was transacted, among which was the location of their new clubhouse. After a lengthy discussion of the subject by Messrs. Brugger, Lindebary, Fischer and Walfing it was decided that if John Yeagie, of Dunellen, would rent the house lately vacated by Peter Hanson, the society would rent part of the dwelling from him. The matter was then allowed to rest until the special committee would report final arrangements at the meeting two weeks from date.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

BREAKING A "MILL."

By Stuart Francis.

"Now keep them going, boys! Look at that cow and calf in the lead! Two to one she'll monkey around about the time she strikes the current—then we'll have a mill."

A party of cowboys were shouting and yelling at a herd of cattle that they were driving across one of our large Western rivers. There are few men who do not dread getting cattle over these rivers when they are swollen, as they are every spring, by the rains and the melting of snow in the mountains. Streams that are ordinarily easily crossed at the fords are then mountain torrents, and it is often extremely dangerous to attempt a crossing.

At this season of the year large herds of cattle are being driven from one point to another, the object being to return them to their own range, or to the vicinity of the range to which they belong, from which location they have strayed during the previous winter.

On these drives it often becomes necessary to cross quite large streams. Sometimes the herds are driven easily but at other times, when the cattle in the lead get into the strong current, they drift down the stream until they can swim into less swiftly running water, of course returning toward the bank from which they have been driven. In the meantime, as the cowboys keep driving and shouting, they turn again with the rest of the herd. Other animals do the same, until the majority, or at least a large proportion of the stock, are swimming in a circle.

This is called "milling," and is much dreaded; for there is but one effectual way of "breaking a mill"—that is, to ride in on the down-stream side of the cattle to the current, and beating back the animals as they drfit, try to start them across the swift portion of the stream; if a few can be forced across, the others follow quite readily.

On this occasion it was as Joe Reeves, speaking as above, had predicted. When the cow and calf that were near the lead struck the swift current, the cow began to manifest great uneasiness regarding the welfare of her calf, and turned to it to assure herself of its safety. Other animals became interested in the movements of the two, and soon there was a mill.

"Joe, how do you like that? Will you break it?"

"Well, Bob, I can't say I hanker after the job, but I can try as hard as anybody."

The speaker dismounted, looked well to his saddle, and taking his "slicker" (a waterproof coat) from behind the cantle of his saddle, handed it to his foreman, for a man wants as little as possible on his saddle at a time like this.

"Say, Bob, you take care of that, and let me have your quirt, (a heavy riding-whip;) it is heavier than mine. Tell the boys to keep them going as much as they can."

Joe's horse proved to be an excellent swimmer, and in a few minutes the young man was delivering such blows upon the heads of the cattle that it looked as though he would make short work of the mill.

But unfortunately, a steer, which seemed to be maddened by the situation, struck at the horse with his horn and hit him in the breast. The animal reared in the water, and in a second the small space that had been occupied by his fore parts was filled with cattle, all pushing, surging and striking with their horns. The horse came over on his side and back, and Joe went down. Another moment and horse and rider were being trampled by the cattle in the water.

The cowboys on the bank were horror-stricken; but this was not a rare occurrence; every time a man attempts to break a mill he realizes, as he enters the river, that he has no guarantee that he is not entering his grave.

Bob saw it all, but, like the others, could do nothing.

"Poor Joe! Another to add to the list of the river's victims—and as good a man as ever rode a saddle. Who will follow Joe Reeves? Who will break it now?" he asked, turning to the men.

Several signified their willingness and to one of them Bob said—

"Sam, you can try."

Without another word Sam rode into the river, and in due time had the leaders of the cattle across the current. After the first few had crossed it was a very easy matter to get the others to follow.

Joe Reeves' horse and saddle were discovered, several months later, some twenty miles down the river, but Joe's body was never found, and the river is his sepulchre.

Fortunes from Bananas.

Immense fortunes have been made out of the banana business. Revenues do not accrue alone from the sale of the fruit, for the leaves are used for packing; the juice, being strong in tannin, makes an indelible ink and shoe blacking; the wax found on the under side of the leaves is a valuable article of commerce; manila hemp is made from the stems, and of this hemp are made mats, plaited work and lace handkerchiefs of the finest texture; moreover, the banana is ground into bana flour. The fruit to be sold for dessert is ripened by the dry warmth of flaring gas jets in the storage places in which it is kept, and immense care has to be taken to prevent softening or overripening. The Island of Jamaica yields great crops of this useful and money-making fruit.-Memphis Sothitar.

SHE WAS AT THE FRONT.

Elsie Reasoner Followed Shafter to See What War Was Like.

To a bright and winsome miss of twenty years fresh from the Sunflower State belongs the distinction of having been the only American girl to follow the boys in blue to Cuba and to make her way to the front against many obstacles and by her own exertions. Elsie Reasoner is the name of this plucky little heroine. From her picture one gets the impression that she is somewhat older and taller than she really is.

Miss Reasoner was born in Kansas, in the midst of daisies and sunflowers, and is a splendid example of the bright, cheery, breezy, self-reliant girl of the Western prairie. She writes well and she talks well, inheriting these talents, perhaps, from her father, Judge Calvin Reasoner, at one time a prominent editorial writer of Leavenworth and later connected with the Chicago press.

When the Spanish-American war broke out Miss Reasoner was at Omaha in charge of the Bureau of Publicity at the exposition. With the first sound of the bugle she was astir, and determined to go to Cuba to see for herself what a real campaign and a real battle were like.

In telling of her expoits she said: "I first sought some encouragement from publishers, but got little. You see, hardly any one thought it possible that I would ever reach the scene of the conflict, and most of my friends and acquaintances who knew of my intention either laughed at me or tried to frighten me. One publisher, for whose magazine I thought I might write an interesting article descriptive of my experiences, wrote me that my proposed undertaking was 'positively absurd and foolhardy.' However, I persevered, and in due time sailed from New York to Kingston, bearing splendid letters of recommendation from quite a number of influential public men.

"I had one to General Miles, one to General Shafter, and several to officers of the fleet, from Admiral Sampson down to captains of the fighting ships.

"I saw some lively skirmishes, and was near enough to the front and the firing line to hear the music of the

MISS ELSIE REASONER.

Mausers and the crack of the rifles our boys carried. I was near enough to see some of the horrors of war, and to realize that General Sherman had it about right. I got just as near to the thick of the fight as the commanding officer would permit me to go.

"I did not see the great hero, 'Teddy' Roosevelt. I missed that pleasure, but I did see many of his troopers, some of them dead and others wounded. And that reminds me, here is a picture I took of a Spaniard lying dead on the field. He was a sharpshooter, and, from his perch in a mango tree, had been picking off some of Roosevelt's men. A big, burly negro cavalryman finally located the Spaniard, and brought him down, badly wounded. Without looking to see whether he was dead or alive the enraged negro raised his rifle and battered the sharpshooter over the head until he was dead. There he is, just as he lay when I passed the place. You see I got an excellent picture of him.

"Oh, yes; I saw funny things, too. I saw a Cuban sell a horse for half of a pineapple and a piece of tobacco.

"I saw six-footers of the Michigan volunteers, who had fought Spaniards almost hand to hand, run like deer from under sized land crabs.

"I saw General Shafter—three hundred and seventy odd pounds—riding a diminutive Cuban horse.

"Two things most impressed me, one quite as much as the other. First, the deplorable mismanagement of the transportation and commissary departments, and, second, the wonderful cheerfulness of the soldiers amid great hardships and sufferings. I never saw such a body of splendid fellows, and have no idea I shall ever see the like again. Why, I saw young men in some of those field hospitals desperately wounded who were cracking jokes with one another. I met pale faced men, hardly able to walk, making their way to the rear for treatment, whose only complaint was of their hard luck in being hit so early in the fight. So far as I could judge the mismanagement of the Santiago campaign on land was something awful; the bravery and cheerfulness of the rank and file were something glorious."

"Does your wife do much fancy work?"

"Fancy work? She won't even let a porous plaster come into the house without crocheting a red border round it and running a yellow ribbon through the holes."

BUSINESS WAS BUSINESS.

How a Paymaster in Our Navy Took a Fall out of the Bank of England.

The late Paymaster Clark of the United States navy, of Delaware, was attached to one of the ships on the European station during the period of the civil war. It may have been the Kearsarge, but it is not important. She was an armed vessel and had been long at sea and came in for coal, provisions and to give the men a liberty day on shore. To meet these and other expenses it was necessary to have some eight thousand pounds (men are paid in the currency of the country they may be in when on foreign stations), and Paymaster Clark drew sight drafts on the sub-treasury of New York through the government agents, J. S. Morgan & Co., bankers, in old Broad street, London.

Accompanied by the vice consul he went to the Plymouth branch of the Bank of England, and presenting his drafts, asked to have them changed for notes and gold. The bank manager, not content with exercising proper commercial scrutiny, was very nasty, and finally said:

"Well, I do not know the sub-treasury, I do not know the paper nor you, and I have never had business with the gentleman who is United States vice consul here, so I won't cash your drafts. You say J. S. Morgan will indorse them. You had better go up to London and let him cash them."

Mr. Clark went out to the telegraph office, put himself in communication with Mr. Morgan, and Mr. Morgan went to the Bank of England in London, the manager sent word to the Plymouth branch manager, and that gentleman came personally to the Royal hotel and, with his hat in his hand, begged to be of service to Paymaster Clark in any way that gentleman would suggest. The apparently placated paymaster, accompanied by his clerk, accompanied the bank officer to the bank. The drafts were duly passed over and a large bundle of Bank of England notes placed before the paymaster.

"What are these?" asked Clark.

"Those are Bank of England notes."

"Yes, I see they are notes signed by Frederick May that the bank will pay bearer, etc. Well, I do not know Mr. May, and, of course, I do not know you. This paper may be good, but I have no assurance of that. I'll trouble you for the gold."

The humiliated bank manager had to hunt it up, and Paymaster Clark carried it down to the boat in triumph.

"I would have preferred part of the money in notes," he said, "but I could not refuse the chance of getting even."—Philadelphia Times.

CAN THE QUEEN ABDICATE,

Not Considered Wise on Account of Her Foreign Subjects.

There are not only pecuniary and constitutional difficulties in the way of abdication. The Queen, however, is not only Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, she is also Empress of India, reigning sovereign over more Moslems than the Grand Turk, and of more Africans and Asiatics than any other civilized monarch. Abdication would be misunderstood by most, misrepresented by some, and resented by all of them. Death they know; a living ruler they understand. What is abdication to the border tribes of the Hindoo-Koosh, to the lake-dwellers of Uganda, or the fierce tribesmen of the Soudan? From an imperial standpoint a scepter dropped from the hand of the Great White Queen can be borne aloft in her lifetime by no successor.

In many parts of the world the British raj is personified in the little lady who, sixty years ago, said to those who told her that she was a Queen, "I will be good." In some parts of India she is actually worshipped as a goddess. In her lifetime the native races of the empire will either look to the Queen as their ruler, or they will assume that something has happened that saps and neutralizes British power. These imperial considerations as to the effect on Asiatics and Africans were also in the minds of the Ministers when they unanimously refused to advise the Queen to rest from the crushing burden of the crown.—Harper's Magazine.

HONEST BOOK BORROWERS.

San Francisco Has a Wonderful Public Library Record.

After several experiments the managers of the public library in San Francisco believe that the book reading public can be trusted, and they have widely extended library privileges. Ten thousand volumes of the most popular works of all classes, intended for general circulation, have been opened to the unrestricted access of the public. The books may be taken from the shelves to the reading tables or may be taken home, the patrons being trusted to get their books charged at the desk. The preceding experiments were interesting.

Two and a half years ago 5,000 juvenile books were segregated and the children were allowed to make selections direct from the shelves. In 21 months, with a circulation of 118,006 juveniles, only thirty-six volumes were lost. Then the 2,000 volumes in the five branches were opened to shelf access, and there were no books reported missing. The shelves in the reference and periodical rooms were opened to library readers, and then as an experiment 500 books for general circulation were placed in the reference room, where they could be looked over, and none disappeared. Last year 571,500 volumes were circulated and only thirty-one were lost from all causes.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bayern.

München. Während des diesjährigen Oktoberfestes findet auf der Festwiese eine: Erste Allgemeine Ausstellung von Pfeifen und Rauchrequisiten, mit Wettstreit für Tabake, Cigarren und Cigarretten, nebst Plakatkonkurrenz der einschlägigen Branchen statt. Dem Unternehmen wurde seitens des Magistrats ein sehr günstig gelegener Platz zugewiesen—In einem hiesigen Gasthofe wurde ein 33jähriger Kommis und Handlungsreisender (Joseph E. aus Ottakring-Wien) in seinem Zimmer auf dem Sopha erschossen aufgefunden. Selbstmord steht außer Zweifel.

Fürth. Die Relikten des im Januar d. J. verstorbenen Kommerzienrathes Humbser haben dem Magistrat unter dem Vorbehalt späterer Bestimmung über die Stiftung ein Kapital von 50,000 Mark übergeben.

Hof. Hier stieß der Maurer Fischer nach vorausgegangenem Wortwechsel den Tagelöhner Brendel von dem Neubau, auf dem er arbeitete, in die Tiefe. Die Verletzung Brendels ist sehr schwer. Der Thäter ist verhaftet.

Landshut. In Achdorf ist eine Tagelöhnersfrau, die mit ihren vier Kindern in bitterster Noth lebte, am Hungertyphus erkrankt und jetzt im hiesigen städtischen Krankenhause gestorben.

Passau. Die hiesige Polizei verhaftete kürzlich einen gewissen Rudolf Gust aus Kolmar in dem Augenblicke, als er falsche 20-Pfennigstücke aus Nickel ausgab. Er will nur eine geringe Anzahl solcher Münzen verfertigt haben und man fand bei ihm außer den Werkzeugen auch nur ein Dutzend der schlechten Falsifikate. Inzwischen stellte sich heraus, daß er in hiesigen Geschäften mehrere solcher Münzen losgeschlagen hat.

Perlach. Ein reicher hiesiger Bauer beauftragte seine zwei Knechte, zwei Holzhauern „Eines hinaufzugeben," weil sie an einer von dem Bauern gelieferten Fuhre Holz Einiges auszusetzen hatten. Die Knechte besorgten den Auftrag so gründlich, daß der eine Holzhauer todt auf dem Platz liegen blieb, der andere mit zertrümmerten Schädelknochen sterbend in's Krankenhaus verbracht wurde. Herr und Knechte sind verhaftet.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Frankenthal. In Heßheim feierte das Ehepaar Ph. Stähler, 84 Jahre alt, und Elisabeth Stähler, geb. Huckelberger, 83 Jahre alt, das seltene Fest der diamantenen Hochzeit. Das Jubelpaar hat 3 Kinder, 13 Enkel und 15 Urenkel. Beide Ehegatten sind noch geistig und körperlich so rüstig, daß sie noch von ihrem Wohnorte nach Worms und zurück zu Fuß marschiren, ein Weg zusammen von etwa fünf Stunden.

Herxheim. Hier schlug neulich Abends gegen 11 Uhr der Blitz in ein Haus, in dem gerade Hochzeit gefeiert wurde. Die 23jährige Braut und ein 21jähriger Hochzeitsgast wurden getödtet, der Bräutigam schwer verletzt. Die übrigen Anwesenden kamen mit dem Schrecken davon.

Kaiserslautern. Ein in Nancy aufgestiegener Luftballon mit zwei Franzosen im Korbe landete dieser Tage in Enkenbach. Die Insassen mußten sich beim Bezirksamte genaueren Erhebungen über die Zwecke ihrer Reise unterziehen und durften dann die Heimreise antreten.

Otterberg. Der hier im Steinbruch beschäftigte Arbeiter Peter Steinbrecher gerieth im Wirthshaus mit seinem jüngeren Bruder in Streit. Im Verlauf desselben zog er das Messer und stieß es dem Bruder in's Herz. Dieser brach todt zusammen. Der Thäter wurde in einer anderen Wirthschaft, wo er ruhig weitergekneipt hatte, verhaftet.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

CHAPTER XVI.

"Delverton! Delverton!"

The station-master walked down the platform, shouting out the name with a provincial twang likely to deceive a stranger; and Lilac Marvel, seated alone in a first-class compartment of the incoming train, looked out of the window to make certain from the letters on the oil-lamps which lighted the little platform that she had really reached her destination.

The station-master obsequiously opened the carriage-door for her.

"For the Hall, I believe, Madam?" he said, as he secured the few things she had carried with her in the compartment. "Her ladyship has been waiting some time. The train is rather late."

He stood back as he finished speaking, for Lady Garth herself was advancing across the platform, and the two women met in the yellow light of the oil-lamps that were scarcely needed, although it was long after nine.

Lilac felt that she would have known her ladyship anywhere from her likeness to the miniature and there was a resemblance to Roy, too, in the shape of her clear-cut features, which inclined Lilac to throw her arms around the old lady's neck and kiss her. The emotion was a passing one, however, for her ladyship's manner was far too cold and impressive for Lilac to think of anything less formal than the mechanical hand-shake which the old lady vouchsafed her.

"And so you are Miss Marvel?" she said, as their hands met. "I am very pleased to welcome one to whom my dear son owes so much."

The words were friendly enough, but the stately coldness with which they were spoken sent a sudden chill to the girl's heart, and made her wish again and again that she had never come.

She had expected to feel nervous and awkward when she met Lady Garth; but, now that the ice was broken, she was unconscious of anything save regret that she had come at all.

It seemed hard to her, as she sat by the side of Roy's coldly-aristocratic mother, even to conjure up the face that she remembered so well, with the handsome features and the deep earnest eyes, so full of love and tenderness, which had looked into her own.

"It was different somehow at home," she said to herself, with a hopeless sigh; and Lady Garth, who talked in her calm stately manner all the way, was doing her best to make the impression a lasting one.

She talked about her son, but her remarks did not please Lilac as any respecting her lover ought to have done.

When the brougham stopped at the imposing flight of stone steps which fronted the Hall, and Lilac, still in the calm lethargy of despair, walked, pale and graceful, by her ladyship's side into the house, the old lady was relieved to find that Evangeline was not waiting for them in the hall as she expected. When the new-comer changed her neat traveling dress for an indoor costume, some fault of taste due to her bringing up and history might show itself, she told herself, and afford Evangeline less ground for giving Roy's choice an enthusiastic approval. She made haste, therefore, to have her guest's box carried to her room, and to deliver Lilac herself into the charge of Evangeline's maid, who would wait upon her during her visit.

"We shall have supper in half an hour, if you are not too tired to share it with us," she said, in her coldly formal manner. "But, if you would prefer it, I will send you up something to your room."

Lilac was very tired indeed, from mental strain rather than from the physical fatigue of traveling; but she was anxious, now that she had arrived at the scene of her probation, to do everything that was expected of her, and Lady Garth's tone, if not her words, indicated very plainly that she was expected to make another appearance before retiring for the night.

She followed the neat maid slowly up the magnificent staircase—a double staircase of white marble—with its thick soft carpet on which her steps made no sound, and along quaint winding passages, feeling more than ever as if she were in a dream, having a glimpse of life in which she had no part. She wanted to be alone, to rouse herself and think over what she should do; and, as soon as her room was reached in the west wing, she dismissed the maid and sat down in the first chair she came to to cover her face with her hands and reflect.

"Why, why did I ever come?" she kept asking herself. She had known that everything would be different from what she had been accustomed to, she had decided that Lady Garth would be cold and stately; but the realization of it all appalled her now.

"She hates me—she hates me!" she said to herself, passing her hands across her tired eyes; and from her little hand-bag she took the railway-guide that she had used on her journey, and began almost mechanically to find out the time of the trains from Delverton to Liverpool.

The sight of her watch at the bottom of her bag reminded her that in a little while she would be expected at the supper-table, to meet "cousin Evangeline," who, if all that Miss Emmott had told her were true, must feel even more hostile toward her than Lady Garth herself. She rose hurriedly at the thought, and began to unpack the trunk which contained her evening-dress of black silk.

"May I come in?"

A voice sounded outside the half-closed door, which in some way made her think instantly of Roy, and, before Lilac could rise from her knees beside the open trunk, the door itself was pushed wide open, and there, in the dim light, stood somebody smiling at her with eyes like Roy's.

It was the likeness to her lover, perhaps, that made Evangeline seem to Lilac, when she looked up, the most beautiful woman she had ever seen, as she stood in the door way, with a smile of the sweetest welcome in her eyes and her hands full of flowers.

As Lilac rose to her feet, the other girl dropped her flowers impulsively upon the nearest chair, advanced across the room, and threw her arms around tee Californian girl's neck.

"And so you are Lilac?" she said, after she had kissed her affectionately and turned her round, so that the light of the candles fell full upon her face. "I can quite understand Roy falling in love with you. You look sweeter and prettier than I imagined, even from his description of you. I have been so anxious for you to come; it will be so nice to have a sister! I always think of Roy as my brother, you know; so you will be my sister, won't you, when you are married? but surely you are not unpacking already?" She broke off, with a glance at the open trunk. "Are you not awfully tired? It is such a long tedious journey from Liverpool! I will help you with your unpacking, if I may, after you have had a cup of tea."

"I was going to dress for supper," explained Lilac; and Evangeline put her arm around her waist to lead her into the next room.

"I would not go down to supper if I were you—you look much too tired. Come and have a cup of tea in here instead. I have had a little fire lighted to boil your kettle, and there is something to eat if you are hungry. I hope you do not think the room too warm? I always like a fire myself even in the hottest summer. It is so cheerful."

While she was speaking she had drawn the girl into the boudoir, where a kettle was steaming merrily on the hob of the old-fashioned grate.

Lilac had been so engrossed by her thoughts that she had not given a glance at her surroundings after entering her room; now the prettiness and homeliness of it all struck her and helped to complete the charm that Evangeline had wrought by her unaffected kindliness. She looked longingly at the table set simply and daintily for two, but shook her head.

"Lady Garth seems to expect me to go down to supper."

"Then it is very cruel of her when you are so tired! I will run and tell her that I am not going to let you come; then, if we have our tea at once, I shall be able to leave you afterwards and keep her company. I did not know you had arrived until this moment. It occurred to me, when I took a last look around here, that the big bowl in the corner wanted some flowers, and I ran down to get them. Just my luck, for I had been on the front step looking out for you ever since Aunt Gwen started to meet you! Here is my dressing-gown, if you would like to take your dress off at once, while I tell Aunt Gwen our plans."

Evangeline hurried away, without allowing Lilac to say a word; and the Californian girl felt very grateful to her. The whole atmosphere of the place seemed to have changed since this beautiful woman had come like a ray of light into it, and broken the spell of its stately grandeur. It was possible to think once more of the Roy she had known at Deadman's Gulch, and to remember that, if he really loved her as he said, wealth and birth would prove very small matters indeed to him.

She smiled as her eyes fell upon a photograph of Roy which hung in a plain oak frame on the wall. Now that she looked around the pleasant room, she found that there were photographs of him everywhere. On the little Japanese table by the prettily draped window that looked out upon the lime-grove was a folding frame, which contained six portraits of her lover at different times of his life, beginning with a little baby in long frocks. But the photograph that pleased her most was one taken in San Francisco, in the dress in which she had first seen him and given him her heart.

She raised the portrait to her lips and kissed it with unrestrainable tears in her eyes.

"Oh, Roy, Roy!" she cried softly. "Do come home quickly, for I love you with my whole heart!"

It seemed to her, as she gazed into the pictured face she knew so well, that, even without Evangeline Garth's sweet sympathy, she would be brave enough ones more to go through her ordeal, since, in a way, it was for Roy's sake that she had undertaken it.

Her face was bright and happy when Evangeline returned.

CHAPTER XVII.

At the Seven Cents mine in Nevada, Sir Roy was thinking every hour of Lilac, and working hard to enable him to get home quickly to end her trial, the hardness of which he could only partly realize. It was very pleasant to sit at night in his log hut over a fire of pine logs, and think of the girl who was so simple, so good and so unselfish. His loneliness in a camp of rough men, uncheered by the society of women, made him feel more than ever in love with her; and every night he wrote parts of diary-like letters, to be despatched to Delverton as soon as opportunity offered.

While Lilac was wondering at home whether the Baronet really loved her, Sir Roy was every day counting more and more upon her love. He looked forward anxiously for the time to come for him to receive a letter from her saying that she had reached England safely, little guessing what would accompany that letter.

It was a happy evening for him when he was able to add to his long epistle, full of expressions of love and tenderness for the girl he hoped soon to make his wife—

"My now darling little girl, thanks to the energy with which the thought of you has inspired me, I was able to see to-day the end of my work here definitely approaching. In a week at the utmost now I shall be able to start for England to join my little wife-elect—a fortnight earlier than I thought possible. The journey will take about three weeks; so that two months from to-day will see you my own little wife. It seems almost too wonderful to be true. I wonder whether you have been as lonely as I have, darling, and have looked forward as much to our reunion?"

He stopped when he had written these words and paused with his pen in his hand to enjoy the thoughts that crowded into his mind. How pleasant it was to think that, while he was looking forward so much to the time when he could hold his little "prairie-flower" in his arms again, with no doubts to disturb their perfect happiness, Lilac herself at home was looking forward just as eagerly to his return. It really did seem too wonderful to be true.

If Lilac could only have seen him as he sat thinking of her with the light of true love in his deep grave eyes—if she could only have read his words! But she was never to see them. As Sir Roy dipped his pen in the ink again, preparatory to writing another sentence, he paused and then laid the pen down, his attention attracted by a sound that he had listened for every evening of late—the sound of a horse's hoofs on the road that led from the nearest township fifty miles away.

With an involuntary movement he covered over the sheet on which he had revealed the tenderest emotions of his heart and walked to the door of his log hut. A horseman was approaching at a gallop, and Sir Roy hailed him as soon as he was within hearing.

"Ahoy, there! Letters?"

His heart beat a little more quickly when the answer came that he expected. He was to hear from Lilac at last, and the world looked very beautiful to him.

The man pulled up his panting horse at the door, and from the mail-bag fastened around him handed out three letters. Roy glanced at the writing quickly before he said a word. One was addressed in Evangeline's neat hand, and one in a girlish hand not so well formed. That must be from his love. The writing on the other he did not recognize, and he threw it with Evangeline's upon the table behind him. Lilac's was the only letter he could think of at that moment. But, before he could allow himself the luxury of reading it, he had to offer some hospitality to the messenger after his long ride.

It was ten minutes before he could tear open with reverent fingers the envelope which contained Lilac's message to him; and the new-comer, who had spent the time in attending to his horse, was sitting at the table, improvised out of a packing-case, too much engrossed in doing justice to the meal which the Baronet had laid before him even to speak. Roy was glad of his silence, for it enabled him to give his undivided attention to the letter he had waited for so long.

But, alas, the letter was a little disappointing! The fatal doubt in the Californian girl's mind as to whether her conscience would ever allow her the happiness of becoming the wife of the man she loved could not but restrain her expressions of love. After the impassioned words which Sir Roy himself had just been writing her letter seemed cold and formal, and the young Baronet was conscious of a sense of disappointment.

"Any letters to take back?" asked the messenger, looking up from his meal.

"You are not going back to-night?"

"No; but I shall start in the morning before you are awake, I guess—four at the latest."

"Then I will finish my letter and bring it down to you in the camp," said Roy. "You put up for the night at Wilson's store, I suppose?"

"That's so."

"Then I will bring down my letters in half an hour. Good night!" as the man rose to resume his journey.

As soon as he was gone, Roy sat down again to finish his logn letter to Lilac; but, as he was doing it, a thought occurred to him that he must read his other letters first, lest they should alter his plans.

Evangeline's letter was written in her pleasant cousinly style, saying that she would welcome Lilac as a sister, and adroitly toning down the hostility which Lady Garth felt toward the match. Its pleasant vivacity made Lilac's more constrained epistle seem all the colder by contrast; and a vague uneasiness had already crept into the Baronet's mind when he opened the third envelope and found that the contents were from Major Emmott.

He was glad that the messenger had left him, and that no human eyes could watch him as he read the bitter accusations which the old Major, urged on by his daughter, made against the woman of his choice. His face grew white, and a mist rose before his eyes which almost prevented his seeing the Major's big bold handwriting. His heart was filled with a fierce resentment against Lilac; but he tried to combat it. It was not her fault, he told himself, that she could not love him, and had met in the person of Mark Mowbray a man for whom she cared more. Was it likely that in the new life that he himself had opened out for her that she would meet nobody for whom she would care more than for himself? She had liked him—he felt sure that she had liked him—although she had refused to be formally engaged to him; but was it not only because he was the first man with a refinement like her own whom she had met in her isolated Californian home? Now she must have met many, of course, and it was scarcely to be hoped that he could retain his pre-eminence.

Well, Lilac's happiness must be secured, he told himself, even if it broke his heart; and Roy took the fond letter he had been preparing for her and tore it into fragments. If she cared for this Mark Mowbray, for whom, according to the Major, she had shown her affection so unmistakably—he would not stand in her way by making her feel under obligation to him or emphasizing the cruelty of the blow she was striking at his happiness.

So, in place of the diary-like letter which had occupied him for so long, he wrote a short little note, begging Lilac, if she cared for anybody more than himself, not to have any scruples on his account in admitting the fact; and, as soon as he had sealed it, he took it in a white heat, down to the camp, together with a similarly short note to his mother announcing his almost immediate return. At all costs, he must go home now, he told himself, and ascertain perscanly whether all hope of happiness was at an end for him, as seemed only too likely.

THE ARMY AS AN OCCUPATION.

A Word in Its Favor—If a Soldier Chooses to do so He Can Lay by Money.

A contemporary, commenting on the demand of the Secretaries of War and Navy for more men for warships and batteries, remarks that while the labor market will not feel the drain much, it is a fact that such employment of able-bodied men is just so much subtracted from the productive forces of the country. Considering that the number of men required cannot be much in excess of 3,000, altogether, the drain will be hardly perceptible. Soldiers labor, and are the cause of employment of others; for armies must be fed and clothed, as well as paid. Every year 50,000 men offer themselves for enlistment in the army, and recruiting officers can pick and choose. The aspirants for enlistment include many bright young Americans—no aliens will be taken now—of whom the military career is attractive.

Nor are the inducements in the way of pay offered to be despised by able-bodied young men who would otherwise be employed in civil labor in the lower grades of employment. While the private soldier begins his service at $13 a month, his pay increase $1 every year of faithful service up to the sixth, when it is $18. Sergeants in the line get as high as $30 a month; in the engineers, ordnance and signal corps pay runs at its highest, from $30 to $50 a month. To the educated man in the ranks there is the chance to compete for a commission. The navy pay for men before the mast and petty officers is higher than that given in the merchant service. When we consider how much is supplied gratis to the soldiers and sailors in the way of food, lodging and medical attendance, we can readily see that their pay compares very favorably, for single men at least, with the wages given in at least the lower grades of mechanical employment.

Many soldiers and sailors steady, temperate, faithful men, lay up money enough during their service to begin a business career with a considerable capital. This is especially true in the West, where thrifty privates and "noncoms" made good investments in buying land cheap ahead of a boom. Here in New England may be found men prospering in civil employment who a few years ago were in the ranks, and started in a new career with an honorable discharge and a few hundred dollars of savings.—Boston Transcript.

An abandoned railroad tunnel, about a mile long, under Edinburgh streets, used as a mushroom farm and furnishes an ample supply for the city market.

"Hands and hatpins up!" sternly commanded the up-to-date robber, as he entered the door of the street car with a revolver in each hand.—Chicago Tribune.

Warned by a Thistle.

It was thought by the Danes to be cowardly to attack an enemy after nightfall, but on one occasion they deviated from their usual rule. On they crept noiselessly and unobserved, in their bare feet, upon the unsuspecting Scotchmen. When near the camp one of the Danes trod upon a thistle and, in his pain, cried out. This aroused the sleeping Scotchmen, and they gave the alarm. The Danes were defeated with terrible loss of life, and ever since that time the thistle has been the insignia of Scotland, with the motto, "Nemo me impune lacessit!"—Philadelphia Record.

GOLF.

James Kermode, of this city, has secured the position of caddie master at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, and last Saturday he officiated for the first. He seemed to give entire satisfaction.

N. Pendleton Rogers, a golf enthusiast, is now unable to play on the course. Two weeks ago he was poisoned on the hand while playing and in a short time he recovered. While playing about a week ago he was again poisoned in the same place and it will now be sometime before he will be able to play again.

Next Saturday afternoon the monthly handicap will be played on the links of the Hillsids Tennis and Golf Club. This ought to bring out a goodly number of players. One week from next Saturday the team from the Harbor Hill Golf Club, of West New Brighton, will come to this city and play a return match with the Hillside team.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The prizes for the race meet of the Riverdale Field Club at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon are now on exhibition at the store of C. C. Lister & Brother on North evenue. The prizes are well worth racing for and have attracted considerable attention among the racing men.

The local riders, who were suspended from the track for a month for riding in Kenyon's unsanctioned meet, will be allowed to ride once more tomorrow when their suspension is up. The probabilities are that most of them will enter for the meet of the Riverdales Saturday.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Much interest is expressed this fall as to the prospects of Plainfield having a representative football team in the field. There seems little doubt but that there will be a strong team from here, although it is yet undecided whether the team will play regularly every week or save its energy for several big games during the season. There is plenty of good material here for a team and it remains to be seen if all of it is available.

ROD AND GUN.

—Oysters are becoming finer each week now, and the finest will be found at Rogers' seafood market.

—Miss Palmer calls attention this week to classes in sight reading, ear training and time-keeping.

—The quarantine has been taken off the house of Mr. and Mrs. Western, Fairview avenue, and the house has been thoroughly fumigated.

—There was a break in the fire-alarm wire last evening on Netherwood avenue, and it is thought that the damage was done by some malicious person. The break was repaired in a short time.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Rev. H. W. McKane, of this city, will undoubtedly prove entertaining in his descriptive lecture to be given at Stillman Music Hall Thursday night in conjunction with the exhibition of war pictures and dissolving views by Prof. B. Benton Barker, of Schnectady, N. Y. Mr. McKane is a fluent, easy speaker, using good common-sense every day language, and being thoroughly familiar with his subjects, cannot fail to please. The pictures to be presented are said to be something superior in way of distinctness and faithful reproduction of events, and all who remember the showing of our local Camera Club a few months ago, will doubtless be attracted by Prof. Barker's exhibition. Reserved seats are now on sale at box office of Music Hall.

The Barnum of all attractions, Al. Reeves' Famous Big Double Company of 25 whites and 25 blacks, greater and grander than ever, with costly set of new and magnificent scenery, costumes and grand electrical effects, will be the next attraction at Music Hall Saturday night. Neither time or money have been spared to make this company a big success. The past success of Mr. Reeves' company is a guarantee that the one to be seen here this week is well worth seeing and is a continual enjoyment from start to finish. The programme includes comedy, ministreisy, vaudeville and opera, rivaling it is said, the famous Black Patti performance.

Miss May Irwin opens her tour next Thursday and after a ten weeks' trip will return to the Bijou Theatre, New York, for the balance of the season. She has a new play entitled "Kate Kip Buyer," written for her by Glen MacDonough, which will enable her, it is said, to show that she is as versatile as she is funny. The action of the play principally concerns a very hotly-contested political election in which she turns the tide of affairs by making a remarkable stump speech in which she turns the light of caricature on the ultra spread-eagleism of the ward politician. She is said to have made as great a success in this as in the most popular of her songs. Miss Irwin's company includes Mme. Pilar Morin, Joseph Sparks, Ignatio Martinetti, Mlle. Alexa and others equally prominent. Miss Irwin will be seen at the Lyceum Theatre in Elizabeth next Friday evening. A number of Plainfielders will attend the performance.

PECULIAR POISONS

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germ of certain decay and death.

In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists Ptomaines), are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion of dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass which ferments (the first process of decay) poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak, and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion.

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptognic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first.

MUSK AND RHUBARB FROM THIBET.

Thread Rubbed With Garlic Run Through the Pod to Test Purity of Musk.

In return for the tea and other articles sent into Thibet through the Mahometan representative of the Thibetan trade guilds, the natives send back a long list of articles, including musk, rhubarb, wool, skins of various kinds, precious stones, medicines, and a coarse grade of unbleached, silken fabric.

Musk, which forms an important part of Thibetan outward trade, is a secretion of a small deer (Cervus moschus). This animal occurs throughout Eastern Thibet, but the largest herds are said to roam over the plains near the Koko Nor. A great deal of musk passes out to North China. The consumption in Szu-Chuan is considerable, and there is no article more easily smuggled. A single "pod" rarely contains more than one-third of an ounce of musk.

Good musk, which is recognized by its rich brown color, and intensely pungent odor, is bought for ten to twelve times its weight in silver on the frontier. In Chung-King it sells for as much as eighteen times its weight in silver.

It is said that practically all the musk which passes through Ta-Chien-Lu is adulterated by the Thibetans before it reaches that market by means of blood and liver. The usual test for ascertaining the purity of musk is running a thread rubbed with garlic through the pod. If no odor of garlic remains the perfume is held to be sufficiently pure.

Another important article of export from Thibet is rhubarb. This plant grows abundantly in many parts of the country, and the supply is said to be in excess of the demand. Great quantities are grown on the hills about Ta-Chien-Lu, but the natives, in order to dispose of it rapidly, dry it by artificial heat and thus injure its quality. This drug is, from the point of view of the civilized natives, the most useful of Thibetan medicines. The best quality grows at an altitude of above nine thousand feet, and the roots are brought down in the rough state by the tribes or by the Chinese traders in Thibet. The large roots are trimmed or chopped into rough square lumps; in the Ta-Chien-Lu district, owing to the dampness of the climate, the roots have to be carefully dried, and are perforated to prevent mildew, which is the great enemy of the Chinese drug merchant. On arrival at Chung-King the lumps of rhubarb are again trimmed into small, square pieces, and after being dried are packed for Shanghai, where an equal weight is worth five times its value on the frontier.—Manufacturer.

SECRETARY SEWARD IN DISGUISE.

He Went to Court in the Hotel Porter's Knee-breeches, Stockings and Shoes.

In the North American Review, Sir William Russell, LL.D., narrates an anecdote in which Secretary Seward had part:

Mr. Seward, who had been received with great respect in Russia, came to England, and, naturally, desired to go to court. He was to be presented at the levee by the United States Minister as a Senator of the United States.

He drove off at the appointed time to the palace, but was stopped in the corridor by a gentleman in uniform, who said he could not pass because he was not "properly dressed."

Mr. Seward was in full evening dress, black dress coat, waistcoat and trousers and white cravat, but it would not do. The gentleman explained that he must have knee-breeches, shoes and stockings—that was absolutely necessary. An idea struck Mr. Seward. There was a nice old man, about his size, the porter of the hotel he was staying at, who sat in a box in the hall, and off he drove.

Immense success! The porter had a beautiful new pair of knee-breeches and black silk stockings and low shoes. A few dollars for the loan was all that was needed. Mr. Seward was speedily equipped, drove back to the palace, where he was admitted and finally had the pleasure of making his bow in the hotel porter's clothes to her Majesty.

Now, all that is changed, and American citizens attend European courts in plain evening dress.

Lincoln's Famous Letter.

A copy of the following letter of Abraham Lincoln, written to a Mrs. Bixby, of Boston, has been engrossed, framed and hung in one of the Oxford University (England) halls, as "a specimen of the purest English and elegant diction extant:

Dear Madam: I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom. Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

IN THE GOLDEN AGE OF LIFE THEY ARE LIVING.

A Notable Celebration of a Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary.

HONOR AND SUCCESS IN LIFE

MR. AND MRS. JESSE MILTON EMERSON WERE THE CELEBRANTS.

The Event Made An Occasion for a Pleasant Gathering of Friends at Their Home, Inter-Haven, in North Plainfield—House Decorated in Golden Hues—A Special Poem Was Also Written.

Fifty years ago last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Milton Emerson, of Inter-Haven, North Plainfield, were united in marriage and the golden anniversary of that event was auspiciously celebrated yesterday afternoon and evening from 3 to 10 o'clock at their beautiful and historic home at the foot of Watchung mountain, where this happy couple live a life of retirement and quietude.

The home was lavishly decorated in an appropriate manner through the use of golden rod, fruits and vegetables of a golden hue. In the parlor the decorations were perhaps the most unique. In one corner, where the bride and groom received their guests, there was arranged golden rod, full ears of corn on the stalk, pumpkins, tomatoes and other vegetables, all representing the golden season.

In the dining room the decorations were just as attractive and were greatly admired for their natural beauty and artistic arrangement. The table was laden with fruits of all kinds and here, during the stated hours, guests were served with refreshments.

The bride was gowned in white brocade silk, trimmed with gold and real lace, and wore a cap also of real lace. She and her husband made a youthful appearance. They both looked hale and hearty. Mr. Emerson has been feeble, but he is now quite well for one of his age. Both were showered with congratulations by their many relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson were assisted in receiving by Miss Florence Emerson, their granddaughter, and Mrs. Edward R. Emerson, their daughter-in-law, both of New York. Miss Emerson wore a gown of white organdie, while Mrs. Emerson was gowned in a dove-color silk dress trimmed with hunter's green velvet.

There was a large number of relatives and friends present from New York, Brooklyn and many distant points. A unique feature of the invitations issued by the bride and groom was the pictures of themselves as they appeared fifty years ago, and also pictures as they appear today. These were sent to all parts of the United States and to many points in foreign lands where they have warm friends.

The residence occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Emerson is known as "The House of a Thousand Years," and is very old. A great many improvements have been made and a more ideal spot could not have been chosen for them to spend their latter days.

During the celebration a meritorious poem, written by W. S. Messmer, of San Antonio, Texas, a personal friend of the bride and groom, was read. It was written for this special occasion. The poem is as follows:

"LINES ON A GOLDEN WEDDING"

While other lips and other hands,
In this, and in far distant lands,
Bring gifts of gold and golden words
As dear memorials of that day,
Just fifty years since passed away.
Swift as the flight of summer birds.
I bring my simple gift of Thyme
And wrap my incense in this ryme.

May coming years as past years be,
And even more abundantly,
With all life's good be fully filled:
May perfect love and perfect peace,
In those dear hearts still find increase
Who have the law of love fulfilled;
Their lamp of love a glowing sun,
Till latest sands of life are run.

Across the intervening miles
Their hands I grasp, see tears and smiles
Comingled in each smiling face,
On this their golden wedding day:
And in my heart of hearts I pray,
That all love's tenderness and grace,
Which crowns this golden day with peace,
May to life's latest hour increase.

On this glad day, may each glad hour
Bring back with ressurrection pow'r,
The gladness of that other day,
That day just fifty years ago,
When in life's ruddy morning glow,
Love's sun beamed on that wedding day,
A day forever sanctified
Thro' years which love has glorified.

May all its memories live, re-born,
On this their golden marriage morn
To crown each hour with pure delight;
While such time-softened, mellow rays
As blend in soft September's haze,
Flood all the hours with golden light,
And make this golden wedding day
A golden memory for aye.

The gifts received by the bride and groom were mostly all gold and very costly. One gift consisted of a large pitcher mounted and two cups, all solid gold, which came from the Brotherhood Wine Company, of New York. The names of the directors of the company were engraved on the pitcher, also the names and dates "1848-1898."

Mr. Emerson was born at Methuen, Mass., and Mrs. Emerson, at Amherst, N. H. They were married September 18, 1848, by Mrs. Emerson's father, Rev. Ira Pearson, who for seventy years was active in the Baptist ministry. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Emerson located at New Orleans, where Mr. Emerson had business interests. Soon afterward they returned to New York city, where they resided until four years ago. During his early years Mr. Emerson conducted a publishing business at 38 Park Row, New York. He is the author of "New York to the Orient" and "European Glimpses and Glances," both of which relate the personal experiences which the author and his wife had while traveling abroad. Another work is entitled "Stimulants," and treats of the uses and abuses of such. After Mr. Emerson left the publishing business he founded the Brotherhood Wine Company, of New York, and he has been president of the company ever since. Two sons, J. M. Emerson, Jr., and Edward R. Emerson, both of New York, are associated in the business.

CAPTURED AN EAGLE.

GREAT AMERICAN BIRD IS NOW HELD BY GEORGE BELCHER.

Caught It Near Cedar Brook and Road Ending Last Sunday—The Eagle Flew at Carriage and Resisted Capture.

George Belcher, of Watchung avenue, has in his possession a good-sized eagle, which from all appearances is a young bird. Last Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Belcher went out carriage driving and while in the vicinity of Cedar brook and Road Ending, Mr. Belcher saw the bird perched upon the fence.

At the sight of the people the eagle flew at the carriage. Mr. Belcher made an attempt to catch the bird, but found it quite difficult. Two strangers happened along at the time and they assisted Mr. Belcher to tie the bird's feet so that he could handle him. The strangers were severely clawed and scratched by the eagle while they were assisting.

The eagle is a beauty and from the tips of the wings measures about five feet. Mr. Belcher has no cage large enough to keep the bird in, but temporarily fixed a place the best he could. He does not know what to do with the eagle.

CHRISTIAN WOMAN DEAD.

Mrs. Mary Morgan Succumbs to an Illness of Five Years' Duration.

The death Mrs. Mary Morgan, wife of Frank Morgan, of Somerset street, occurred Saturday last after an illness lasting about five years. Mrs. Morgan was the daughter of David Stelle, of Piscataway township, and has been a resident of this city for sometime. Her husband is in the wholesale cutlery business in New York.

The funeral services were held from the house this afternoon at 2 o'clock and later at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Richardson, pastor, officiated. Interment was in the family mausoleum in New York Bay Cemetery, at Greenville, this afternoon. The deceased was for many years a member of the Baptist church at Bayonne City, and was a faithful Christian.

HOWELL DIVISION ELECTS.

Sons of Temperance Choose Their Officers for the Ensuing Year.

At the meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, last night, the following officers were elected: Worthy Patriarch, Mrs. Sarah Liske; Worthy Associate, Mrs. Emma Angleman; recording secretary, Benjamin Hand; assistant recording secretary, Miss May Thompson; financial secretary, Mrs. Emma Cox; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; chaplain, Mrs. Anesta Corwin; conductor, Mrs. Sarah Koyer; assistant conductor, Mrs. Jennie Bush; inside sentinel, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln; outside sentinel, Wm. E. Koyer.

Two candidates, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox, were initiated.

Labor Men to Meet.

A mass meeting of the moulders and machinists will be held in Reform Hall, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, to be addressed by W. Perrine, of the Moulders' Union, and G. G. Cameron, of the International Association of Machinists, the object being the organization of these trades in Plainfield. A representative of the Socialistic Trade and Labor Alliance will be present in behalf of his party.

LAWYER DIDN'T FIGHT.

COUNSELOR M'CLURE DISAGREED ON THE POINT OF EVIDENCE.

He Declined to Continue the Defense of Miodovnik and as a Result Justice Nash Gave Verdict to A. B. Thorn.

The second trial of the case of A. B. Thorn, the Somerset street plumber, against David Miodovnik, the West Front street barber, for payment of a bill for putting in a heating apparatus, did not take the time given to the first trial last week. Then the case was begun Monday and ended Tuesday, when the jury couldn't agree.

Yesterday the case was called at 2 o'clock, was given to the jury half an hour afterwards and a verdict was reached in a few moments. Judgment was accorded the plaintiff for $88.56, the full amount claimed.

Counselor W. K. McClure, who represented the barber in place of Justice Newcorn, disagreed with Justice Nash on a point of evidence and threw up the case. There was nothing left for Counselor W. S. Angleman to do then except to present enough evidence to convince the jury of the justness of his client's claim, and to ask them for a verdict, which was given him. Mr. McClure will probably carry the case up.

The jurymen were George Rockfellow, Curtis M. Thorpe, L. Spangenberg, P. N. Kline, M. Armstrong, T. Osment, John Dorgan, A. Utzinger, T. B. VanZandt, T. A. Cuming, J. Dunham and M. Coyne.

FINANCES NOT SO BAD.

JUDGE M'CORMICK'S AFFAIRS WILL BE SETTLED ALL RIGHT.

Former Assemblyman Kelly will do the Work as the Choice of the Family—$10,000 Life Insurance for the Wife.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Sept. 20—Former Assemblyman Timothy M. Kelly has been selected by the family of the late Judge Thomas F. McCormick to settle up the estate of the dead jurist.

Many persons who had been clients of the deceased called upon Mr. Kelly, and they were given assurance that the preliminary investigation disclosed the fact that Judge McCormick's financial condition is not so bad as generally reported.

It turns out that it was a life insurance policy for $5,000, not $10,000, which the Judge allowed to lapse. He still carried a $10,000 policy on his life, made payable to his wife, and this she will get.

Mr. Kelly discovered in the safe a number of mortgages that had not been placed on record. These were assignments. The original mortgages were recorded. All the papers are properly executed, the interests have been paid, and Mr. Kelly says there can be no losses to the persons interested. All that needs to be done is to have the deeds recorded. The books of Judge McCormick, Mr. Kelly says, show all his transactions, and there will be no difficulty in dealing with alleged creditors.

FOUND A STOLEN WHEEL.

A Young Lad Spied One in the Bushes on West Fourth Street.

Last Thursday Gerald Cashman, of 316 McDowell street, found a bicycle in a clump of bushes on West Fourth street. The tool bag was removed from the wheel. The young man reported the find to the police and this morning the wheel was identified by Dr. Stelle, of Park avenue, as his own and the same was turned over to him. There is no doubt but that the wheel was stolen from Dr. Stelle, and after being ridden was thrown in the bushes where found.

Improving His Properties.

David Eastman, of Crescent avenue, has of late been improving several properties owned by him. One is at the corner of First place and Crescent avenue, and the other is on Ninth street, between First place and Watchung avenue. Mr. Eastman has spent a large sum of money on both of these properties and thereby enhanced their value.

W. D. Murray to Speak.

William D. Murray, a member of the sub-committee of the international Y. M. C. A. committee on army work, and who is interested in rasing money for the soldiers' camps, will address the members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church on this subject next Saturday at their morning service.

In Honor of a Cousin.

Miss Ethel Williams, of Grandview avenue, entertained a few friends Thursday evening in honor of her cousin from New London, N. Y., who is visiting her.

J. B. Smith, of East Fifth street, and his granddaughter, Miss Lucy Doremus, of Baldwin, L. I., are visiting in Orange.

REPUBLICANS HOLD THEIR PRIMARIES.

Everything Went Off Quietly in the Four Wards.

A SMALL VOTE WAS CAST.

THE NEW REGULATIONS WERE USED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

The Only Point of Contest Was For the Honor of Attending the State Convention, But Even This Did Not Arouse Much Interest—Fourth Ward Colored Voters Did Not Try for a Delegate.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to the Gubernatorial convention at Trenton Thursday, were held in this city last evening. As it was universally understood that Foster M. Voorhees was the only man now in line for the nomination, there were a general decline in interest in the primaries. It was a sure thing anyhow and it didn't make any difference who the delegates were as far as the result was concerned. The only point of contest was that there were a few Republicans who were anxious to attend the convention at which Voorhees was to be nominated.

It was expected that the colored voters of the Fourth ward were going to make a fight for representation at the convention, but they didn't. The primary was as quiet as could be wished. In the Second and Third wards there was no contest, and everything went smoothly. In the First ward the contest was not particularly exciting.

FIRST WARD.

At the First ward primary there was no excitement. Everything went off smoothly. Ninety-three ballots were cast, which is a good turnout for that ward. Six candidates were nominated as follows: W. R. Codington, J. Fred MacDonald, J. B. Coward, Alexander Mallinson, James F. Buckle and David C. Smalley. The first two, Messrs. Codington and MacDonald, declined, leaving the field to Buckle, Smalley, Mallinson and Coward. Of these Messrs. Buckle and Smalley were elected delegates.

The poles were declared closed at 9 o'clock exactly, and the counting of the ballots was finished by 9:20 o'clock. The registry board consisted of G. Thorn, George W. Moore and Harry MacDonald.

The business session of the primary was called to order at 8 o'clock by W. R. Codington. Mr. Codington was then made chairman. J. B. Coward and William Addis were nominated for clerk. Mr. Addis declined in favor of Mr. Coward, who was unanimously elected.

The only items of business to transact were to authorize the delegates who should be elected to fill their own vacancies and to authorize the officers of the primary to sign the credentials of the delegates, which was done.

The vote cast was as follows: Buckle, 77; Smalley, 63; Coward, 25; Mallinson, 20. George Hallock received 1 vote.

SECOND WARD.

The quietness at the Republican primary in the Second ward last evening was absolutely awe-inspiring. For two long weary hours the primary officers sat there in the Bryant School building waiting for the G. O. P. voters to turn up and just exactly six of them came during that period. Then for the remaining two hours the attendance was slightly better and twenty-one voters cast their ballots for the delegates to the Gubernatorial convention.

The total number of votes cast was 27, slightly more than five per cent. of the Republican vote of the ward. Nelson Runyon and W. H. Drayton received 26 votes each and A. B Beers 1.

Henry E. Bowen was elected chairman of the primary and R. J. Jackson secretary. The delegation was empowered to fill all vacancies in its ranks. The election officers were J. Hervey Doane, judge; W. H. Drayton, clerk, and William N. Runyon, inspector.

THIRD WARD.

Nearly an eighth of the Republican voters of the Third ward wandered down to the Casino last evening, sometime between the hours of 5 and 9, and cast their ballots for the delegates to the Republican Gubernatorial convention at Trenton. The primary was a very quiet one and nobody made any contest.

There were 49 votes cast at the primary, which were distributed as follows: Ernest R. Ackerman, 49; Roger F. Murray, 46; Wheaton S. Lowry, 2; J. Caspar Kirkner, 1. Ackerman and Murray were declared elected.

The delegation was empowered to fill all vacancies in its ranks. Roger F. Murray acted as chairman of the primary and Frank W. Runyon as secretary. F. E. Marsh was judge of election, B. Frank Coriell, inspector, and J. Caspar Kirkner, clerk.

FOURTH WARD.

In this ward everything was very quiet. The delegates nominated were Wm. A. Westphal and Daniel Galbraith. During the four hours that the polls were open there were 146 votes cast. Of this number Mr. Westphal received 140 and Mr. Galbraith 140. D. Kelger received three votes, E. E. Anthony two, Wm. Nelson one and J. A. Smith one. The voting was rather slow. During the early hours the votes did not come in very fast The majority of the votes were cast between the hours of 6 and 9 o'clock. One noticeable feature in the primary room, which was in the basement of Reform Hall, was that very few of the workers were to be seen in the room. They remained outside and caught the voters as they arrived.

Alex. Titsworth was judge of election, James Huntington acted as clerk and Wm. Newman was inspector. At 8 o'clock a short business meeting was held. Wm. Newcorn was chairman and Wm. A. Westphal secretary. The only business transacted was that giving the delegates power to fill vacancies.

DELEGATES IN BOROUGH

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE VOTERS PRESENT AND LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN.

P. A. Emmons and Senator Reed Will Act as Delegates from the Borough and Robert M. Clark From Township.

The borough Republican primary, held last evening in the basement of the Public School building, was unusually quiet. There were about twenty-five voters present and little interest was shown. A vote by ballot was not taken, and the secretary, J. K. Arnold, was instructed to cast a ballot for Charles A. Reed and P. A. Emmons from the borough, and Robert M. Clark, from the township, for delegates to attend the Gubernatorial convention to be held next Thursday at Trenton. Of course, the delegates are Voorhees men.

L. B. Woolston was elected chairman of the primary and J. K. Arnold secretary. John H. Valiant and DeWitt C. Brokaw acted as tellers. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies that might occur. This concluded the business of the evening and it did not take fifteen minutes to transact it.

POURED KEROSENE NEAR SHANTY.

Patrolman Totten Discovered the Incendiary Blaze Just in Time.

An empty kerosene can and a suggestive blaze attracted the attention of Patrolman Totten last evening. He saw the blaze in the rear of one of the shanties of Stagar's alley at 7:30 o'clock and investigated. Then he found the can. He sent someone to fire headquarters for assistance and Second Assistant Chief Jennings and No. 2 hose wagon responded. Meanwhile Totten used a pail of water with care and extinguished the flames before much damage had been done.

It was evident that someone had pured the kerosene close to the wall of the shanty and set fire to it. Two Italians with unpronouncable names, who occupied the place, were reported to be drunk. One was arrested charged with setting fire to the house but there was no evidence and he was released.

WANT ACKERMAN FOR CONGRESS.

Certain Republicans Who are Dissatisfied With Fowler's Record.

A number of prominent local Republicans, who, it is said, are opposed to the renomination of Congressman Fowler because of his action in the local postoffice appointment, will endeavor to induce Ernest R. Ackerman to enter the field as a candidate for the Congressional nomination in the Eighth district. It is not known whether or not Mr. Ackerman will permit his name to be used.

At present Mr. Ackerman is out of the city, but on his return he will be visited by representatives of the dissatisfied element and urged to allow his name to be used. If he determines to do this he will be given strong support in certain quarters.

Lawyers Had Heated Arguments.

Judgment was rendered in Justice Moffett's court yesterday afternoon in favor of Charles Hand and John F. McIntyre against James W. Morrison and wife for $67.75, being rent for a house on South avenue. The trial lasted for two hours, and there were a great many heated arguments between the two lawyers, S. S. Swackhamer for the plaintiffs, and J. P. D. Kirch for the defendants. Mr. Kirch filed a setoff, but that the Justice would not allow.

WILL FRANCHISE EXPIRE

BRUNSWICK COMPANY HAVE UNTIL FRIDAY TO RUN CARS.

The Close Approach of the Time Limit Does Not Seem to Worry the Trolley Magnates—Dunellen Greatly Interested.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 20—Tuesday the time expires in which the New Brunswick Traction Company were to construct the street railroad and have it in running order. By law, says Mayor Brakeley, the road must be completed and in operation within six months after the ordinance goes into effect. The ordinance went into effect March 23d, and Friday, September 23d, the time will have expired.

Whether the road will be in running order or not by that date is still known only to the officials of the road. As far as the people here can see there is no more prospect of seeing cars in motion by Friday than there was a month ago, when the tracks were all laid. What action the authorities here will take is not known.

TRIES ANOTHER COURT.

ADAM FRITZ BECOMES ANGERED AT JUSTICE SMALLEY.

Says That He Couldn't Secure Justice There and Duplicates an Action Against a Tenant in Justice Mattison's Court.

Being sued in two different courts for the same cause is an experience which Miers Compton, of Fritz avenue, is having now.

A few weeks ago Adam Fritz, of Somerset street, in whose house Compton lived, began proceedings against his tenant for the recovery of certain rents alleged to be due. Suit was brought in Justice Smalley's court and the case was to have been tried two weeks ago.

On the day of trial W. G. DeMeza, Compton's attorney, filed an affidavit stating that a material witness was out of the State and asked for an adjournment for thirty days. On the strength of the affidavit it was granted.

Then Mr. Fritz was angry, and it is said made some remarks to Justice Smalley about not being able to secure justice there. All the same the case was adjourned until next month.

A few days ago Compton was surprised at being served with another summons, this time to appear before Justice Mattison. The plaintiff is Fritz and the demand is the same as in the first case in Justice Smalley's court.

In this way Compton is being sued twice for the same bill. His lawyer says it is illegal and will endeavor to have the second suit quashed when the case comes up for trial Thursday.

WILL PLAY TWO GAMES.

Plainfield's Football Eleven Will Not Have an Active Season.

The young men of this city who have for the last four years supported a representative football eleven made a strong effort at the beginning of the season to place a team on the gridiron to play every week. It has since been found to be impossible and the efforts of the supporters of the team will be confined to two big games for the season, one on Election Day and the other for Thanksgiving Day.

Negotiations were entered into with Mr. Wood, of the Riverdale Field Club, to have the team play under his management, but the fact that the team cannot be gotten together will end them. It can be authoritatively stated that Plainfield's big team will not play regularly this season but will make its appearance Election Day and Thanksgiving Day. It is greatly to be regretted but circumstances will prevent a majority of the young men from taking any active part in the game this season.

Wedding Reception to be Held Here.

The marriage of John Clark, of Elizabeth, son of Bernard Clark, proprietor of the Fourth Ward Hotel, of this city, is announced. Mr. Clark married a Boston belle recently and the happy couple are now enjoying a honeymoon. On their return to this city a large reception will be given them at the Fourth Ward Hotel, and a committee of friends will meet them at the North Avenue station to give them a welcome.

Fell Off a Scaffold.

Herman Hansen, a carpenter, of Cedar street, fell off of a scaffold while working on a new house on West Third street, yesterday, and received painful injuries. He fell twenty feet and narrowly escaped striking a pile of bricks. He was attended by Dr. Long. The injuries will confine him to his home for the rest of the week.

—One week from next Sunday will be rally day at the First Baptist church Sunday-school session.

GIFT OF OLD GLORY TO BOROUGH SCHOOL.

Presentation Made by Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

EXERCISES THIS MORNING.

PATRIOTIC DEMONSTRATION MADE BY 700 SCHOLARS.

The Flag Presented On Behalf of the Donors by Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains—Received for the School by A. V. D. Honeyman, Member of the Board of Education—Flag is a Large One.

This morning at 8:30 o'clock the North Plainfield Borough School was the scene of flag-raising, speech-making and patriotism. Somerset Council, No. 102, Jr O. U. A. M., presented the school with a new, large and handsome American flag. This council is now located in Plainfield, but it was formerly a North Plainfield order, and hence its interest in the borough school.

Garret T. Dunham took charge of the exercises in behalf of the order. "America" was sung and a portion of the ritual read, when Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains, was introduced and he presented to the Board of Education the new flag. Mr. Woodruff made an eloquent and inspiring address, stating that the order he represented desired to see a flag and a Bible in every schoolhouse and were working to that end. He gave touching instances of recent patriotism in the Cuban War, and said schoolboys and girls needed no urging to make them loyal to flag and country. He hoped this flag would float every morning as a token of the blessings and greatness of this great land.

The president of the Board, S. St. John McCutchen, being unavoidably absent, the gift was received on behalf of the board by A. V. D. Honeyman, one of its members, who said in part:

"There is nothing in the whole wide world so beautiful as the American flag. It symbolizes everything good and great and generous and noble, in country, in commerce, in community, in citizenship. It is the personification of law, of liberty, of loyalty, of union. In peace and in war, in life and in death, over land and over sea, on the schoolhouse and at the masthead, where leads the Red Cross and where follows the gospel, whatever the race, color or condition of man, at Appomatox or at Manila, wherever a free-born American presses his feet and lift his hat to his fellow Americans as princes and kings, that flag waves—the symbol of free religion, free education, free justice and exact equality before the law. It stands for every State, unifies every party, includes every creed, guards every hearthstone.

"You could not, sir, have presented to this educational institution a gift of which we might be more proud. Every child within sound of your voices knows well that this flag stands for heaven, home and country; and if, after the eloquent remarks you have made, each listener is not

Now ready to vow anew
To the red, the white, the blue,

before this altar of learning, higher purposes and more patriotic inspirations, better thoughts for self and better deeds for country, then the lesson of this hour has been missed and somebody will prove unworthy of the great names of Washington, of Lincoln and of Dewey—which may God forbid."

The entire school then marched out to the front lawn, and Mr. TenBrock raised the flag to the halyard, amid the shouts and huzzas of over 700 children. The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung and the exercises closed.

DEATH OF MRS. POWERS.

Funeral Held From St. Mary's Church This Morning.

The death of Mrs. Michael Powers, of 725 South avenue, occurred last Sunday afternoon of heart failure, after an illness lasting for some time. Her death was a great shock to her many friends who did not know of her critical illness.

The funeral services were held this morning at 8 o'clock from the house and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church, and was very largely attended by relatives and friends. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. A husband and two sons, John and Garret Powers, survive the deceased.

Congressional Convention.

The Congressional convention of the Eighth district will be held in the Lyceum Theatre, at Elizabeth, Thursday, October 6th. The county Republican committee will be called in session Saturday.

TO WITHDRAW FROM SANTIAGO.

Only a Few Regulars Likely to Be Kept There.

Washington, Sept. 20.—All or nearly all of the military force in Santiago may be withdrawn. General Lawton has advised the war department that he favors some such plan, retaining in the province only regulars, a few of which will form the nucleus of an army composed of Cubans. Lawton says that these natives are tractable and under our officers they would make good soldiers, especially with the example of the regulars before them.

General Lawton also reports that the refrigerated beef furnished the army in Cuba is not suitable, and he has recommended that live cattle be shipped to Santiago and killed and dressed there just previous to use.

That was one of the propositions made when the matter of subsistence for our forces in Santiago was originally under consideration, but at that time the transportation of cattle and its butchering seemed impracticable.

B. & O. Southwestern Plans.

New York, Sept. 20.—Rumors are here circulated that further important developments are pending in the affairs of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. It was reported that various interests connected with the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railroad, the St. Louis feeder of the system, were to meet in this city.

Inquiry among persons in a place to know what were likely to be the developments elicited the information that the reorganization of the Baltimore and Ohio Southern Company was in contemplation.

This reorganization, which will include a physical rehabilitation of the property, and probably its financial reorganization as well, is to be proceeded with shortly after the completion of the reorganization of the Baltimore and Ohio Company.

Hail Storm in Montreal

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The most destructive storm of the year swept over Montreal Sunday, causing thousands of dollars of damage to windows and skylights.

Hail stones the size of pigeon eggs fell in abundance, and one death is reported as indirectly due to this cause.

A trolley wire was broken during the height of the storm and struck James McKenzie, a passer by, instantly killing him. Several other pedestrians were stunned by the hail stones before they could reach shelter.

Dr. John Hall's Remains

Belfast, Ire., Sept. 20.—The body of the Rev. Dr. John Hall, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church of New York, who died at the residence of his sister at Haselmere, County Down, on Saturday, will be removed to Bangor on Wednesday, where it will be embalmed. It will then be shipped to Liverpool, where it will be put on board a steamship sailing on Saturday, September 24, for New York. The burial will take place in Woodlawn cemetery, the body being placed by the side of Dr. Hall's son.

SANTIAGO CAMPAIGN

Rough Riders Said to Have Been Skipped in Official Reports.

SOME STRANGE FEATURES

Disputes Already Over Whether They Took Part in the Fight at San Juan Hill. Curiosity to Read What Col. Roosevelt Says. The Opposition to Gen. Miles.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Now that army officers have had time to digest the Santiago campaign reports they find some remarkable features. One of these is the generosity of the praise bestowed on every hand, and another is the failure of the reports to accord much credit to the Rough Riders. It now appears that General J. F. Kent's report, which covers, or rather should cover the operations of the command under Wood and Roosevelt, contains not a word in regard to the regiment, or any part of it, which had a share in the battle of San Juan hill.

There is an excellent chance that this incident may lead to one of those postbellum controversies of which history is full; for already there is a dispute as to whether the Rough Riders really took part in the fight at San Juan. Encouraged by General Kent's report, the assertion is now made by persons hostile to the Rough Riders, that that regiment was two miles away from the hill. General Kent, it is pointed out, has either told the truth by inference or has been guilty of an oversight that can hardly be treated as accidental. The threat is heard also in some quarters that one of the campaign plans against Roosevelt will be an attack on his command and an attempt to belittle its work in front of Santiago.

Meanwhile Colonel Roosevelt has made a long report, which, with many others, is now before Adjutant General Corbin. It will be given out soon. More curiosity is felt here to see this report than any other yet made public.

The opposition to General Miles continues. It is a question how much longer that officer will stand the antagonism. He is not disposed to renew the public ventilation of his grievances, despite some discoveries he has recently made of well defined and really inexplicable enmity towards him. But it would not be surprising to most observers here if General Miles again opened fire, this time with heavier guns and better ammunition

No longer ago than Saturday General Miles encountered additional evidence of the opposition to his plans, and he finds that he is destined to enforce his authority if he expects it to be recognized. These dispatches have contained some hint of the material in the possession of Miles's friends. It is doubtful whether the exact value of it will be divulged for some weeks, but it is certain that Congress will institute such an inquiry as will bring out in official form the documentary evidence of what the general's supporters regard as departmental duplicity.

There is even a suggestion of an "army ring" against Miles, a charge made officially by Major G. A. Armes, retired, in letters to the president and the war department and in conversation with correspondents here.

The Bridgeport Mystery.

New Haven, Sept. 20.—The New Haven police department wes yesterday searching for a young woman who has been missing for some time and who may have been the victim of the notorious Bridgeport tragedy.

Captain Cowles of the detective force said: "It is true that we are looking up a New Haven girl as a possible victim of the Yellow Mill Pond mystery. This girl, whose name I cannot disclose just now, has been missing between two and three months. She was the daughter of New Haven parents and about 21 years of age.

"We hope to settle the question today and it may turn out that the girl o whom I refer has been he victim of the Bridgeport tragedy, but probably not."

To Minimize Child Labor.

Albany, Sept. 20.—State Factory Inspector O'Leary has issued a circular letter to all of his inspectors saying that this is the time, on account of the general opening of schools, to enforce the provisions of the labor law dealing with employment of young children in factories and workshops.

He directs special attention to section 70, which prohibits the employment of any child under fourteen years of age, and section 71, which prohibits the employment of any children under sixteen years of age in shop or factory, unless they can conform to the necessary conditions required of all children between 14 and 16.

Another Cup Challenge.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—It is expected that a challenge for the International cup, won from the Chicago sloop encedor at Toledo in 1896 by the Canadian sloop Canada, will issue from the Chicago Yacht Club this fall to the Royal Canadian Yacht Club.

A syndicate will probably be formed to build and manage the yacht, headed by Commodore F. W. Morgan.

Named by the President.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The following appointments have been announced by the president:

George H. Pickerel of Ohio to be consul at St. Michaels; Fred Page Justin of Oregon to be commissioner for the district of Alaska, to reside at Wrangel; Thomas Lyng, interpreter to the consulate at Fuchau, China.

MORE MEN FOR MANILA

Several Regiments Ordered to Sail from San Francisco.

AGUINALDO TO AMERICANS

Army Authorities Exercised Over the Situation in the Philippines. Gen. Otis Reports of the Growth of Insurgent Power. What Is Said at the War Department About the Order.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The army authorities are greatly exercised over the situation in the Philippines. It has been decided to strengthen the force under General Otis, upon whose representations the step is taken, and five regiments now at San Francisco have been ordered to Manila, and will sail as soon as the transportation has been secured.

General Otis has cabled the department from Manila that Aguinaldo is addin gto his power, and that he has at his command, or within call, a force of not less than 30,000 men.

This statement has created a sensation among the officers here, who have seen the private advices from Manila, and it presents to them the immediate necessity of discouraging the insurgents by some means more definite and energetic than negotiations and making threats.

The situation as described by General Otis is most serious, and while in its general features it is not unexpected, it is more menacing in extent than most of our authorities in Washington anticipated.

The five thousand troops designated for service at once in Manila have been strengthened by the assignment to duty under General Otis of four companies of the Twenty-third infantry, and recruits from Pennsylvania, California and Dakota volunteers, regiments now in the Philippines.

The other regiments ordered yesterday morning to Manila are the Fifty-first Iowa, Twentieth Kansas, First Tennessee and First Washington, with a detachment of the Second Oregon. Orders have been issued insuring the comfort and health of the troops during the long trip.

It is realized now that it was a mistake not to have taken the advice which at first contemplated placing these troops in Hawaii. The authorities would have gained that much time, and at not much greater cost than has already been incurred, certainly at no more than must be incurred now that the troops have to be sent to the Philippines direct, with all haste.

A Statement to the American People.

New York, Sept. 20.—The following dispatch has been received at the office here of the Associated press:

Manila, Philippine Islands, Sept. 19.—The Filipinos government desires to inform the American government and people that the many rumors circulated regarding the strained relations between the Filipino and American forces are base, malicious slanders of the enemy to both parties; are without any truth and are circulated for the purpose of prejudicing the appeal of the Filipinos for their release from the oppression and cruelty of Spain. The relations of our people and yours have been and will continue to be of the most friendly nature, and we have withdrawn our forces from the suburbs of Manila as an additional evidence of our confidence in the great American republic.

AGUINALDO.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The Associated Press dispatch conveying Aguinaldo's message to the American people was regarded with much interest at the White House. The president read the statement with evident appreciation, but did not volunteer any information as to the attitude of this government. Officials very near him spoke of the message as a "very important document."

Said to Have Been Planned Here.

London, Sept. 20.—The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says he has ascertained that Luccheni, the assassin of the Austrian empress, belonged to a gang of Anarchists who went from Europe to the United States two years ago, and who had for their object the assas sination of crowned heads.

The correspondent also says that it is known that the chiefs of the band are still in New York.

Prospectors Unable to Return.

Seatttle, Sept. 20.—There will be no rush of the disappointed back from Kotzebue Sound this fall at least and four or five San Francisco schooners are preparing to go into winter quarters there.

They have no choice in the matter, for the crews have deserted and gone to the gold fields. Men to take their places cannot be secured at any price.

Canadian Canal Traffic.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The returns of traffic through the Canadian Sault Ste. Marie canal show that during the season, up to the end of August, 2,661 vessels passed through the lock, carrying 1,189,964 tons of freight.

This is a decrease compared with the traffic during the corresponding period last year of 29 vessels and nearly a million tons of freight.

Yale Football Practice.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 20.—Sixteen candidates for positions on the Yale University football team of 1898 presented themselves at the Yale field yesterday morning for the initial practice of the season. Captain Chamberlain superintended the practice, which was light, consisting largely of punting, falling on the ball and tackling the dummy.

No More Doctors Needed in the Navy.

Washington, Sept. 20.—No more doctors are needed for the navy. There has always been a difficulty in getting physicians for the service, and now for the first time in some years the medical corps of the navy is up to the authorized commissioned strength.

DEATH OF MISS DAVIS.

The Daughter of the Confederacy Passes Away After Long Illness

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 20.—Miss Virginia Anne Davis, generally known as "Winnie" Davis, the second daughter of Jefferson Davis, who was born in Richmond, Va., on June 27, 1864, died Sunday at the Rockingham hotel, Narragansett Pier, R. I., where she had been lying ill for several weeks.

The body of Miss Davis has been embalmed, but no preparations will be made for the funeral until the arrival of Mrs. Hayes, the married sister of Miss Davis, who is now on her way from Colorado and who will reach Narragansett Pier to-morrow afternoon.

The illness which resulted in the untimely death of the "Daughter of the Confederacy," as Miss Davis was fondly called throughout the South, was contracted last July at the reunion of the Confederate eterans in Atlanta, Ga.

During the parade which followed, Miss Davis occupied a carriage with Mrs. "Stonewall" Jackson and Miss Clare Lewis Gordon.

The day had been an intensely hot one. A storm came up and rain began to fall in torrents.

Miss Davis was drenched and at the conclusion of the parade felt chilled through. She set out at once for this place, but was compelled to stop in New York to rest for a day, the illness having gained so rapidly upon her.

Although it had been hoped that the refreshing breeze of Narragansett Pier would speedily accomplish her restoration to health, Miss Davis was unable to retain nourishment, and, despite her mother's devotion, the best medical skill and the most careful nursing, it soon became apparent that nothing could stay the hand of death.

IRON AND STEEL TRADE.

Large Export Sales With Demand on the Increase.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—The outcome of events during the past week have imparted renewed strength to the iron and steel markets, says the Press of this city. The publication of the condition of furnaces, and of stocks on hand at the close of the month were extremely gratifying, showing an increase of production during August at the rate of 6,300 tons per week, and a reduction in stocks (for the month) of 54,000 tons.

This, in connection with sales for export estimated at 30,000 tons last week, and 60,000 to 70,000 tons during the two previous weeks, has imparted a stronger undertone and made sellers less disposed to accept new business unless at very full prices.

Millions of tons of iron areunder contract for forward delivery, yet the demand is still on, and it only needs the assent of makers to increase their engagements to a still greater extent.

France Abandons Fashoda.

Paris, Sept. 20.—The report is published here, but not officially confirmed, that Major Marchand has been ordered to retire from Fashoda, leaving that place in possession of the Anglo-Egyptian forces.

Le Matin discredits the report, declaring that there is no reason why such a course should be taken.

A telegram received from a French source in Cairo says that there is no information there confirming Major Marchand's occupation of Fashoda.

The French newspapers say that it appears, according to private information, that the minister of foreign affairs has received no news confirming the report of the presence of Major Marchand in Fashoda.

The rumors circulated by the English press regarding alleged instructions sent to Marchand are, therefore, false.

Shoemakers on Strike.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 20.—Nearly fifteen hundred lasters in the big shoe factories of Brockton, Rockland, Whitman, Stoughton, East Weymouth, Middleboro and Randolph were ordered out at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, the manufacturers, with the exception of the W. L. Douglass & Company establishment in this city having declined to accede to the demand of the lasters for a new price list, providing for an increase over the old rates. A protracted fight is expected.

Faulkner to Succeed Gray.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Senator C. J. Faulkner of West Virginia has been appointed to the place on the joint commission to settle disputed questions between the United States and Canada, made vacant by the retirement of Senator Gray, when he was transferred to the Paris peace commission. The tender of the position was made by the president yesterday, in a personal interview with Senator Faulkner, and was accepted by the latter.

A New Leather Company.

Albany, Sept. 20.—Papers incorporating a leather company, to be known as "Fayerweather & Ladew," with a capitalization of $1,250,000, have been filed with the secretary of state. The company proposes to manufacture tan, treat and deal in leather and all the products thereof. Its principal office is in New York city, and the directors are Edward R. Ladew, Joseph H. Ladew and John J. Hetzel of New York city.

Annual Horse Show

New York, Sept. 20.—The annual exhibition of the National Horse Show will be held in the Madison Square Garden November 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19, and entries close with the secretary at No. 16 East Twenty-third street, on October 22. In all $33,000 in prizes will be distributed and there will be 112 regular classes.

Alger and Sternberg at Camp Thomas.

Cincinnati, O., Sept 20.—Secretary Alger and Surgeon General Sternberg are making a visit to the camp and hospital at Camp Thomas. The secretary, in a public statement, pledged that soldiers shall not be court martialed for telling of abuses.

May Build a Signal Station

Washington, Sept. 20.—The Haytien government has notified our government that it has decided to permit the establishment of a weather signal station at Mole St. Nicholas and perhaps elsewhere in Hayti.

REFORMS FOR CHINA

Emperor Declares in Favor of Western Civilization.

A GREAT AWAKENING NEAR

He Says It is Better Than Chinese in Many Ways and He Will Adopt Its Good Features. The Right to Be Given so Every Person to Memorialize the Throne.

Pekin, Sept. 20.—The reforms lately foreshadowed have been embodied in a remarkable series of imperial edicts which are startling the native officials.

The emperor has issued a long explanation of his new policy, declaring that western civilization in many respects is superior to the Chinese. He intends to adopt the good features of western civilization, discarding the bad.

The most striking edict proclaims the establishment of a postal service throughout the empire, and in this his majesty appeals to the people to cooperate, as they will thereby aid in strengthening the empire.

Another edict confers the right on practically every person in the empire to memorialize the throne, a privilege that has heretofore been confined to the favored classes.

Another orders that monthly accounts of the government's receipts and expenditures be rendered to Pekin and that these be published.

The emperor commands that the edicts be posted throughout the country to convince the people that efforts are being made for their welfare.

In consequence of British pressure the Tsung-li-Yamen has ordered Huyu-Fen, who obtained the concession for the Newehwway Railroad, to reopen negotiations to obtain the loan for the construction of the line from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank.

ESTERHAZY'S INFAMIES.

Ah Vacillates Between Suicide and Making a Clean Breast of It.

London, Sept. 20.—Public curiosity in England and France, which was greatly piqued by the promised revelations of Major Esterhazy in the Dreyfus case, is still unsatisfied.

The Paris papers announced yesterday that Esterhazy had returned to Paris and had declared that he did not intend to make a statement.

Scoundrel though the ex-officer is, he retains some peculiar ideas of honor. He is now vacillating between committing suicide and making a clean breast of his infamies.

He has already made a full verbal confession to three responsible persons, but persistently delays putting it into writing and refuses to permit its publication at present.

The principal reason for this seems to be that his confession will not have sufficient political effect unless it is held until the chamber of deputies meets.

Esterhazy's justification for all that he has done in the Dreyfus case is interesting to moralists. It is embraced in his maxim:

"A soldier should place his conscience as well as his sword at the disposal of his superior officers."

Closing Up the Camp

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 20.—The sun was shining on Camp Wikoff yesterday for the first time in three days, and everybody here was trying to dry himself and his effects.

Surgeon Major Brown has been taking an inventory of the hospital property which has been turned over to him.

The task is an enormous one and cannot be completed within two weeks. The hospitals have held at one time more than two thousand patients. Much of the property belongs to the government and will have to be turned in to the quartermaster's department. A very large proportion of the government property belongs to the hospital and medical departments, and a separate accounting will have to be made to them.

Gold Still Comes in

New York, Sept. 20.—The steamer Umbria, which arrived at this port on Sunday, brought gold to the amount of $402,000, consigned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., $180,000 consigned to Lazard, Freres, $50,000 consigned to Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., and $28,700 consigned to James E. Ward & Co.

On the French liner La Normandie was a consignment of 1,000,000 francs in gold for Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., and another of 1,360,000 francs for James E. Ward & Co., steamship agents of this city, who will reship their consignment to Havana.

Sugar from Afar

New York, Sept. 20.—The second cargo of sugar that ever came from Maui to this port is lying below decks in the American ship Luzon, which arrived in port yesterday. The consignment consists of 2,250 tons, and left the Pacific April 29. Maui is the second largest of the Hawaiian group and is sixty miles to the eastward of Honolulu.

Another Dark Day in New Hampshire.

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 20.—A peculiar smoky darkness extended all over southern New Hampshire yesterday. The afternoon was very dark and the sun looked like a dull red ball. The sky had an appearance similar to that on the famous yellow day in the early eighties.

Blanco Ready to Fight.

Madrid, Sept. 20.—Captain General Blanco has sent a message to the government through General Pando, his second in command, who has arrived here, to the effect that the army in Cuba will do its duty in the event of the failure of the peace commission and a renewal of hostilities.

The Gould Blackmailing Case.

Albany, Sept. 20.—The trial of Mrs. Margaret Cody, under indictment in this county on the charge of blackmailing Miss Helen M. Gould and George Gould, will begin on Wednesday.

THE CUBAN BLOCKADE FLEET.

Most of the Vessels to Go Out of Commission.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 20.—Most of the vessels of Commodore Watson's blockading fleet, which did blockade duty off the coast of Cuba, have left their anchorage in Hampton Roads and have come to the Norfolk navy yard. They are to go out of commision this week, and will be laid up in the reserve docks, but will not be disarmed until the peace commissioners have finished their work in Paris.

A large percentage of the crews are known as "one year men." These will be discharged from the service. The three year men, a large number of them, have been transferred to the receiving ship Franklin on waiting orders. They may go to the battleships Kentucky and Kearsarge.

The Viking, Yankton, Tecumseh, Apache, Frolic and Hornet are here. Of these all but the Hornet will go out of commission. The latter will be retained for the present. She was behind the New York when Cervera's ships made their dash from Santiago.

The colliers have also left Hampton Roads. The Alexander and Aberanda have been ordered to New York to join the Iowa and Oregon.

The Sterling took on coal yesterday and at four o'clock the painters and scrapers were hard at work on the Lebanon, Saturn, Scindia and Cassius.

Orders have been received to rush the work, and it is believed that these will accompany other warships to the Hawaiian islands. The colliers each carry three thousand tons of coal. The machine guns which were placed on them during the war still remain.

At the Navy Yard.

Brooklyn, Sept. 20.—The battleship Indiana was floated into dry dock No. 3 at the navy yard at nine o'clock yesterday morning to undergo a general overhauling. Her underbody is very foul, owing to the fact that she had not been docked in nearly a year, and a number of improvements are to be made on her interior, including a remodelling of the wood work.

The battleships Iowa and Oregon are taking on stores and ammunition from tugs, but none of the officials at the yard would admit that they knew when the vessels were to get away.

The auxiliary cruiser Panther arrived at the yard yesterday and will go into dry dock No. 2 as soon as the dock can be made ready for her. Her eight four-inch guns are being removed. As soon as she has been cleaned and overhauled she will be put out of commission.

The Return of Spanish Troops.

Madrid, Sept. 20.—The minister of war, General Correa, has issued instructions for the return of the Spanish troops in the West Indies. The sick are to leave first, and the archives, especially those relating to the war, will be brought to Spain with the arms, ammunition, flags and material stored in Cuba and Porto Rico.

The minister is greatly incensed at General Toral for sending him a dispatch on the latter's arrival at Vigo, Spain, from Santiago de Cuba, and said Toral already ought to be court martialed for his conduct as governor of Santiago.

The War Inquiry Board.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 20.—General Stephen M. Weld, who was offered a position on the war investigating commission by President McKinley, has decided not to accept it.

"I have nothing to say about the president's request for me to go on the commission, except that I have decided not to accept it. My business affairs prevent my taking the necessary time to devote to the work of the commission."

A Boston Agent Shot by Burglars.

Dover, N. H., Sept. 20.—Frank Bemis, station agent at Madbury, a small station on the western division of the Boston and Maine Railroad, just south of this city, was shot by burglars early Monday morning and badly wounded in an arm. The burglars had entered the station house through a window, and had drilled the safe preparatory to inserting a charge of dynamite. No property was taken, but the men escaped.

The Commission at Havana.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The war department has received a cable dispatch from Major Clous, the secretary of the American military commission, dated Havana, saying that the commission has removed to Vedado, a suburb of Havana, and that all of the party, as well as the people on the steamer Resolute, notwithstanding newspaper reports to the contrary are in good health.

Strikers and Workmen Fight.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 20.—During an attempt by twenty-two non-union men to enter the works of the American Wire Company, where a strike has been in for some time, a pitched battle took place between strikers and non-union workmen. Clubs, stones and slungshots were used, and a number of men were severely bruised and cut.

Jago Gets 8 Years

London, Sept. 20.—John W. Jago, formerly first officer of the steamship Britannic, and John Kynaston, formerly third officer of the same vessel, pleaded guilty yesterday to the charge of robbing the mails. Jago was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment, and Kynaston to one year.

Pay Accepted from Negro Paymaster.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 20.—The Second Texas regiment, which refused several days ago to receive pay from Major Lynch, the paymaster, because he is a negro, finally receded from its attitude, and the regiment was paid off on Saturday.

A Strike at Fitchburg.

Fitchburg, Mass., Sept. 20.—About 350 employes at the factory of the Iver Johnson Arms and Cycle Company struck yesterday because of a reduction in wages, which went into effect at the ships.

Dreyfus Revision

Paris, Sept. 20.—It is expected that the commission to examine the matter of revision of the Dreyfus case, which begins its sittings on September 21, will continue its sessions for ten days.

The New Primary Rules.

The new rules adopted by the Republican city executive committee for the conduct of primaries were in force last night for the first time. So far as they worked the result may be determined successful. The rules are designed to obviate the possibility of political managers running a slate through the primary without giving all party members a fair and equal chance to express their opinion of the fitness of candidates nominated for offices. The lack of a contest, however, for any of the delegations last night prevented an actual and fair test being given to the rules. The voting last night was merely perfunctory on the part of loyal Republicans.

If the conditions were reversed and there was a lively fight for supremacy in party control, with the political workers resorting to their numerous and shady practices for gaining advantage, the observation of how the rules worked would have been greatly enhanced in practical value.

Inasmuch as the rules are laid out for the purpose of preventing trickery they cannot be declared a perfect success until such a time as they actually do thwart the political manipulators from scoring over the prevailing sentiment of the rank and file of the party. Of course, there may be those of an optomistic frame of mind who will say that the rules will be most likely to deter the politicians from undertaking their little schemes. Perhaps so. But we think not. When a practical politician gets ready to do a certain thing all the stiff rules in the country isn't going to scare him out of at least a trial at it.

The Summit Telephone War.

The tiffs which the officials of Summit have had with the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company over the terms on which the telephone facilities should be extended, so as to give the place a local exchange, has resulted in the telephone company completely evacuating the place. Now the nearest telephone connection with Summit is Short Hills, and we can imagine the rural denizens of the latter settlement sniffing with a superior sniff at aristocratic Summitites as they pass them by.

The telephone company officials have undoubtedly come to the conclusion that the quickest way to bring Summit people to a realization of how valuable the franchise is to the town as well as the company is to deprive the former of its advantages for awhile.

Still, Summit has its dander up, so to speak, and now that the telephone company has voluntarily abdicated the place, it is not at all unlikely that it will be a cold day when they get back there on the same footing that they were when they left.

In the meantime, the Newark Telephone Company has sent a communication to the Township Committee offering to furnish free telephones for fire and police service in the township, and to make other concessions for a franchise. The Committee has requested a representative of the Newark Telephone Company to be present at tonight's meeting of the former body.

A Reproach on Plainfield.

A Westfield despatch to the Newark Evening News yesterday, describing the "dry" Sunday in that place as a result of the edict issued by the Township Committee for the local barrooms to shut up tight, declares that many Westfielders were seen wending their way to Plainfield. Presumably this is meant that Plainfield could give what Westfield was suddenly deprived of—liberal potions of firewater on the Sabbath.

Are the cider joints in working order again, or is it the Middlesex County Club, with portly Mike Watson, the sponsor, that was the attraction?

Hurrah, Cranberries Are Safe.

As a great American nation we have won a victory over Spain and accomplished a great many other things in the present year that reflects credit upon our nationality, but now let us hurrah a little bit for the Jerseyman. The cranberry crop is safe, the news comes from the boggy country of South Jersey. What would Thanksgiving be if we didn't have the good old Jersey cranberries to eat with our roast turkey.

Atkinson a Candidate.

Clarence Atkinson, the Camden lawyer, has decided to allow his name to go before the Democratic State convention as a Gubernatorial candidate. He claims he has the support of South Jersey and that he will have the solid vote of Camden, Burlington, Salem, Gloucester, Cumberland, Cape May and Atlantic counties.

New Brunswick Beyond Hope.

New Brunswick is getting worse and worse. A confiding Perth Amboy citizen was robbed of a clean $100 in cash in the Middlesex county courthouse the other day. It seems too bad that there is no hope for New Brunswick's reform.

A Trifle Late.

The Plainfield Common Council has come to the conclusion that street railroad franchises are worth money.—Newark News.

Better late than never.

Medical Incapables.

The number of so called medical institutions which give degrees in this country is so great that measures have been instituted from time to time to reduce even those which have legitimate title under our laws. Of these "fake" organizations which sell the mask of wisdom and competence, under which impostors sometimes ply the privilege of trifling with the life of human beings, we do not now speak. These raise their heads for a year or two in abundance in certain localities and then we cease to hear much of their nefarious trade. They are pretty generally severely punished once they emerge from their hiding places.

But there is a keenly recognized professional evil in the redundancy of persons wearing the title of M. D. who have secured the appendage under conditions which do not violate the law. The graduate of some insignificant college may possibly become by natural aptitude and practice as skillful a leech as the graduate of the best. But there can be no doubt that there is a certain brevet of value in a degree received from a great institution. Independently of any other fact it gives reasonable assurance of excellence, and deservedly so. It is now proposed in England to make the statement of the source of the degree a necessary part of the title, imposing a heavy fine on the use of M. D. or D. D. without this explanation. It makes less difference concerning the other titles, but in the medical tag it would seem to be a matter of importance beyond the common. The parliamentary bill to which reference is made renders it compulsory to add an explanation to the title, so that the reader may at once declare its authority. It leaves the onus of making discriminations to the public. It does not entirely eradicate a danger, but it goes far in the right direction. It will not prevent trickery of the ignorant and the credulous, but no legislation would ever do that.

Under the American system of charter laws, whereby authority is derived from the state and not from the United States, the conditions to be obviated are far more intractable. Just such a state of affairs as is is bound to recur. But the well known medical universities, which give a reasonable presumption of professional acquirement, are known to people of ordinary intelligence. For instance, a degree from the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Pennsylvania College of Medicine or the Rush Medical college of Chicago carries at once with it a brevet of distinction which implies a certain degree of competence. It would help to remove a state of uncertainty now existing and in many cases guide a choice of medical advice. If it would not altogether prick a bubble, it would go far to reduce the number which have a living chance of keeping afloat. The difficulty in America would be to secure such a wide concurrence of state legislation as would make the law of general good.

In spite of the dominance of steam as the motive power of ships, the sailing vessel is still an important factor in commerce. This has come about through the value of labor saving inventions which enable one man to do the effective work of two. Some of the crews in these big ships, which reach occasionally 4,000 tons burden, are not numerous enough to form more than two watches, yet they are not as helpless in nasty weather as the bigger crews of an early period. They are fitted with a great multiplicity of skillful devices, the more important among them being automatic machines in reefing and unfurling sails, reeling, coiling the anchor, steering, handling the canvas and sheet ropes in all exigencies likely to befall, and loading and unloading cargoes. For the most part built of steel and of great beauty of model, many of these ocean carriers look like exaggerated yachts. They sail with extraordinary speed and offer even more comfort to the crews than the steamships. The largest will spread 10,000 yards of canvas to a fair breeze. The day of the sailing ship is not yet numbered.

It is said that some of the New York merchants who promised clerks who enlisted their positions when the war should be over now retract their pledges. The ground taken is that they meant the time to mean the actual fighting, not the detention in northern camps waiting for discharge. Do these patriotic traffickers of their own honor expect their old clerks to desert?

A writer in The United Service Magazine states that the United States has spent more than $10,000,000,000 in war during the national existence. This generous statistician has probably reckoned it at compound interest, as representing what might have been saved. But then the country would not have existed at all.

There was a certain republican simplicity amid all the splendor of Queen Wilhemina's coronation which gave its pomp an added dignity. Salt as well as sugar went to the making of the ceremonial.

Habitual gravity of demeanor is a stratagem to conceal poverty of mind. The most highly gifted natures are streaked with gayety as quartz with gold.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Admiral Dewey's new sword will be worth $3,000, and will blaze with gold and precious jewels. But it will never be likely to have such a chance for a quick stroke and a clean cut as he improved with his old cutlass.—Newark Call.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The citizens of Montclair have found a new use for the street piano or "hurdy-gurdy," which may be so frequently seen in this section. During the summer there were numerous lawn parties and dances on the lawn in that city. They became very popular and one of the most attractive features was the music by these same street pianos. One or more of them was hired for the evening and placed about the lawn where they took turns in reeling out their selections of popular airs. Often there was a regular orchestra for dancing but these instruments filled in the intervals very satisfactorily and were often used to dance to by some of the young people.

* * * * *

Now that cold weather is near at hand, and most of the young people of the city are back home after their summer vacation and outing, there is an increase to the little gathering at the postoffice every afternoon for the 5:30 mail. That mail became famous years ago by becoming the trysting place for many of the young folk of the city. During the midst of the winter, in the spring and summer there is only a corporal's guard of the faithful ones who gather there every day as regular as clock-work. The great majority of the attendants at the mail wait for the autumn, when the sun begins to set earlier and the twilight begins before the dinner hour. Then the crowd swells to large proportions and there is the annual talk about how people will go to the "five-thirty" mail.

A New Era

is a rather high-sounded phrase, but that's what the country is confronted with. The past wretched half-dozen years are dead and buried, and we turn our faces towards better things. Coincident with the advance of prosperity is the initial year of the second decade of the Inter-State Fair's history. That history the people know. They have never been deceived in the past. What the enterprising and alert management of the fair has promised has always been fulfilled to the letter. Its success is built, year by year, on the solid masonry of honesty. There isn't a rotten stick or a crumbling stone in the structure, and the plaster has lots of hair in it. Can you believe that this year's exhibition will be better than last? Well, it will. Come and see for yourself. The place, Trenton; the dates, September 26 30.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Sept. 20—The Republican primary to elect delegates to the State Convention which meets at Trenton the 22d, to nominate a candidate for Governor, was held in Excelsior Hall last evening at 8 o'clock. John Robison, chairman of the last primary, was re-elected chairman, and W. B. Noble secretary. The primary was only entitled to one delegate, and he with only a three-quarter vote in the convention. E. L. Hand and John Robison were nominated. Mr. Robison gave way to Mr. Hand and his election was unanimous. No instructions were given, but Scotch Plains is solid for Voorhees.

The executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Baptist church will meet at "The Manse" Wednesday evening.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, September 20 — The Waldermere House on Park street was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Mary Edna Brainard, daughter of Wilbur F. Brainard, was married to Henry Conrad Piker. The wedding took place at 3 o'clock, the ceremony being performed by Rev. N. W. Cadwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The wedding was private and only the relatives of the contracting parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Piker left on an evening train for a short wedding trip before settling down to housekeeping. Mr. Piker is one of Westfield's leading business men, being proprietor of a shoe store here.

The young people of Westfield were very much surprised yesterday morning when it was announced that Edward S. Welch, son of Charles Welch, of Elmer street, had been married Friday evening at Somerville to Miss Maggie Miller, of Newark, who has been spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodruff. The young people left here Friday afternoon to take a bicycle ride to Plainfield, and the first their relatives knew of their marriage was yesterday morning when the father of the young man received a letter from his son stating that he had been married Friday evening. It is not known where the newly married couple are now, but the parental blessing awaits them when they return. Miss Miller is a handsome young lady and has made many friends while staying in Westfield. The young man is well-known in Westfield and vicinity, and is a bicycle rider of more than local repute.

The Republican party held their primary in the township rooms last evening and elected Charles A. Smith and Wellington Morehouse as delegates to the State convention at Trenton. The delegates were instructed to cast their votes for Foster M. Voorhees.

At Cranford the Republicans named Edward B. Horton as the delegate to the State convention, and also instructed him to vote for Foster M. Voorhees.

WASHINGTONVILLE

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Washingtonville, Sept. 20—One of the finest fields of corn to be found in this locality is now growing on the quarry farm here. The ears are unusually large and are of the finest quality. Many Plainfielders have admired this corn lately.

Alfred Bunnell, former proprietor of the sawmill at Cranford, is 94 years of age, but has the look and manner of a man of 50. His home is on Manning avenue in Plainfield. — Cranford Chronicle.

Arthur B. Crane is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U B. Crane, of East Second street. Crane has just returned from Camp Meade, at Middletown, Pa., where he was a member of the First Regiment, Delaware Volunteers.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

ONE WOMAN'S STRANGE ART.

Miss Bracken, the Only Female Maker of Death-Masks in the World.

Miss Julia M. Bracken of Chicago is probably the only woman in the world who has made a practical study of death masks. Few men and fewer women have the courage for the grewsome work, but for years this young woman has made death masks of Chicago's notabilities who have passed away. As she prefers to make the mask before embalmment, her summons generally precedes that of the undertaker; consequently, she is liable to be called at any hour, and as frequently makes a mask at midnight as at noonday.

She works alone in the chamber of death, though occasionally a member of the family begs for the privilege of watching her at her strange task.

In the making of a death mask there are a thousand and one details to consider. First of all, the face must be carefully prepared with soap and oils. Miss Bracken's method of treating the beard, eyelashes and hair is marvelously successful, for the dead must never be disfigured when the model is removed. There must be a perfect distribution of the plaster, otherwise the weight might destroy the contour, as there is constant danger of pressing the mouth and eyes open, of flattening the nose and sagging the cheeks and the lower part of the face. Miss Bracken makes a mask in two pieces, the dividing thread being in the center of the face, thus allowing it to slip off easily from the ears and jaw.

Her work has to be done with all possible speed, as the plaster sets quickly, and must be taken off just an instant before it hardens, for if allowed to remain too long the result is disastrous, and if removed too soon it settles into false lines and is valueless. After the removal of the mask the face must be thoroughly cleansed of plaster.

Miss Bracken is singularly successful in making these masks, but when she brings her work to perfection in bronze or marble, she displays the quality of her genius, for the making of masks is the least of her accomplishments. She has modeled from childhood and has supported herself by her art since she was fourteen. Eleven years ago she began studying with Dorado Taft, and for a year was one of his chief assistants in designing and modelling the colossal figures for the World's Fair buildings. She received a commission from the state to model the figure of Illinois welcoming the nations, which is now in bronze at the capital building in Springfield. She has accomplished a large amount of monumental work for battle fields and public places, perhaps the most conspicuous being a relief, full of splendid action, for a monument at Missionary Ridge.

As a carver of wood she is also exceedingly clever. Personally, Miss Bracken is somewhat girlish in figure, with a tender, thoughtful face, and a frame that seems physically unequal to the great work she has accomplished.—Success.

Science in Timber Buying.

Timber cut in summer represents a lower value than that felled in winter, and it is of great importance to buyers to know when a trunk was hewn. Timber hewn during the resting period—i. e., between October and April—contains in its cells numerous starch particles which cannot be found in wood cut down in summer. This starch closes the pores and the wood becomes coarse and impenetrable. This is the reason that winter hewn timber is exclusively employed for staves. Made with staves from summer-hewn wood, the barrels leak and the contents may evaporate through the pores. A sure test is the use of iodine, which gives the starch in the winter wood a violet color. If the timber to be examined is coated with an iodine solution and the surface of the felling side shows yellow, it may be taken as a certainty that the tree was cut down in summer. The light-yellow lines are the moisture rays, while cells, tissue and wood fibers simply take on a yellow coloring. In winter-hewn timber the amylaceous rays form much darker, ink-colored, black stripes on the yellow ground.

Why the Prayers Were Shortened.

A Kansas City stockman tells this story about General Miles:

When General Miles was fighting the Indians he always held a short period of prayer before entering into an engagement. On one occasion he had followed the Indian trial for several days and came upon them in the middle of the afternoon. He immediately went into his season of prayer. The chaplain who accompanied the expedition was exceedingly long winded. In fact, he seemed to forget that he was out on the prairie, within reach of a hostile foe, and labored in true camp meeting style. When he had finished his request to the Almighty that General Miles might come out victorious in the righteous cause, it was suddenly announced that the enemy had flanked to the army's rear and stolen all the pack animals. Miles was disconsolate and made an order that prayers should be curtailed.—New York Tribune.

Simple Remedies for Headaches.

Too little blood in the brain is a frequent cause of headache, and may be recognized by the ache being on the top of the head, by constant dizziness, and by noises in the ears. The best cure is a slight stimulant, such as strong tea or coffee or hot soup—anything which will increase the circulation. People who suffer with these headaches should always sleep with their heads low.

Too much blood in the brain will cause a splitting headache, which is felt all over the head. The face becomes flushed, the temples throb, and a strong light or a noise will cause excruciating pain. These headaches are felt by people who have too much blood, those who worry by too much study, by too rich or irregular living, or gout. The sufferer is also often afflicted by palpitation and indigestion, and needs to be most careful of the diet. Meat should not be eaten more than once a day. Great relief will be found by sitting with the feet in mustard and water for a quarter of an hour.

A neuralgic headache is most frequently felt across the forehead, and sometimes at the back of the head, and generally arises from cold caught in a bad tooth, which affects the nerves on that side of the face. If the pain be in the forehead, relief may be obtained by placing a mustard-leaf for twenty minutes on the nape of the neck, or by the side of the eye just over the temple. A piece of brown paper soaked in vinegar and sprinkled thickly with pepper, and laid over the painful spot, is a homely, but sometimes effective remedy. It should be kept on until the paper becomes dry, when it should be removed and applied until the pain is relieved. Precautions must be taken not to catch fresh cold after this.

Another form of neuralgia commences with little specks dancing before the eyes, the pain seeming to be confined to exactly one half the head or face. A violent sickness usually accompanies this headache, but no relief is obtained by vomiting. Hot water applications are the best for these attacks. Pour boiling water over a square of flannel and wring it out tightly in a towel to avoid scalding the hands; place it over the seat of the pain. Have ready another square of flannel and treat in the same way, and apply as soon as the first piece begins to get cold. Continue this process without ceasing until the pain is relieved.

Wired Bows.

Nothing could be prettier or more up-to-date to accompany a summer dance frock than a set of Louis XV wired bows, made like the accompanying sketch.

No. 1 is to be set upright on the head in front of the soft Japanese knot of hair, which is the pretty fashion of the day; No. 2 to be worn as a breast knot, and Nos. 3 and 4 for each shoulder—these also to be placed upright like the bow for the hair. To make these latest fashionable bows, wire ribbon is sewn on one-half of the velvet ribbon (black is most fashionable, but other colors may be used to match the gown if preferred), and the other half folded over it and the two halves stitched together. The loops and ends are then bent, as shown in the sketch.

A Good Photograph.

A photographer advised a young man sitting for his picture, who consulted him as to the suitable dress, not to wear a striped or spotted tie, one of plain dark color being preferable. A decided pattern becomes very monotonous in a picture. A collar that was a becoming style was also recommended, and a coat that fitted well, without so much regard to its newness. A further caution was to go into the studio at a moment of the day when one felt the best physically. "A young man came in here the other day," said the same photographer, "and sat for his picture. Three or four proofs afterwards submitted to him he rejected, because, as he explained, they looked to him just as he felt at the time of sitting—awfully hungry. It seems that he had come to the studio about two in the afternoon, without having eaten anything since a light and early breakfast, and his condition betrayed itself in his expression. I told him to try again after a satisfying meal, and it is a fact that the second picture scarcely looked like the same person."

Silk and Satin Coats.

One of the season's smart specialties is the black satin jacket. They are made precisely like other jackets and are worn with everything. Taffeta silk and gros grain is also extensively employed for these garments this year.

A very stylish model of black taffeta is made quite long, reaching well below the hips, and is belted in at the waist with a band of the material. The material is cut at the shoulders to form small epaulets over the close-fitting sleeves. The jacket is cut low in the neck and opens all the way down the front. Silk embroidery forms the garniture.

The latest dictate of fashion is that the summer girl's wardrobe is not complete unless she has at least eighteen shirtwaists.

WHY SHE WORE MOURNING.

The Second Wife Undertook the Obligations for No. 1.

He had asked her to be "his'n," and she had made up her mind that she had "worked out" long enough, any way. So she accepted him. She was perfectly satisfied with her place, but she wanted to have a house of her own. So they were married.

It wasn't long afterward that she came back to see her former mistress about something, and the latter noticed that she was wearing mourning. Of course, she was sorry for her, and was rather surprised that she made no mention o fher bereavement. It is indeed a grievous thing when a honey moon is cut short.

Finally the former mistress brought up the subject herself.

"You are in mourning, Maggie," she suggested.

"Yes," replied Maggie, complacently, and with no show of feeling at all, "I thought it was the least I could do fer 'im."

"It is showing no more than proper respect, of course. I am very sorry. It must have been a great shock."

"Great shock!" exclaimed Maggie, in surprise. Then, as she grasped the idea, she went on, "Oh, he ain't dead," with the accent on "he."

"You haven't lost your husband?"

Maggie shook her head.

"Then why are you in such deep mourning?"

"Just to please the poor lad," answered Maggie. "You see, it's thisway," she went on, when she had decided to he comes to me an' he says, 'Maggie,' he says, 'the poor doman niver had nobody to put on mournin' for her, an' I dunno that she's been treated right,' he says. 'Who?' says I. 'Me first wife,' says he. 'She was all alone in the world, exceptin' fer me,' he says. 'She had no wimen folks to wear mournin' fer her.' An' so I says to him, 'I'll do it fer the poor woman,' I says. An' here I am."

And the best of it is that the story is absolutely true.

HE WAS PAID FOR THE AD.

But Not at the Rate of Two Dollars an Inch for Six Feet.

"I was running a paper down in Tennessee then," prefaced the ex-newspaper man whose only work now is to collect what other people owe him in the way of rents and interest. One of the few fine-looking women you find in the mountains of that region walked into the office one afternoon and said: 'Be youins the editor?'

"Upon being informed that I enjoyed that distinction, she looked me over as though greatly disappointed and then told a long story of petty domestic difficulties that had led to the disappearance of her husband about two weeks before. Now she wanted to put in a nice advertisement to have him at home. How much would I charge her?

"'Two dollars an inch,' I answered.

"Taking a pencil and a sheet of copy paper she figured laboriously for pretty nearly an hour. At length she tore the paper into shreds and was deliberately walking out of the office when I asked her if she thought the charge too high.

"'I don't reckon I know anything 'bout your bus'ness, suh. But I never see that much money, let 'lone handlin' of it. Joe's wu'th it, but I couldn't never buy him back at them figgers. He's 6 foot 3 in his bare feet, suh, Joe is. At $2 a inch I make it $150. I'll jest have to go out and git his trail an' foller.'

"I didn't even smile, gentlemen. There was something noble in her resignation. I advertised 'Joe,' got other papers to copy and we rounded him up. One morning there was a ten-gallon keg of moonshine whiskey at my kitchen door, and I d id not advertise for an owner."—Detroit Free Press.

Madame Carnot's Generosity.

A pretty story is told of the sweet mercy of a deeply injured woman. Madame Carnot has lived in seclusion ever since the death of her ill-fated husband, devoting herself almost entirely to her children and grandchildren, finding in them the solace for those sorrows which have embittered her life. Recently the brother of her husband's murderer ventured to write to the unfortunate widow. He laid his case before her. After the assassination of the President by his brother, he found it impossible to obtain employment in France, owing to a not altogether unnatural feeling against the family. In desperation, he went to Spain, where he succeeded in procuring a place as porter to one of the monasteries, but he was cast adrift again when his relationship to the murderer transpired. Madame Carnot, like a noble woman, saw the hardness of the case, and at once promised to keep him in work as long as he lives. He is now in Paris.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cats Belonging to the Shah.

In enthusiasm for cats, the Shah of Persia surpasses all other royal devotees. He has fifty of them, and they have attendants of their own, with special rooms for meals. When the Shah travels, they go with him, carried by men on horseback. The late Czar of Russia was very fond of the feline tribe. When visiting the King of Denmark on one occasion, he alarmed the servants by rushing out very early in the morning to the gardens. From the window of his sleeping room, he had seen a big dog attack his favorite glack cat, and without staying to complete his toilet, he had run to her rescue. The famous royal cat of Siam is a large, white, short-haired variety, with black face and a peculiar formation of ear. Its previousness may be judged from the fact that it took three gentlemen of influence three months to procure one for the English consul at Bangkog.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Fast in ganz Württemberg haben die Metzger beschlossen, für Wurst- und Fleischwaaren eine Erhöhung der Preise eintreten zu lassen. Nur der Preis der billigsten Würstl soll unverändert bleiben.—Lokomotivführer Wacker, der kürzlich mit seiner Maschine in der linken Einfahrtshalle des hiesigen Hauptbahnhofes auf die ungestellte Drehscheibe fuhr und einbrach, wurde dieser Tage zur Beobachtung seines Geisteszustandes in eine Heilanstalt verbracht.

Cannstatt. Verhaftet wurde hier von der Fahndungspolizei ein elegant gekleideter Herr, der seit einigen Monaten hier wohnt und sich durch sein Verhalten verdächtig gemacht hat, Mädchenhandel für Hamburger Häuser zu betreiben.

Eberstadt. Ein sehr origineller Kauf fand neulich in einer hiesigen Wirthschaft statt. Ein Holzhändler vom Mainhardter Wald brachte einen Wagen Bretter hierher, um ihn zu verkaufen. Ein gerade anwesender Schreinermeister aus der Nachbarschaft bot nach einigem Handel 4 Mark für den Centner Bretter, worauf der Händler sofort einging. Der Käufer dachte, ein gutes Geschäft gemacht zu haben, nachdem jedoch der Wagen Bretter gewogen war, zog der Käufer mit langem Gesicht von dannen mit dem Bewußtsein, circa 50 Mark für die Bretter zu viel bezahlt zu haben.

Laichingen. In der Nähe von hier wurden sieben Personen, die unter einem Baume Schutz gesucht hatten, vom Blitze getroffen. Eine ist todt, die Anderen sind schwer verletzt.

Mühlhausen. Der im besten Mannesalter stehende Weingärtner Karl Raith verletzte sich vor einigen Wochen beim Bespritzen der Reben leicht an der Hand. Er beachtete die Wunde kaum. Wie es nun scheint, ist durch das beim Bespritzen verwendete Kupfervitriol Blutvergiftung eingetreten, und als der Arzt konsultirt wurde, war es bereits zu spät. Der Unglückliche erlag der Verwundung, nachdem noch Starrkrampf hinzugetreten war.

Weinsberg. Die neue Staatsirrenanstalt wird nun in der Nähe von hier errichtet werden. Auch Oehringen hatte sich darum bemüht. Für Weinsberg entschied man sich, weil die Staatsdomäne Weißenhof bei Weinsberg sehr günstig liegt und besonders die Wasserversorgungsverhältnisse vorzüglich sind. Die Domäne ist zudem Staatsbesitz, während in Oehringen Grund und Boden hätte erst erworben werden müssen. Es ist dies die fünfte Staatsanstalt dieser Art in Württemberg, die anderen sind in Winnenden, Zwiefalten, Schussenried und Weissenau. In Pfullingen und Göppingen sind Privatirrenanstalten.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Aus bisher unbekannten Gründen erschoß sich der Oberpostdirektionssekretär Mann.

Konstanz. Als kürzlich der hiesige Standesbeamte eine Trauung vornehmen wollte, stellte sich in letzter Minute heraus, daß der Bräutigam noch nicht volljährig war. Die Hochzeit mußte bis auf Weiteres verschoben werden.

Ebersbach. Hier erwischte das vierjährige Töchterchen des Kassiers Müller in der Küche eine Flasche Kirschwasser und trank daraus. Das Kind wurde leblos aufgefunden; alle Rettungsversuche erwiesen sich als vergeblich.

Ladenburg. Bürgermeister Petermann in Bruchsal wurde zum Bürgermeister von Ladenburg gewählt.

Mannheim. Der Schneidermeister Leonhard Schuppel in Leimen hatte als Kassier des dortigen Turnvereins eine für die Anschaffung einer neuen Vereinsfahne bestimmte Geldsumme von 850 Mark in Verwahrung. Eines Tages verschwand sein Geselle Christian Knödler und mit ihm vermißte der Meister auch das Fahnengeld. Von London schrieb ihm Knödler dann höhnische Briefe, die aber auf seine Spur führten. Er wurde verhaftet, ausgeliefert und kürzlich in der Ferienkammer zu vier Jahren Zuchthaus verurtheilt.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Straßburg. In der Vorstadt Grüneberg-Elsau brach in der Gerberei der Gebrüder Dreyfus ein großes Feuer aus, das die ganze Fabrikanlage einäscherte. Der Schaden beläuft sich auf über 500,000 Mark.

Bitsch. Auf dem Wege von Busweiler nach Liberscheid wurde während eines starken Gewitters ein 18jähriges Mädchen vom Blitze erschlagen.

Hagenau. Beim Exerziren entfiel dem Soldaten Franz Stadler vom rheinischen Husaren-Regiment Nr. 9 die Lanze. Der Schaft stemmte sich auf dem Boden und die Spitze ging dem Unglücklichen durch den Hals, so daß alsbald der Tod eintrat.

Urville. Ein Feuer legte die zu dem Schloß des Kaisers gehörigen Scheunen in Asche.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Im fürstlich Auersperg'schen Palais wurde kürzlich in einem im Erdgeschosse gelegenen Zimmer des Gartentraktes beim Ausgraben des Fußbodens, behufs Einlegung von Stufen, in der Tiefe von 75 Centimetern unter der Diele ein menschliches Skelett aufgefunden. Das Skelett dürfte das eines Mannes sein und mehr als 100 Jahre an der Fundstelle begraben gewesen sein.—Die Genossenschaft der Fleischselcher hatte in diesem Jahre vor dem Sophiensaale eine Triumphpforte zu bauen beabsichtigt, die aus Schinken, Würsten u. s. w. hätte hergestellt werden sollen, doch, heißt es, sei die Ausführung von Seite der Polizei nicht gestattet worden, weil nicht genug Wache aufgeboten werden könnte, um die theilweise oder ganze Verspeisung des Bogens zu verhindern.

Agram. Die Polizei kam einer weitverzweigten Falschmünzerbande auf die Spur. Die Personen, die das falsche Geld hier vertrieben, wurden bereits verhaftet. Die Fälscher, welche ihren Sitz in Oesterreich haben, sind bereits bekannt.

Brünn. Das Brünner Ferienheim Groß-Ullersdorf ist total niedergebrannt. Glücklicher Weise ist kein weiteres Unglück zu beklagen. Die in der Ferienkolonie untergebracht gewesenen 120 Knaben wurden rechtzeitig aus dem brennenden Hause entfernt.

Innsbruck. Ein Präfidialerlaß der Finanzlandesdirektion für Tirol und Vorarlberg besagt, daß das Erscheinen im Sportkleide den Steueramtsbeamten im Amte strengstens verboten wird, da es unschicklich sei! Die Bezirkshauptmannschaften sind zur sofortigen Anzeige verpflichtet, wenn sich ein Herr Beamter untersieht, in seinem Amte im Sportkleid zu erscheinen.

Lemberg. Auf der Bahnstrecke zwischen Rawa und Sokal entdeckte ein Arbeiter, daß bei Nacht elf Paar Schrauben, welche die Schienen mit den Schwellen verbinden, von einem unbekannten Thäter aus Muthwillen oder in verbrecherischer Absicht entfernt worden waren. Die Schienen lagen ganz lose auf den Schwellen und der Personenzug, welcher bei Nacht darüber passirte, ist nur durch Zufall der Entgleisung entgangen.

Podiabras. Die Erbprinzessin Hohenlohe, Schwiegertochter des deutschen Reichskanzlers, schwebte neulich hier in großer Lebensgefahr. Sie fuhr in einem Kahn auf der Elbe und fiel beim Passiren eines Wehres in's Wasser, in dem sie sofort verschwand. Mehrere Personen eilten herbei, und es gelang, sie zu retten.

Refined Torture.

It's on the Decrease in Plainfield now.

A Citizen Explains Why.

Year in and year out many of our citizens have struggled along bearing unnecessary burdens of the back, seeking relief from sources where it could not be found, suffering the refined torture which goes with a bad back. The little conqueror has brought about a wonderous change and from all parts comes the same report, hundreds of grateful citizens hasten to endorse the good work and speak publicly of their own personal benefit. Read what this Plainfield citizen days:

Mr. F. O. Smith, of 686 West Front street, Contractor for Painting, etc., says:— "For some time past I had symptoms of kidney trouble and despite all my endeavors to get rid of it I never was successful until I obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. There was a distressing pain across the small of my back which clung to me all the time. When I got seated at times if I moved a sharp pain struck me in the back and loins and almost made me exclain. Any change in the weather or if I caught the least cold always aggravated the trouble and caused me to suffer severely. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by one of my employes who had been cured of a long standing case of kidney complaint by their use. I commenced the treatment and derived benefit from it immediately and before I had finished the first box I was cured. It affords me pleasure to recommend such a valuable remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

"keep up with us"

if you care for the best for the least cost—that's a solid chunk of good advice. Thousands have already acted on it—with a dollar-saving profit, too. Just now, the last of our great sale of Spring and Summer stocks—most all Fall goods are ready to take their place.

Among Sideboards we want to close are:
$12 one at $9.75
$28 one at $20.
$35 one at $25.
$18 one at $13.
$25 one at $15.
—You'll admit their worth.

$25 Inlaid Suits at $16.
$50 Rich Velour Suits at $35.
$60 Silk Velour Suits at $45.
$75 Silk Brocatelle Suits at $50.

Carpet Prices Forced Down Again!

Fall styles were bought weeks ago, but before they all get here—dozens of rolls of Spring's weave must get out! Mattings are 10c. up.

Heavy Ingrains, 39c. yd. In season, they're 60c.
Body Brussels, 90c. yd. In season, they're $1.00 and $1.25
All-Wool Ingrains, 65c. yd. 90c. yd. is their everyday price.
Moquettes, 90c. yd. $1.25 would be usual.

As usual at end of season—we've a great lot of remnants—mostly Brussels and Velvets—at just half price.

100 Tables—Oak or Cherry—97c
—22x24 top—$1.50 is everyday price.

All Refrigerators left are at what makers asked us in wholesale lots. Not many left, but you're sure of a snap of some kind!

All the great "Monarch Vapor Stoves" and "Blue Flame Wickless Oil Stoves" to go at less than cost to us—room needed for other goods! Lots of folks use these stoves all Winter!

CHAPTER XVIII.

Thanks to the friendship of Evangeline Garth, which had become every day dearer to her, Lilac had found five weeks pass at Delverton Hall much more quickly than she had imagined possible. Owing to Evangeline's never-failing help, as well as to her own intuitive taste, it would have been difficult for anybody to discover in her speech or manner a single solecism due to her previous life.

In each of the letters which Lilac wrote to her lover every week, she allowed more of her real self and real love to show themselves as her hopes of making the Barnecet a suitable wife increased. It was unfortunate that the first of these letters reached the mining camp in Nevada after Roy's departure.

The feeling that, in spite of all her fears, her life was to be one of complete overwhelming happiness as Roy's wife was increased by the two long loving letters which she received from her fiancee, giving her every detail of his life at the mines in a way that told Lilac she was always in his thoughts. She had read them over and over again till she knew every word, and could kiss the passages she loved the best without glancing at them at all.

In spite of Lady Garth's chilling presence, Lilac felt very happy one evening, at the end of five weeks, as she sat in the drawing room and listened to Evangeline's sweet voice singing an air from Cavalieria Rusticana, to the accompaniment of her harp. For the first time her ladyship had called her "Lilac" in place of the formal "Miss Marvel," and there came into the girl's heart a faint glimmering of hope that some day she might make the old lady care for her. She wished that she had the courage to talk to her about her son, to tell her how anxious she was not to stand in the way of his prospects, how ready she was to sacrifice her own happiness and release him from his promise, if by so doing she might benefit him. The subject of the engagement existing between them had been carefully avoided by her ladyship; and Lilac could not help feeling that the young Baronet's mother looked upon her as anxious at all costs to keep Roy to a rash promise. She was very eager, therefore, to tell her the exact state of her own mind on the subject; and when, at the end of Evangeline's song, Lady Garth announced that she was anxious for a little private chat with Lilac, and sent the heiress unwillingly away, the Californian girl was pleased rather than appalled, as she would have been a few weeks before, at the prospect of a confidential chat with the old lady.

"It must be about Roy," she said to herself excitedly, and she waited in a tremor of anticipation until Evangeline had left the room.

She crimsoned with pleasure when her ladyship came and seated herself by her side on the low settee.

"You are wondering what it is I want to talk to you about, I expect?" she said in her least formal voice; and Lilac blushed again as she answered—

"I think I can guess, dear Lady Garth."

"You know that he cares for you, then?"

"Yes—of course I do. I should never have come here if Roy had not told me that he loved me."

"And so Royden told you that he loved you, did he dear?" she said. "I was afraid that the romantic circumstance of your meeting had made him indiscreet. You must not think too seriously of what he said when he was ill."

Lilac's flush had disappeared, leaving her face deathly pale; but she did not reply, and her ladyship went on rather hurriedly—

"It seems to me that Sir Roydon has been placed in a position in which he could not very well avoid offering you marriage as the only solution of the difficult problem what to do with you. Mind—I can quite understand that he was attracted greatly by your personal charms, which I do not deny are very great." She smiled graciously, as if she expected the girl to be pleased with the acknowledgment; but Lilac's pale statuesque face did not relax. "You must remember that I know Roydon much better than you do, dear."

"I prefer to think not, Lady Garth," said Lilac quietly; but her ladyship hastened on without noticing the interruption.

"My feelings are hostile to the idea of your marriage with my son; but you may pardon me when you know its cause. It is not that I have the slightest dislike to you, dear. Personally I am becoming very fond of you, in spite of the havoc you seem destined to play with the happiness of those I hold dear and with my own most treasured projects."

There was a pathetic tremor in her stately voice which touched Lilac.

"Indeed I would rather die, Lady Garth" she said earnestly, "than bring unhappiness to Roy's friends, if by dying I should not make him unhappy!"

Her ladyship wiped her eyes.

"You are a dear good girl," she said, "and I believe that you mean what you say! I cannot tell you how painful it is to me to have to speak to you in this way. I should not do it if I were not sure that you wished to do what is best for Roydon's interests. Let me speak to you quite candidly, dear. It has always been my fondest hope that Roydon and Evangeline should marry. Not only do they seem particularly suited for each other, but the marriage would tend to reunite the estates that have been in the family for many years. At present Roydon has not enough, apart from what he earns by his profession, to keep up the Hall as it always has been kept up. It is a necessity that he should marry wealth. But it is not a question of money that affects me so deeply. It is my fear that Evangeline's heart wil be broken if she loses my son's love. The dear girl carries her troubles very bravely, I know, and possibly she has not allowed you to guess her secret?"

"Her secret?"

"Her love for her cousin. To me, of course, it is no secret, for I have watched them grow up together, and have been more anxious than I care to confess at the change which has come over my beloved Evangeline since you were first mentioned in Roy's letters. How can I help all my sympathies going out to the girl whom I have always loved as my own child?"

"But do you not think Evangeline cares for Roy only as a sister?" asked Lilac, who had almost persuaded herself that it was so.

Lady Garth shook her head.

"You cannot have observed her very closely if you have not discovered that the poor girl is deeply in love."

"I have more than suspected it," said Lilac thoughtfully; "but I did not think it was of Roy that she was always thinking. There may be another."

"No—I am quite sure there is no other," said her ladyship, honetly believing that she was speaking the truth. "I have watched her very jealously for Roy's sake."

She spoke with eager conviction stealing herself against the look of pain and fear that had come into Lilac's eyes. The girl spoke calmly however.

"I hope you are wrong, Lady Garth but even if you are right, it does not rest with me to confer happiness upon Evangeline. I cannot make Roy love her."

"I do not think that there is much 'making' required," said her ladyship quickly. "Before you crossed his path I never had the least doubt about my son's feelings for his cousin, and that is what makes me think that you have mistaken Roydon's feeling towards yourself. Your beauty may have momentarily dazzled him—pardon my speaking so, but I feel that I can be quite candid with you—and the romantic nature of your meeting increased the spell. But I cannot help perceiving that only a generous desire to help you and to repay the sacrifice of a home, which you made for his sake, led him to suggest marriage."

As the haunting fear that had been with Lilac more or less strongly from the moment that Sir Roydon had first showed her the ring he had bought for her was thus put ruthlessly into words, Lilac wondered how she could sit so silently listening to her companion. Her ladyship went on relentlessly.

"There was only one consideration which prevented my son from arranging a marriage with his cousin before he left England. It was his Quixotic sense of honor which made him afraid of the very appearance of marrying for money. You are not going, dear?"—for the girl had risen from her seat, a strange dazed look in her wide-open eyes.

"I should like to be alone, if you do not mind, Lady Garth, to think over what you have said."

That is right, dear. I am sure you will do what is sensible when you comprehend how matters stand," said her ladyship, not ill-pleased with the interview as a whole, and the clearness with which she had expressed herself, and she had little room in her heart for pity for the friendless girl as Lilac walked from the room slowly and as if in a dream.

THE WICKED KNORT.

He Makes More Trouble in Lapland Than The Mosquito

One sometimes hears people who have only met the mosquito in its milder form, perhaps in Norway, or in Central Sweden, or in southern countries, or possibly in Lapland in favorable years, or late in the season, maintain that its terrors are much exaggerated. The writer has not found it so. The worst accounts that I had heard of it before I visited the country did not come anywhere near the reality. And even if the mosquito crop be a comparative failure in any season, there is a far more deadly insect waiting for you, a harmless looking little sandfly, which the natives call a knort. The mosquito is a gentleman by comparison. He fights under the rules of civilized warfare; hostilities are openly declared, a shrill blare of trumpets heralds its approach. True, he descends upon you in overpowering hosts, but from the fierce blast when he first sights his foe, to the savage thrust of his lance through your skin, there is nothing secret or underhand about him. Not so the little knort. In ones and twos he creeps stealthily upon you. There is no whistling of wings, no parade of skirmishing around the victim. Quietly he works his way into your clothing, where he seems as much at home as any of the wingless vermin, which, fortunately, are comparatively rare in Lapland. His bite is practically painless; you rarely notice it at the time, but on the second day it swells into a big burning wound to rub or chafe which is intolerable agony.—Badminton Magazine.

STRANGE USE FOR BIBLES.

Gold Leaf Packed in Them—The Holy Writ Considered a Guarantee.

It seems that gold leaf for decorative purposes is, as a regular matter of business, packed in little books made up of the unbound pages of Holy Writ cut to the requisite size for the purpose, and stitched togeether. The practice of packing the material in this way is a well-established one, and the Bible is selected for this purpose because as a rule, the type is more evenly set, and the printing generally finer and better executed. On the other hand, the use of the Bible is looked upon as a sort of guarantee that the leaf is of the best possible quality. It appears that the Book of Comon Prayer is also employed for the same purpose. Gold-leaf books are made up and supplied to the trade by an enterprising firm in Birmingham. An enterprising gentleman in London also supplied them. It is evident that the books are made up from the sheets in which they leave the press, and before they are folded.

AND IT WAS KILLED IN A WRECK.

A Woman's Rage Over a Spotted Pup in a Train Disaster.

A railroad wreck is a horrible thing, but it is not always without amusing incidents. A fearful wreck occurred near Montgomery some time ago and on the fated train was a young physician who often visits Nashville.

"The cars were piled up in confusion," he said, "and the wounded people were crying out with horror and pain. We picked up the engineer and carried him to a convenient spot away from the wreck. His face and neck were scalded and the flesh was dropping off in large pieces. The fireman was knocked senseless. We then went toward the rear of the train to look after the passengers. Standing near the sleeper were two ladies. A good-looking woman of perhaps 30 was upbraiding the other woman. She had a bundle hugged up fondly in her arms.

"'You have killed it,' she screamed, 'you have killed it; you wretch. Shame on you, you heartless creature!'

"'Let me see it, madam, I'm a physician, perhaps it is not too late.'

"She clasped the bundle to her breast and continued to rage at the woman standing near her.

"'Perhaps I can do some good; let me see it.'

"What do you think she did? She unrolled the bundle and handed me a spotted pup! She had five in a basket on the train and one of them had rolled out on the floor and the other woman had stepped on it and crushed it to death."—Nashville American.

ONE NIGHT STANDS.

By Howard Sydney Adams.

"Last act!" the call boy shouts as he comes bounding up the stairs three steps at a time. "Last act!" he yells on every landing, until at last he hoots at the chorus girls, who, huddled together in a ten foot room, come out of their pen and follow him, as though he were a bell sheep, down the winding stairs.

Then the comedian, with wig and painted face, passes slowly along the landing, and with eyes riveted on the stone steps, goes down the winding stairs. As he turns the last corner a hand is laid on his shoulder, and he looks up into the pretty face of a girl in gauze.

"Is your child better to-night?" she asks, as she draws the pink wrapper more closely about her shapely form. "Is there anything I can do?"

"I am afraid there is nothing," the comedian answers, his voice low and sad. "My little girl has stood the fatigue of travel bravely, but now she is very, very sick, and I am afraid I shall have to leave her here."

"Surely not alone?" the dancer asks, putting out her hand, which he unconsciously takes in his. "Surely you will not leave her alone?"

"If I remain," he answers, and his voice trembles as he speaks, "I can only comfort her by my presence; I cannot pay for a doctor then, nor can she have the little luxuries she craves."

The dancer draws her hand from his and draws from the bodice of her dress a silken purse.

"Take this," she says, as she holds it out to him. "It is not much, but it will help."

He turns away and leans his head against the iron railing.

"Coals of fire!" he mutters. "Coals which shall always burn!"

The dancer comes down the few steps to where he stands.

"I want to go home with you tonight," she whispers. "I want to nurse your little girl."

He turns and takes her hand in his.

"You must not, Blanche. You must not ask it. Think what the others would say."

"I care not what they say!" she cries, throwing her arms around his neck. "I once had the right to go with you. I had the right until another took my place."

Then the call boy comes running up the steps, shouting, "Your cue!" So they hurry to the stage below, he in time to enter with a ringing laugh, which is taken up by the audience when he tumbles down the palace steps, only to bound like a ball to the footlights, where, with a mock bow to the duke, he sings—

"Woman is faithless and man is true.
How do I know? Oh, I've proved it so."

When, at last, the curtain is rung down, the comedian quickly dresses and goes down stairs to find the dancer waiting at the stage door.

"May I go home with you?" she asks, beseechingly.

"I would rather, for your sake, you would not," he answers.

But his voice belies his words, so she puts her arm in his and together they pass down the street, only pausing for a moment beneath a dim lamp that he may wrap his muffler around her neck."

They reach the cheap hotel near the railroad station, ascend the narrow stairs, and along a gloomy hall until they reach a door at the father end. The comedian turns the knob and enters, leaving the dancer standing in the doorway while he lights a lamp; when the flickering flame throws its feeble light around the dreary room, he hurries to the bed where a child lies sleeping.

As he stoops to kiss the burning temples the child opens her eyes and putting her arms about his neck whispers—

"I was dreaming of mamma, dad."

Then as her eyes rest on the figure in the doorway, a smile of happiness steals across the wan face. "Is it mamma?" she asks. "Is it mamma who has come back to me?"

"No, my dear. She is some one who loved dad when he was a better man, and she has come to nurse you and help make you well again."

He turns away as the dancer stoops to kiss the child's feverish cheek and brush the golden hair from the burning forehead. But he cannot help perceive the start she gives at seeing the child's resemblance to its dead mother.

As the dancer takes off her heavy cloak the comedian goes to the bed, and wrapping the child in a blanket, seats himself in a rocking chair and tries to lull the little one to sleep by singing a lullaby.

The dancer busies herself about the room, smoothing the pillows and hanging up the child's clothing, stopping now and then to smile on him. And when everything is put away, she pushes a stool to his feet and seats herself by his side, prepared to share his vigil.

Hour after hour they sit there, not a sound breaking the stillness of night but the low lullaby. Then the song dies away. A cry rings through the room as the comedian springs to his feet, and with trembling hands tears the blanket from the face of the child. But the eyes are closed—the hands are cold—the child is dead.

Next morning, in the churchyard, they bury her. When the dull thud from the sod is echoed back as it strikes the coffin lid the father turns away and hurries to the station to catch the Western train. He must laugh to-night and make others laugh, for he is an actor playing one night stands. But he is no longer alone. The wrong he has done the woman beside him is forgiven, and she has promised to be what she would have been years before but for the treachery of another—his wife.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The exhibition of pictures and dissolving views, announced at Music Hall Thursday night by Prof. B. Benton Barker, promises to be an event of more than ordinary interest. They will include views of Cuba and scenes around and about Havana before the hostilities in the late Spanish-American war. After that, scenes and incidents of Santiago and Porto Rico life will be shown, with views of Tampa, etc. The pictures are authentic and said to be of superior finish, while the accompanying lecture by Rev. H. W. McKane will be of great interest. The musical features must not be forgotten either. Mrs. L. McKane the vccalist is said to possess a voice of great power and sweetness and we all know the brilliancy of Prof. MacClymont's accompaniments. Tickets for reserved seats can be had at box office of Music Hall.

MEXICO AND THE PHILIPPINES.

The Latter Territory Was Long a Dependency of the Former.

From the foundation of Manila in 1571, up to the year 1819, the colony of the Philippine islands was a dependency of Mexico. During that long period there was absolutely no direct intercourse between the mother country and her far eastern colony. Everybody and everything destined for the Philippines passed through Mexico until the American colony threw off the Spanish yoke. Thenceforth, for fifty-one years, communication with Spain was via the Cape of Good Hope. The commercial history of the Philippines would be too long to relate here in extenso; suffice it to say that it is a series of struggles between the colonists, who sought liberty to trade freely with Mexico and China, and the Spanish king and his councillors and the trading community in Spain, who persistently determined to curtail that freedom as much as possible. The policy of the Spanish merchant class was to hold Mexico as their exclusive market. They opposed Philippine traffic with China because this necessitated silver dollars, which they knew must come from Mexico surreptitiously, if the islanders were not openly permitted to give goods in exchange. The famous galleons, which were so frequently interrupted and seized by British privateers from the days of our Queen Elizabeth onward, formed the only connection between Mexico (Acapulco) and Manila.—Contemporary Review.

Pickles and an Emergency.

The talk turned the other day in an eastern Maine town on good luck coming out of apparent misfortune, and as an illustration a gentleman told how a Waldo county man's house caught fire in a time of great drought when the well was dry and there was no water within half a mile. The woman of the house discovered it burning at a lively rate on the dry roof. Help was as scarce as water. She began wringing her hands and saying over and over to herself "Here's a pretty pickle! A pretty pickle!"

"Pickle, Pickle," the word unconsciously repeated itself, and then she thought of a whole barrel full of pork pickle in the cellar, saved for boiling over. She darted down the cellarway and soon began deluging the roof with the brine. Everyone who has tried it knows what a complete fire extinguisher salt water is. The effect was magical, and before the supply of "pickle" was exhausted she had the fire out and the home saved. She says she never would have thought of it if that word "pickle" had not kept running in her mind.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

A Set of Ware That Cost $65,630.

At the Saveton sale in London, a few years ago, a service of old Sevres ware was sold for $5,000. The genuineness of this set was proved by certificates issued to the owners by the French government. But by far the most valuable service turned out at the Sevres pottery (in 1778) was made for the Czarina Catherine II. of Russia, and consisted of 745 pieces, which cost $65,630.

The Sevres ware, old or modern, is usually light in color, and daintily decorated with flowers or figure subjects tastefully arranged. The porcelain itself, although of good texture, is inferior to that of the English potteries. Decorated pieces generally bear pictorial panels on white ground, surrounded by frames of gilt scrollwork. These, as well as the tableware, are quite in keeping with the national character. Although the Sevres works are still in operation, they are kept busy in copying ancient Chinese and Japanese models, instead of increasing their reputation in the manufacture of the wares which made them famous.—Godey's Magazine.

Spurgeon's Little Strategy.

While Spurgeon was still a boy preacher, he was warned about a certain virago, and told that she intended to give him a tongue lashing. "All right," he replied, "but that's a game at which two can play." Not long after, as he passed her gate one morning, she assaulted him with a flood of billingsgate. He smiled and said: "Yes, thank you, I am quite well; I hope you are the same." Then came another burst of vituperation, pitched in a still higher key, to which he replied, still smiling: "Yes, it does look rather as if it is going to rain; I think I had better be going on." "Bless the man," she exclaimed, "he's as deaf as a post; what's the use of storming at him?" And so her ravings ceased and were never again attempted.—New York Tribune.

ASTHMA CURED AT LAST.

Dr. R. Schiffmann Proves His Faith in His Remedy By Giving It Away.

Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann is a recognized authority on the subject of throat and lung diseases and has, during a practice of over thirty years, undoubtedly treated and cured more cases of Asthma and kindred diseases than any doctor in the world. He announces that he has at last perfected a remedy which not only instantly relieves the worst attacks but has permanently cured thousands of so called "incurable cases." Dr. Schiffmann has perfect confidence in his remedy and in order to convince others of its merits in the quickest, surest way, he has arranged with the well-known druggist, L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street, to give a liberal sample package to each sufferer applying at his store next Thursday. An opportunity to test, without cost, a remedy so celebrated and promising so much, certainly should be eagerly grasped by every sufferer. Those living out of town will be sent a free sample not later than Sept. 30th by writing simply name and address on a post card, and sending to Dr. R Schiffmann, 315 Rosabel St., St. Paul, Minn.

MANY RIDERS WILL COMPETE AT OVAL.

Bright Prospects for Riverdale Field Club Meet.

TO BE HELD SATURDAY.

RAY DAWSON, A NATIONAL CHAMPION, WILL COMPETE.

His Rival from Passaic, Brown, Will be Here—Also Hamilton Crisp, of Trenton, and Jack Jaspar, from Bayonne—Many Local Riders Entered—There Will be Nearly Sixty in All.

Even the most sanguine of the good wishers of the race meet of the Riverdale Field Club, which is to be held at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, were surprised at the great support given the meet by the racing men of this section. Although Plainfield has not been heard from in racing circles for two years, the riders have all shown a willingness to return and give the Plainfield people a glimpse of good racing.

The list of entries received by Harry K. Lister is very encouraging to the promoters of the meet. The entries closed yesterday with nearly sixty men entered, many of whom will ride in several events. Among the prominent riders entered is Ray Dawson, of the New York Athletic Club, who has won national championship honors during the last two years. His present great rival, Brown, the well-known Passaic racing man, has also promised to ride in Plainfield. Hamilton Crisp, Trenton's crack-a-jack, will be present with several of his clubmates.

Jack Jaspar, the expert young rider from Bayonne, will line up on the tape in three events. There are also a number of racers from Jersey City, Newark and various parts of Hudson county. Quite a delegation will ride from the Pierce Cycle Club, of New York, beside others from the great metropolis. Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway, Westfield and Perth Amboy have all sent their best to compete.

The local contingent of riders will be well represented. The two Burke brothers will compete. Ray Poole, who has done such great riding this fall, will be in several of the events. Peter Simmons is also thinking of riding. The suspension on Eugene Richter is up and he will ride in the one-mile open and the one-mile handicap. There are many other riders from Plainfield and other places who are likely to make a good showing when on the track.

ACCEPTED MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

Somerset Freeholders Approve of Macadamizing and Make Last Payment.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met in the borough yesterday and finally accepted Mountain avenue. They also made the last payment for the work and the road is now free and clear from debt. The members seemed to be highly pleased with the avenue and they feel as though the county has a road of which they can be proud. There was no other business transacted.

To Enter a Larger Field.

The many friends of Miss Julia Shinn, who for sometime has had charge of the home department work of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, will regret to learn that she will soon resign her position. She has decided to go to Boston, and she will enter a larger field for missionary work. During Miss Shinn's stay in this city she has done a noble work and her departure will be regretted exceedingly.

An Attachment for $4.19.

Justice Nash yesterday issued a writ of attachment for James Arnold, borough clerk, against the household goods of Mr. Dallas, of Watchung avenue, who was about to move to Philadelphia. Constable Amos Moffett served the writ and detained the goods in a freight car just before they were started for their destination. The claim was for a grocery bill of $4.19.

Who is the Poisoner?

Another valuable dog has been poisoned in the West End. It was owned by Mr. Bush, and he, together with the other residents who have lost dogs in a similar manner, are feeling very indignant over the wholesale slaughter of their canines.

Reception to a Jolly Tar.

This evening the members of the Plainfield Catholic Club will tender a reception at their clubhouse to Dennis Keefe, an honorary member who is a sailor on the Battleship Detroit.

Formal Opening at the Park.

The Park clubhouse will be formally opened Saturday night by a dance. There will be some bowling on the alleys, and refreshments will be served.

BADGER BOYS' DIRTY JOB

COALING THE SHIP BEFORE THEY LEAVE TO BE DISCHARGED.

The Naval Reserves, However, Hope That This Will be Their Last Duty—Surgeon Simpson Ordered Detached.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Boston, Sept. 21. — The auxiliary cruiser Badger, manned by the New Jersey Naval Reserves, will not leave here for Philadelphia for several days. The Badger has been ordered to "coal ship" before sailing. This cheerful occupation was begun early yesterday morning, when the Badger hauled up alongside the big English collier Massepequa, and the work of tumbling in the hugh buckets of anthracite was started. As about 150 tons are to be taken on board, the Jerseymen will not get away from here much before next Monday or Tuesday. They think, however, that this is the last task that Uncle Sam will require from them, and they are doing it cheerfully because they believe discharge from the service awaits them at Philadelphia.

Among the orders issued yesterday by the Navy Department are the following:

Detached from the Badger and ordered home, Lieutenants E. M. Peters, W. Irving and L. Blount; Ensigns C. F. Long, C. H. Vreeland, T. Goldingay, W. P. O'Rourke, D. A. Dugan and A. N. Kemble; Passed Assistant Engineers D. Ritchie and B. Hart, Jr.; Assistant Engineers H. H. Anderson and J. Quilty; Passed Assistant Paymaster A. H. Colby; Passed Assistant Surgeon M. S. Simpson.

HEAVY GAME LAW FINES

HERMAN PASCH AND SON CARRIED GUNS LAST SUNDAY.

Game Warden Sebring Notified and He Caused Their Arrest—Justice Mattison Imposed a Fine of $20 on Each.

Charles Sebring, game warden, appeared before Justice Mattison, of the borough, yesterday afternoon and had warrants issued for the arrest of Herman Pasch and his son, William C. Pasch, of 84 Harrison street, Prideville, charging them with violating the game laws in hunting Sunday. As a result both violators of the law were fined $20 each and the costs of the court, which amounted to about $6.

It appears that last Sunday Pasch and son started out on a hunting trip over the mountains. During the day gun shots were heard by Louis Sprigg, of Howard street. The latter had seen the father and son go out with the guns and felt sure that they were doing the shooting. Later in the day he saw them return home and this strengthened his belief that they had been hunting.

In view of these facts Sprigg informed Game Warden Sebring of what he had seen and the latter had the warrants issued as stated.

When the father and son were arraigned they at first entered a plea of not guilty, but later when informed that the carrying of a gun Sunday made them violators of the game law, they changed their plea to guilty.

The law provides a penalty of $20 for a person seen carrying a gun Sunday and the Justice was obliged to sentence the violators accordingly. One-third of the amount of the fine goes to the informer, while the balance is turned over to the game warden, he in turn to pay a certain amount to the State and retain his fee therefrom.

NEW BICYCLE CLUB.

Colored Riders Organize the American Wheelmen's Club.

Last evening at the home of Charles Barbour, West Fourth street, a number of colored bicycle enthusiasts met and organized what will be known as the American Wheelmen's Club. The new club starts with a membership of about sixteen and the following officers were elected: President, Joseph Boldin; secretary, Lewis Coles; captain, William Crawley; lieutenant, William Burden; treasurer, Joseph Saunders; assistant secretary, Harry Binn. The next meeting will be held in two weeks to receive new members.

Will Have a Rally.

There was a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church at the parsonage on Central avenue Monday evening. Most of the evening was spent in discussing plans for the coming winter. It was decided to hold a rally-day service on the afternoon of Sunday, October 2d, when the time for holding the Sunday-school will be changed from morning until afternoon.

DEATH OF AN OLD DIVINE

REV. H. F. F. SCHNELLENDRUESSLER PASSES AWAY IN HIS 80TH YEAR.

Was Subject to a Violent Attack of Hiccoughs Which Developed Into a Complication of Diseases—Sketch of His Life.

Rev. Herman F. F. Schnellendruessler, an elderly divine, died last evening in Muhlenberg Hospital where he was taken two weeks ago suffering from a complication of diseases. The funeral will be held from Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside.

Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler was a familiar figure on Plainfield streets, and was well-known among the German community. Twenty years ago he moved to this city from Coontown, back of the mountains, and took the pastoral of the German Reformed church, which was then located on East Fifth street. He had charge of that church until he retired from the ministry eight years ago.

The deceased was born in Prussia in 1818, and would have been eighty years old next month. He secured an education in one of the German colleges, and when thirty years of age came to America. He went directly to New Brunswick and entered the Theological Seminary there.

His ordination occurred in 1855 in Albany, where his first charge was located. He then went to Jeffersonville, Sullivan county, then to Coontown and lastly to Plainfield. All his pastorates were profitable ones, from a spiritual standpoint, and he was well liked everywhere. On his retirement from active life he united with the Trinity Reformed church and attended quite regularly until last summer when he was taken ill.

His illness began with hiccoughs in July and gradually settled into a complication of diseases. Until two weeks ago he was kept at his home, 1257 Milton place, but his daughter, who kept house for him, feeling that her father needed more constant care than she was able to give him, had him taken to the hospital.

Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler has no near relatives living, except his two children, Augustus Press Schnellendruessler, who is in the clothing business, and who was in Cincinnati when they last heard from him, and Alice Amelia, his daughter, who has been her father's housekeeper since his wife died, two years ago.

While pastor of the German Reformed church here, Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler taught a German class at the High School, and had several private pupils. He has done nothing of this kind, however, for the last seven years.

The deceased married Miss Alice Camp, of New Brunswick, immediately after his graduation from the seminary there. He was generous and openhearted to a fault, and was always willing to share what he had with someone else. Whenever a charitable institution was in need of assistance, Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler was ready to help.

His loss will be felt keenly by the members of his household, especially the daughter, who is left without any near relatives except her brother, who is far away.

During the Civil War Dr. Schnellendruessler was chaplain of a volunteer regiment, serving in that capacity throughout the war. Up to the time of his death he drew a small pension awarded to him by the Government for disability.

MAPLEWOOD FOR EPILEPTICS.

Old Farm of Voorhees Family, Near Blawenburg, Selected as a Home.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 21.—The board appointed by Governor Voorhees to establish a village for epileptics has bought a part of the property needed for the purpose. It has obtained the Maplewood Farm, a tract of about 175 acres of land near Blawenburg, Somerset county, about two miles to the east of Skillman station, on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and about six miles from Princeton.

The land belonged to the estate of David C. Voorhees. There are three dwelling houses, with barns and outbuildings, on the property. One of the dwellings, the Voorhees home, is a fine old country house, large and admirably adapted for the purpose of the institution. The other houses are small. An option has been obtained on additional land adjoining Maplewood Farm.

The board of managers consists of Rev. James M. Buckley, LL.D., president, Morristown; Professor S. Olin Garrison, M. A., secretary, Vineland; Dr. Thomas J. Smith, treasurer, Bridgeton; Dr. John H. Ewing, Flemington; Dr. John W. Ward, Trenton, and Dr. William S. Combs, Freehold.

TROLLEY WILL RUN IN DUNELLEN FRIDAY.

Brunswick Company Will Keep Their Agreement.

TRACKS BEING CLEARED.

LINCOLN COUNCILWOMEN TO DRIVE A SILVER SPIKE.

It is Not Publicly Known What Arrangement the Trolley Company Have Made About Transfers But the Franchise Ensures a Five-Cent Fare Between Dunellen and Any Part of Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Sept. 21.—Alvah Gray, who is one of the contractors supervising the work being done on the street railway here, received a notice yesterday to clear and clean the car tracks so that cars can be running on them. The time when the work is to be finished is tonight, and Mr. Gray will put a force of men to work cleaning the tracks some time today. The work will consume half a day.

This looks like business. As told in last night's Press the time which the New Brunswick Traction Company were given to complete the road and have cars running expires Friday, and now it looks as though the company intend to live up to their agreement, and have the road in running order by then.

The entire road from Bound Brook to Dunellen is not fully completed. The bridge across the Raritan river is not finished and some parts of the track beyond Lincoln are not all laid. But a finished track extends to Beechwood Heights, and there is no reason why cars should not run from there here. This is evidently what the company intends to do.

It is said that the Electric Light Company in Plainfield has not sufficient power to enable the Plainfield Street Railway Company to run cars from Plainfield to Bound Brook, so it is supposed that the New Brunswick Traction Company will secure enough power from Bound Brook to operate their line from Lincoln to Dunellen. What arrangements the company have made with the Plainfield company in regard to issuing transfers from the Plainfield division to this city and vice versa is not known, but when the franchise was granted the New Brunswick Traction Company it was stipulated that a five-cent fare should carry a passenger from any point in Dunellen to any point in Plainfield or Netherwood.

The trolley magnates drove over yesterday and inspected the route. A few days ago Superintendent Adelman, of Plainfield, was in town taking observations.

The running of trolley cars through Lincoln will be made the occasion of a celebration by the people of that section. A silver spike will be driven in one of the ties in front of the Lincoln statue by Miss Emma Egel, president of the Lincoln Common Council.

RAILROAD COMPANIES FIGHT.

Central Resorts to Remarkable Efforts to Outwit the Lehigh.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Perth Amboy, Sept. 21—A large force of men in the employ of the Central Railroad of New Jersey has been engaged since Saturday in building tracks in the yard of the Raritan Cooper Works. The object is to prevent the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company from building a spur into the works. The Central officials discovered that the Lehigh Company expected to lay its track Saturday night, crossing the tracks of the Raritan North Shore Railroad, a branch of the Central. Without crossing those tracks, the Lehigh road could not enter the yard. Since Saturday night four tracks have been built by the Central workmen, all of them spurs from the Raritan North Shore. To make sure that the Lehigh Company cannot cross them at will, these tracks have been laid on different grades. One is two feet below the North Shore, and another is three feet above it. One of the others resembles a toboggan track, the grade varying three feet in fifty. Cars standing on it are tilted to so many angles that they look like a wreck. The Central officials say that they will combat with force any attempt on the part of the Lehigh Company to enter the Cooper Works property.

Borough Democratic Primaries.

Next Friday evening at 8 o'clock, in the basement of the Borough Public School, the Democratic primary will be held to elect delegates to attend the Democratic Gubernatorial convention to be held at Trenton, Wednesday, September 28th. The other primaries throughout the county will be held Saturday afternoon next.

SUING FOR AN OLD DEBT

WOULD BE OUTLAWED IF DEFENDANT HADN'T BEEN OUT OF THE STATE.

John Schorb Wants Alexander Kane to Pay a $9.50 Bill for Clothes That Were Bought Nearly Ten Years Ago.

A tailor with an unpaid tailor's bill, the man who ran up the bill, and six men trying to solve the problem whether the tailor was entitled to the money or not, made an interesting scene in Justice Mosher's court yesterday afternoon. John Schorb was the tailor and Alexander Kane, the contractor, the man who owed the bill.

It wasn't a very large bill, and has been running since April 16th, 1889. According to the statute of limitations the bill was outlawed three years ago, but as it was shown that Kane has been out of the State part of the time since 1889, and while the defendant was absent the statute ceases to run, it is still not outlawed.

The dealings between Schorb and Kane extended over several weeks. On April 16th, 1889, Kane ordered a suit made which was to cost him $8. He paid $6 on account leaving $2 still due. Later Kane ordered a $6 suit for his brother, which ran the bill up to $8. Then Kane hired a light overcoat, for which Schorb charged him $1.50. This made $9.50. Then Kane gave Schorb a quantity of lead pipe for which the tailor consented to deduct 50 cents from off the bill, leaving a balace of $9.

Counselor W. K. McClure was Schorb's lawyer, and City Judge DeMeza appeared for Kane. The jurymen were Charles W. Johnson, W. A. Spencer, Theodore F. VanHorn, Henry W. Fraleigh, I. C. Schutt and William Martin. After deliberating for a few moments the jury brought in a verdict of no cause for action.

COULDN'T STOP THE TRAIN.

Narrow Escape of Passengers at Westfield Station Yesterday.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 21.—A number of passengers on the Central railroad had narrow escapes from either serious injury or death yesterday afternoon at 1:27 o'clock while the eastbound passenger train due at that time was standing at the station. An east-bound heavy freight train was approaching the station as the passenger stopped. The engineer on the freight reversed the throttle on his engine and whistled for down brakes, but the train was such a heavy one and was running down grade that it was impossible to stop. Seeing the imminent danger of the people getting on an off the train he blew his whistle frantically and warned them of the approach of the freight train. The passengers scrambled out of the way in a hurry.

The baggage-master had drawn a truck-load of trunks up alongside the baggage car of the train, and was unable to get the trunks out of the way soon enough. The ponderous freight engine struck them and sent them flying in all directions. The trunks were broken open and a choice assortment of wearing apparel was shown up. No further damage was done, however.

LOST ONE OF HIS FEET.

Sad Accident That Befell a Pole at South Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

South Plainfield, Sept. 21—A young Pole, a resident of Bound Brook, met with a painful accident at this place yesterday afternoon while attempting to board a Lehigh Valley Railroad train to return home. He was accompanied by a friend, who is also a Pole, and the latter ran ahead to secure the tickets. While the tickets were being purchased the other Pole attempted to jump on the train. As he did so his feet slipped and one car wheel ran over a foot, taking it completely off.

A Watermelon Party.

Last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Randolph, of West Eighth street, a watermelon party was given. An evening of sociability was a source of pleasure to all. During the evening refreshments were served, and watermelons in abundance. Included among the guests were Miss Nellie Rockfellow, Miss Fannie Demarest, Miss Libby Joseph, Miss Frankie Demarest, the Misses Giles, Miss Marx, Richard Randolph, Judson Giles, John Auten, Harry Gwynette and Walter Manning.

A Free Demonstration.

Next Monday evening at the Camera Club rooms Mr. Marlin, of New York, will give a free demonstration of the use of Velox paper which is used in photographic printing. It is the desire of the Camera Club that those who are interested in camera work will attend this demonstration, as it will be something of great interest to all.

CONTRACTORS ARE MAD.

BOUND BROOK BANK GAVE CONTRACT TO OUT-OF-TOWN FIRM.

A New Bank Building to be Put Up, but the Local Firm Won't Build it.—Now They Want to Start a New Bank.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Sept. 20.—During the past few weeks there has been quite a stir in financial circles, and it is possible that before many months Bound Brook may be supporting two banks. The trouble has arisen over the action taken by the officials of the First National Bank. A short time ago it was decided by them to build a new bank building, and they advertised for bids according to prepared plans and specifications. The contractors of the town were given an opportunity to bid, and they did so. After the bids had been received the officials gave the contract to build the bank to Sargeant Brothers, of Somerville.

In view of this action the contractors and many business men of this place feel quite indignant. They claim that the bank officials ask them to deposit their money in the bank and to help to support it and when the bank people have any work they want done they go outside of the town for men to do the work.

An informal meeting of contractors and business men has been held for the purpose of taking steps to build another new bank. They claim that the First National Bank is not capable of doing all the business for the town and surrounding country, and that another bank is needed. The outcome will be watched with considerable interest.

GOT THEIR MONEY BACK.

DENNIS KEEFE RECEIVED A PRESENT ONLY TO RETURN IT.

A Purse of $55 in Gold Presented to Naval Hero, and He Then Gave it Back to Start a Woman's Auxiliary Society.

The members of the T. A. B. Society tendered a reception in their hall last evening to their fellow-member Dennis Keefe, of the battleship Detroit. During the evening President Patrick Reville presented Mr. Keefe with a purse of $55 in gold. This purse was made up a long time ago by the members for the purpose of giving it to Mr. Keefe, but their opportunity did not appear until last evening.

The members were very much surprised after Mr. Keefe had received and thanked them for the money to see him present the money to the society for the purpose of starting a ladies' auxiliary in connection with the society, thereby forming an association that will tend to bring in more members.

The balance of the evening was devoted to dancing, music for which was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly. During the reception a sumptuous repast was served by members of the society.

This evening the Plainfield Catholic Club will give Mr. Keefe a reception in the clubhouse.

Switch Tower Destroyed.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

South Plainfield, Sept. 21.—Yesterday afternoon the large switch tower on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at this place was about totally destroyed by fire. The tower was set on fire by sparks from a passing locomotive, and the employes not having any quantity of water were helpless in their efforts to save the burning structure. The mechanical part of the tower was not disabled and the train service was not interfered with in any way.

Received New Brunswick Visitors.

Court Pride of New Jersey, No. 49, I. O. F., held a regular meeting last evening and received a visit from Court New Brunswick. Some of the visitors took part in initiating several candidates, after which a bountiful repast was served by the home court. Brother Daly, of New Brunswick, accompanied by Brother Kreger, of this city, furnished the music for the occasion, and at a late hour the visitors returned home well pleased with their trip.

Bound Brook's Tax Rate.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Sept. 21—The tax rate for the coming year at Bound Brook was fixed last evening at a meeting of the Council at $1.80. This is an increase of five cents over last year, which is caused by the advance in the county rate.

Property Sold for Taxes.

Yesterday afternoon Collector Geo. F. Brown, of the borough, sold eighteen pieces of borough property for taxes, and as usual the borough purchased them for a term of years.

County Superintendent of Schools J. A. Mets, of Somerset county, is the guest of Plainfield friends today.

GATHERING OF POLITICIANS.

MANY MINOR PLUMS TO BE FOUGHT FOR AT CAUCUSES.

Convention to Meet at Noon—Then Temporary Organization—Adjournment to 2 o'Clock—Voorhees Will Be Nominated by Acclamation—Other Work Which Will Come Before Delegates.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, September 21 — Already the corridors are beginning to assume unwonted activity and the familiar faces that usually appear at convention time are to be noticed here and there at the favorite haunts of the Republican leaders. Tomorrow the Gubernatorial convention of the Republican party in Jersey is to be held at Taylor's Opera House.

The convention will open at noon and the temporary organization will be effected and committees appointed. Then the convention will adjourn for two hours while the credentials are examined, the platform prepared and other committee business attended to. The afternoon session will convene after the recess in the neighborhood of 2 o'clock. The committees will report and the formality of adopting the platform passed through with. Then nominations will be called. The counties will respond one after another with no nomination to offer until Union county is reached. One of her most flowery speakers, exactly who it will be is not yet known, will then rise and present the name of Foster M. Voorhees. There will be a short speech and plenty of cheering. Then the nomination will be seconded and probably carried by acclamation. After that the convention will conclude its business and the session will end. It will probably be short.

While it is a foregone conclusion as to what the result of the convention will be, still there are a number of minor political plums worth securing and for which the wire-pulling has already begun. The caucuses of the different county delegations which will be held tomorrow morning, will really attract more attention than the convention itself. Then the members to the State committee will be chosen as well as the members to the various convention committees. Then there are sundry booms that will be opened for Congressional and State Legislative offices.

Trenton will be a lively place tomorrow night before the delegates return to their respective homes. There is not a Republican in the ranks of that party but that is absolutely sure that Voorhees will be elected if once nominated. So when the thing is really done there will be a great rejoicing.

WHITE RIBBON CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting of W. C. T. U. Workers From Union County Today.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 21—The fourteenth annual convention of the Union County Woman's Christian Temperance Union was opened in the W. C. T. U. hall in this place this morning. The morning session began at 9:45 o'clock with devotional exercises led by Mrs. M. F. Francis. An address of welcome was made by Miss Emma L. Starr which was responded to by Mrs. E. S. Baker. The president's address, by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, and the reports of the secretary, Mrs. D. D. Irving, and the treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Noe, followed.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield; recording secretary, Mrs. A. H. Mosher, of Westfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Noe, of Elizabeth.

The morning session closed with a Bible reading by Mrs. Emma Bourne, State president, after which a box lunch was served. The convention will continue this afternoon and evening.

JUSTICE SPERRY DEAD.

Old Township Official Passed Away at His Daughter's Home.

Anson S. Sperry, one of the oldest justices of the peace in Somerset county, died at the home of his son-in-law, Edmumd P. Stevens, of 65 Grandview avenue, this morning, after a long illness. He was born in New York State seventy-eight years ago, and has been a resident of the borough for nearly a decade. He had many friends throughout North Plainfield township with whom he was very popular.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA

Gen. Miles Opposed to Sending Troops There in October.

SPAIN DIES VERY HARD

The President Adhering to His Decision. Regular Regiments Demoralized by Sickness. The Situation at Havana. Cubans Growing Restless. Suffering for Lack of Food.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The president adheres to his decision to send 50,000 or 60,000 troops to eastern and western Cuba in October. Gen. Miles has been making a big fight against such a premature occupation of the island, and he proposes to continue his efforts to prevent the assignment of troops to Cuba for several months.

Letters have been received from regular army officers who served in Cuba reporting the condition of their commands, and they agree that the soldiers are in a deplorable physical state. They claim that it will take six or seven months to recuperate troops, and that this can be accomplished only by sending them to the military posts, instead of keeping them at southern camps. An example of the danger of the southern camps is afforded by the Fifth infantry, which was assigned to Cuba after a long period in the South. The command is reduced in strength by a long sick list.

The regiments in this country which returned from Cuba are practically worthless by reason of the large number of furloughed soldiers armed with surgeons' certificates. Men have obtained furloughs and extensions and used every means of staying away. This is particularly true of the regulars, and the service is described as well nigh demoralized.

Advices from Havana say that there are ten Spanish men-of-war in port and 61,000 Spanish troops, besides 40,000 volunteers there. The evacuation commission has a great deal of work before it, and it is said that its duties cannot be completed before the end of October.

There is very little yellow fever in the city, but there is a great deal of typhoid malaria, which is frequently fatal.

Havana is quiet, but the Cubans are showing much restlessness in their anxiety to have the evacuation begin. There is suffering and some starvation, but the captain general will not permit the relief stores on board the Comal to be landed, unless $60,000 is paid in duties.

Meanwhile, the British consul general says that infants are dying for lack of the milk and food on board the Comal. One correspondent of the navy department thus closes a letter describing the conditions: "Spain dies hard."

Manitoba Wheat Crop.

Winnipeg, Sept. 21.—Manager Thompson of the Ogilvie Milling Company has just returned from inspecting the wheat crop, and says:

"As a result of my trip I am forced to admit that the government estimate of the crop will be exceeded by over seven million bushels. I estimate the crop of wheat for Manitoba this year at 2,000,000, and allowing 6,000,000 for the Northwest Territories, will give us a total wheat crop nearly double that of last year and the greatest in the history of the West.

"I am pleased to find that the supposed injury from wet weather has not been anything approaching what has been represented; in fact, damage from that cause is light, and Manitoba this year will ship more No. 1 hard wheat than the entire crop of last year."

The Dutch States General Opened.

The Hague, Sept. 21.—Queen Wilhelmina, accompanied by the queen mother, opened the States General yesterday.

In the speech from the throne she dwelt upon the innumerable proofs of patriotism and affection for the dynasty manifested since here accession to the throne, the recollection of which, she added, could never be effaced from her memory. She had received the czar's disarmament proposal with peculiar sympathy. She promised the introduction of a number of social measures.

Alger at Camp Hamilton.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 21.—Secretary Alger and party inspected Camp Hamilton and reviewed the troops yesterday. Surgeon General Sternberg praised the division hospital.

The brigade of immunes was inspected in the afternoon. The secretary left for Knoxville last night. He said the condition of the troops is excellent.

A Lake Steamer Burned.

Glen Haven, Mich., Sept. 21.—The Queen of the Lakes, while lying in the harbor at South Manitou island for shelter on Sunday evening, caught fire and was burned to the water's edge. Nothing was left but the iron hull, which is still afloat. No lives were lost.

Fiscal Agents in Porto Rico.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The president has designated the firm of Deferd & Co. of Boston, as fiscal agents of the United States in such portions of the island of Porto Rico as are now, or may hereafter, come under the military jurisdiction of the United States government.

Czar's Peace Congress

London, Sept. 21.—A dispatch from Brussels to a local news agency says that King Leopold has addressed an autograph letter to the czar urging the designation of Brussels as the meeting place of the peace congress.

Window Glass Works Burned

Woodbury, N. J., Sept. 21.—Fire of incendiary origin, last night, destroyed the window glass works here, owned by Colonel G. G. Green. Loss, $30,000. The works had been closed for several years.

John Sherman Ill.

Washington, Sept. 21.—John Sherman is ill at his residence in this city from an acute attack of bronchitis. His condition is not regarded as dangerous.

SPAIN'S COMMISSION INSTRUCTED.

Her Paris Commission Is Told What To Do

Madrid, Sept. 21.—The cabinet council was in session five hours yesterday. The ministers fully approved the instructions to the peace commissioners, who will start for Paris on Sunday.

The instructions to the Spanish peace commissioners cover several pages and are mainly devoted to the question of the Philippines.

They are less precise respecting the West Indies, the disposition of which are virtually settled by the protocol.

Nevertheless, the commissioners are definitely instructed regarding the Cuban debt and commercial relations, upon which points they are to insist strenuously.

All the negotiations will be subject to the direct approval of the Spanish cabinet.

The Spanish peace commissioners will receive twelve thousand francs per month, and their secretaries from two thousand to eight thousand francs.

It is said that the instructions are drawn in a spirit of compromise.

The United States has not replied to Spain's communication raising the question of the validity of the surrender of Manila after the signing of the protocol. This is supposed to be due to the nearness of the meeting of the peace commissioners.

Weekly Crop Report

Washington, Sept. 21.—The weekly crop bulletin issued by the weather bureau gives the following summary

The week ending September 19, 1898, on the whole, has been generally favorable, except in portions of New England, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland, where the drought conditions previously reported continue, while in Mississippi and southwestern Texas and some sections of Kansas and Missouri, heavy rains have retarded farm work.

Killing frosts are reported from Northern New England, Michigan and Wisconsin, but with slight damage, and light frosts have occurred in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, doing little or no damage.

Rough Riders Start for Home

New York, Sept. 21.—The Arizona delegation of Roosevelt's Rough Riders started home Monday night after a week of unalloyed happiness in this city. Some time before the men left word was sent out from their headquarters in the Delaware house, at Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue, that they had an important statement which they desired to make public. The statement proved to be a testimonial of the appreciation felt by the Arizona contingent for the kind treatment it had received at the hands of the people of this city in general, and from the police force in particular.

Our Flag Over Havana

Hnavaa, Sept. 21.—At ten o'clock yesterday morning the American flag was hoisted on the flagstaff of the Trotcha hotel, the headquarters of the American evacuation commission.

A guard of marines was posted at the entrance to the grounds. Colonel Closs and Captain Payne stood on the roof of the hotel at both sides of the flagstaff.

At 10 o'clock sharp a quartermaster of the steamer Resolute raised the flag, which unfurled and fluttered proudly in the breeze, which was blowing from the sea.

Ten Men Cremated

Toledo, Sept. 21.—Ten men were cremated and eight more fatally burned last night in the most disastrous fire that ever occurred in Toledo.

The spontaneous combustion of dust in the grain elevator owned by Paddock, Hodge & Co., at nine o'clock, caused this terrible destruction of life, and none of those who were taken out after the fire were far enough from death's door to tell any of the details.

THE SPANISH CAPTAIN'S PRIDE.

Though Beaten He Wanted a Certificate of Bravery.

Spanish pride is proverbial. An incident in the life of Lord Cochrane, the Earl of Dudenald, is illustrative. Lord Cochrane, in command of a little brig, the Speedy, in broad daylight captured the Spanish frigate, the Gamo. The Speedy carried a crew of fifty men, and threw a broadside of twenty-eight pounds of metal; the Gamo a crew of three hundred men and a broadside of over one hundred pounds. The Speedy had previously, through a ruse, escaped from a large Spanish ship in the night, and some of her officers rather criticised the action of her captain on the occasion—in that he did not make an effort to capture the Spaniard. This made Cochrane mad. So when the enemy came up he hove to, as if about to surrender. Suddenly a puff of wind carried him alongside. He grappled and boarded. The Speedy lay so low her opponent was unable to depress the guns sufficient to hit her, while the Englishman made every shot tell. The boarders, after stout opposition, carried the enemy. When the action was over the Spanish captain requested some certificate from Dudenald as to the way in which he had fought the ship. He received one: "This certifies that Captain —— of the Spanish frigate Gamo fought his issue like a true Spaniard." The defeated gentleman was greatly pleased, and so was the nation, for on returning home he was immediately given another and more important command.—Army and Navy Journal.

"See here," said a Georgia rural editor, "that load of wood is all black gum and sap pine. I can't use it."

"Well," replied the old subscriber, "I guess you can use hit 'bout az well az I kin use per paper, wich is all obituaries an' eddytorials."—New York Tribune.

Sure Cure.

"Yes, Stubbs was goin' into a decline an' the doctor said tht' best thing for him was to get an easy Government job and lie around doing nothing." "A sinecure, eh?" "I dont know what kind of cure you call it, but anyway he's cured."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ELECTIONS IN SPAIN

Ministerial Nominees Generally Successful.

BLANCO AND AUTONOMY

Cables That He Is Not in Accord With Cuban Colonial Ministry. Duke of Tetuan Blames Sagasta for Spanish Disasters. Says Liberals Could Have Averted War.

London, Sept. 21.—Special dispatches from Madrid say the provincial council elections have resulted in the return of the ministerial nominees, except at Bilboa, where the Basque patriot Sarana has been elected by an overwhelming majority.

Serious street disorders ensued.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—Captain General Blanco cables from Havana that he is not in accord with the Cuban colonial ministry, to which the government here replied that while Spanish sovereignty existed in Cuba, he must apply autonomy, and therefore he could not turn out the colonial government now in office and appoint a new one.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—The workmen of Bilboa, where the cruisers which belonged to Admiral Cervera's fleet were built, have decided to go to Santander in order to make a demonstration against the defeated Spanish admiral on his return to Spain.

The government, however, has taken measures calculated to prevent the plan being carried out, and the ministry has also forbidden demonstrations in welcoming Cervera home.

The Duke of Tetuan, who was minister for foreign affairs in the cabinet of the late Premier Canovas del Castillo, is quoted as saying in an interview:

"Senor Canovas, if he had lived, would never have accepted war with the United Statets. Canovas and myself were convinced that war would lead inevitably to the ruin of Spain."

Continuing, the duke blamed the Liberals, who, he said, could have averted war, either by accepting the proffered good offices of the United States minister, General Stewart L. Woodford, or by treating with the insurgents on the basis of Cuban independence, or by selling Cuba.

In conclusion the Duke of Tetuan remarked: "Senor Sagasta is responsible for all our disasters and must be ejected from power."

No Joy for Cervera

Madrid, Sept. 21.—The workmen of Bilboa, where the cruisers which belonged to Admiral Cervera's fleet were built, have decided to go to Santander in order to make a demonstration against the admiral on his return.

The government, however, has taken measures calculated to prevent the plan being carried out. The ministry has also forbidden demonstrations welcoming Cervera home.

West Indian Hurricane Victioms

Kingston, Jamaica, Sept. 21.—At a public meeting yestetrday, called for the purpose of discussing the possibilities of raising funds for the relief of the sufferers from the recent hurricane which swept over the West Indian islands, the archbishop of the West Indies declared that the condition of Jamaica was such that it was not possible to do more than emphasize an expression of sympathy with those who were in need of help.

Any substantial relief, he added, comprehending the re-establishment of the original conditions in the devastated islands, must, in his opinion, necessarily take the form of imperial assistance on a large scale.

Public opinion here endorses the statements of the archbishop, and especially holds Great Britain responsible for the industrial crisis which renders the other West Indian colonies impotent to give the suffering islands substantial aid.

The Philippine Situation.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Sept. 21.—Twenty Spanish vessels, including 12 steamers, have completed their transfer to the American flag, and a majority of them have now proceeded on coasting voyages.

There is some uncertainty regarding the native crews on the Filipino vessels. It is reported that they have been committing questionable acts, and the Boston, Raleigh and Manila sailed yesterday under orders to protect commerce.

The British gunboat Rattler has gone to Cebu. There are rumors that the insurgents are attacking Cebu and Iloilo.

The Eighth Cavalry Going to Cuba

Washington, Sept. 21.—The orders for the exchange of the stations of the Second cavalry, now at Montauk Point, and the Eighth cavalry, now at Fort Mead, S. D., have been temporarily suspended. The Eighth cavalry saw no service, and it is the purpose of the administration to send the regiment to Cuba in the autumn.

Provincial Elections in Spain

London, Sept. 21.—Dispatches from Madrid say that the provincial counsils election has resulted in the return of the ministerial nominees, except at Bilbao, where the Basque patriot Sarana has been elected by an overwhelming majority. Serious street disorders ensued.

Says Bryan Will Resign

Kansas City, Sept. 21.—A special to the Star from Jacksonville, Fla., says: "Colonel William Jennings Bryan of the Third Nebraska volunteers will shortly resign his commission in the army."

Mr. Bayard Weaker Again.

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 21.—Hon. Thomas F. Bayard was reported as being considerably weaker yesterday.

It was thought that he would not survive longer than three or four days.

Philadelphia's Peace Jubilee

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—The citizens' committee has selected October 26 and 27 for the peace jubilee.

GEN. WHEELER TO GO.

He Has Been Ordered to Huntsville, Ala to Command the Cavalry.

Camp Wikoff, Sept. 21.—The Third cavalry expects to get away from here to-day and will be transported across the Sound to New London, where they will take the Central Vermont Railroad for Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont.

The men of the Eighth Maine, Volunteer Signal Corps will be relieved from duty to-day.

The Twenty-fourth infantry, colored, was to have gone wholly to Fort Douglass, Utah. As only half the men can be accommodated at Fort Douglass, the rest of them will be stationed in Wyoming.

General Wheeler is to go to Huntsville, Ala., where he will be in command of the First Separate cavalry division.

General Wheeler is now in communication with the quartermaster's department regarding the transportation for moving the cavalry.

General Wheeler says he could move all the cavalry from Camp Wikoff in a day or two if proper transportation is provided.

There were no deaths reported from the hospital yesterday.

Return of Gen. Merriam.

San Francisco, Sept. 21.—The steamer Australia arrived in port yesterday from Hawaii. General Merriam, commander of the department of California, who has been in Honolulu, was one of the passengers.

He was accompanied on the voyage by Lieutenants Graves and Bennett of his staff.

Everything was quiet in Honolulu when the steamer left. The people were jubilant over the annexation and were interesting themselves in an effort to make the government of the islands similar to that of the United States.

The officers of the Australia say that the Arizona, with troops for Manila, sailed on the 11th inst, and the Scandia, with troops and money, was to leave on Tuesday, the 13th.

To The Klondike.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The comptroller of mounted police at Ottawa is in receipt of information to the effect that Inspector Moody and his small party of mounted police, who set out for the Yukon by way of Edmontton, have reached Dawson City.

No serious mishaps have befallen them, but their trip was across a country which white men had never before traversed, and although a good deal of fun has been poked at the expedition for the time that the trip has taken, there is little question that the report which it will be able to present will be of public value.

It has, moreover, cut a path from Edmonton to the water stretch leading down to Dawson, that has already been utilized by prospectors passing in and out.

The Shoe Workers Strike.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 21.—At noon yesterday the indications were that the strike of lasters would not be so widespread nor so long lived as was at first feared. In addition to the several settlements made Monday, another was made yesterday forenoon, and more were expected at any time according to reports by the union officials. However, forty-three men quit the A. M. Horrod shops, and a few left the Field-Hazzard and D. W. Field factories today.

Twenty-six shops are affected. The union officials claim that twelve firms have made settlements.

Ballots for Volunteers.

Albany, Sept. 21.—The official ballot prepared by the secretary of state for the purpose of enabling the New York State Volunteers to vote at the coming fall elections is five feet eleven inches long and six inches wide. The ballot contains the titles of offices for which any elector may lawfully vote.

There are seventy-eight office titles on the ballot, divided as follows: State 7, judicial three, legislative three, county eighteen, city thirty-six, ward and town eleven.

Gen. Zurlinden Reappointed.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The cabinet council has reappointed General Zurlinden, who last week resigned from the cabinet because he disagreed with the majority of the ministers about the propriety of having a revision of the Dreyfus case, to the post of military governor of Paris, which he occupied previous to accepting the portfolio of the ministry of war.

Telegraphic Service at Santiago.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 21.—The United States transport Yucatan arrived here yesterday from Ponce, Porto Rico, having on board Captain Bradley of the Signal Service, who will be attached to the staff of General Wood and make preparations for the establishment of a telegraphic service in this province.

Shafter Goes Home

Camp Wikoff, Sept. 21.—General Shafter left on the nine o'clock train yesterday morning. He goes to his home in Michigan, to be present at the reunion of his old regiment. He will remain away about five days. This is the first time General Shafter has visited his home since the outbreak of the war.

Snow at Mt. Washington.

Mt. Washington, N. H., Sept. 21.—The first snow storm of the season on Mount Washington took place Monday night. There were snow drifts yesterday morning about the summit, accompanied by sleet and ice and a high wind. The thermometer registered 26 degrees above zero.

Invitation to the President.

San Francisco, Sept. 21.—The most influential commercial bodies in California have united in sending to President McKinley a telegraphic invitation to visit this state and city immediately after his contemplated visit to Omaha next month.

The Monitor Terror Reported.

Norfolk, a., Sept. 21.—The monitor Terror passed in the Virginia capes at noon yesterday, bound for the Norfolk navy yard, it is said, for repairs. She has lately been at Ponce, and wished to be reported "All well."

INVESTIGATION TALK

Commission to Meet the President on Saturday Next.

SEVEN MEMBERS SECURED

Believed That the Other Two Will Have Accepted Before the Time for the Conference. Gen. Alger Has Not Resigned Gen. McCook Mentioned.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The president announced yesterday that he had so far completed the commission to investigate the conduct of the war that he had invited the members to meet him for a conference at the White House on Saturday next with a view to beginning work next week.

Seven of the nine members have definitely accepted, and the president expressed himself yesterday as being confident of being able to secure the other two necessary to complete the quota by the time set for the conference. The names of the new men who have been invited to serve were not given out.

Secretary Gage and Attorney General Griggs were the only members of the cabinet at yesterday's meeting. The president suggested the necessity of giving early attention to annual department reports, saying that he desired to begin work on his message to Congress as soon as practicable. He talked with Secretary Gage at some length as to the lines of his report, but no information was given out concerning it.

After leaving the White House Secretary Gage said there was no foundation to the report that Secretary Alger had tendered his resignation.

Anson G. McCook Mentioned.

Washington, Sept. 21.—It is understood that General Anson G. McCook of New York will be the seventh member of the war investigating commission.

ARMY QUARTERMASTERS.

Complaint That They Have Been Unjustly Blamed.

Washington, Sept. 21.—The army quartermasters feel keenly the criticism directed against their corps and they are prepared to furnish some sensational evidence which transfers the responsibility and blame for many defects of the quartermaster's department to another branch.

They go further, and insist that Secretary Alger, Adjutant General Corbin and the departmental officers are at fault.

It is explained that orders to troops, transferring them from point to point, were issued in the early days of the war without due notice to quartermasters, who were concerned with clothing, supplies and transportation, or to subsistence officers, who had to do with provisions.

The result was that troops went to one camp, and their clothing and equipage and subsistence to another.

The involved systetm of army administration—the mass of "paper work"—which had been grown up in the long period of peace when officers had plenty of time for this business, proved overwhelming.

A regiment assigned to Chickamauga one day was ordered to Tampa the next; the first order would be furnished the quartermaster and subsistence officers, who would be forgotten for several days, when it came to the supplemental order.

Shipments therefore, would be started in all haste to the first named point, and no reserve material was on hand to supply the second point.

It was impossible always to overtake the first shipment, and there were consequently endless confusion and delay.

Strikers Attack Policemen'

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 21.—The first act of violence in connection with the street railway trouble in this city occurred Monday night, about ten o'clock when a car was stoned, and two policemen, while taking two strikers to the police station, were assailed by many missiles. Several windows were broken in the police station.

A squad of reserve officers was sent out and dispersed a mob of about two hundred men and boys, which, however, reassembled. Then the police made a second rush, used their clubs freely and put the crowd to flight.

After this all cars that ran were under police protection.

The Central Labor Union last night adopted resolutions condemning the railroad company, and other labor organizations in the city have passed similar measures.

The street railway officers have succeeded in obtaining ten new men to go to work.

Will Expel Anarchists

Budapest, Sept. 21.—The governor of this district has resolved to expel all Anarchists who are not citizens of Hungary.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—Six Italians were arrested in Barcelona yesterday on suspicion of having been connected with the assassination of the Empress of Austria at Geneva.

Eagle Captured

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 21.—George Belcher of Watchung avenue has a large American eagle confined in his hen coop at home, which was captured yesterday after a desperate encounter, in which three men fought against the ferocious courage of the great American bird to free itself from their grasp and fly away to freedom.

To Rest in Richmond, Va

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 21.—It has been decided that the body of Miss Winnie Davis, after a brief service here, will be forwarded to Richmond, Va., on the train leaving here at 10.10 o'clock Thursday morning. The journey should be completed at 9.05 a. m. Friday.

Odd Fellows Elect Officers.

Boston, Sept. 21.—Hon. Alfred S. Pinkerton of Worcester was yesterday unanimously elected grand sire of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F.

GOING HOME FROM PORTO RICO.

Spanish Soldiers Embark at San Juan. The Sick Go First.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Sept. 21.—The embarkation of the Spanish troops for Spain begins to-day, when 200 sick soldiers and 200 engineers will board the steamship which is expected to arrive from Havana en route for Spain.

The palace officers also report that two or three transports have sailed from Spain for San Juan. There was a great feeling of relief on both sides at the receipt of this news.

The evacuation of Lares, Aguadilla and San Sebastian occurred this morning at nine o'clock, our troops taking possession and raising the American flag, and the Spaniards retiring to Arecibo.

On Wednesday morning the Spanish will evacuate Viequez island, on the southeast coast, and the garrison will remain temporarily at Humacao. One company of our troops is already at Viequez island and another at Humacao.

The commissioners have agreed that it would be well to allow the soldiers on both sides to fraternize, and have also agreed that soldiers in pursuit of bandits may enter the opposing lines. This action wipes out the neutral zone, which has been a safeguard against the bad element, and is taken with a view of conserving good government in the island, in which both sides are interested, and as the result of depredations which have occurred between Ciales and Utuado.

The United States troops are now in possession of all the island save that part northeast of a line from Arecibo through Aibonite and Cayey to Humacao.

These places would be evacuated immediately but for the fact that there is no room for any more soldiers here. Every available sleeping place is now occupied.

Sickness continues among our troops but it is not increasing, and there are no malignant diseases.

General Brooke has ordered that every tent in the island must have a board floor.

KITCHENER IN FASHODA.

Report in London That the Egyptian Flag is Flying There

London, Sept. 21.—It is reported in government circles that news has been received that the Egyptian flag is flying over Fashoda.

The fact, however, has not been officially announced.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The Paris press generally holds the opinion that the settlement of the question of the occupation of Fashoda ought to be brought about through diplomacy and not by force of arms.

L'Eclair says it is in a position to prove false the report that Major Marchand has been recalled.

Le Matin believes that the British received timely information of the occupation of Fashoda through secret sources.

Le Gaulois does not believe that any trouble will grow out of the Fashoda affair, but feels certain that an amicable agreement will be reached by the two governments.

At the cabinet council yesterday M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, explained the foreign situation and communicated to the council full information in regard to the mission of Major Marchand in Africa.

The Powers Coolness to Turkey

Constantinople, Sept. 21.—The prominent persons in political circles here are discussing three salient features marking the situation of Turkey in regard to Crete, namely:

The action of Great Britain in ignoring the sultan; the cool reception accorded by the powers to the Turkish circulars, to neither of which has any one of the powers as yet replied, and the action of Great Britain in dispensing with the assistance of the other three powers in Crete.

The attitude of the English government has produced a deep impression in all circles.

Third Pool Strike Ends

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 21.—The big strike in the third pool, which has been waged for the past few weeks with so much bitterness among the miners, and which has been productive of several sensational incidents, has been settled.

The terms are rather unusual, but are entirely satisfactory to both sides, and are in the nature of a compromise.

Mr Gould's Assessment

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 21.—The state board of taxation has dismissed the complaint of the Somerset county board of freeholders against the assessments made in the county of Ocean.

It is understood that the board will make no further move in the matter, and the assessment against Mr. Gould, of $200,000 on his personal property, will stand.

Poisoned at a Sociable

Niles, Mich., Sept. 21.—Nearly one-tenth of the entire population of Plainwell, a little village in Allegan county, is ill from eating canned pressed beef at a church sociable.

Fifty-five persons were poisoned, 20 are dangerously ill and four are expected to die, the doctors having expressed no hope of their recovery.

Czar and Kaiser to Meet.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—The Tageblatt says that the Emperor of Russia will visit Dantzig on September 27 to take part in the ceremony of unveiling the monument to the Russian soldiers who fell there in the Polish war, upon which occasion he will meet the Emperor of Germany.

Rough Riders Horses Went Low.

New York, Sept. 21.—The mounts of the Rough Riders, over one thousand in number, were sold at the East 24th street stables of Fiss, Doerr and Carroll, yesterday. The lowest price reached was $9, the highest $77. The average for the entire lot was not above $20.

$2,000,000 in Gold Purchased

New York, Sept. 21.—Further purchases of gold in London have been announced in Wall street. Brown Bros. reported the engagement of $1,000,000, and Lazard Freres another million, making two million in all. The sales were made by the Bank of England.

Look Out for Silas.

Considering the fact that there is something like 700 delegates who will attend the Republican State convention tomorrow, the honor of sitting in the assemblage cannot be said to be a very distinctive one. There will be one man there, however, who will consider his credentials as a delegate to be a great feather in his cap. And he isn't a man who has had a dearth of celebrity in recent times either. He is none other than Silas D. Drake, irrepressible under every circumstance and boomer all the time. Most people will wonder, no doubt, how a man who has run the gamut of all sorts of sensations—from presiding at a National convention of mayors to having his testimonial and picture printed in a Paine's celery compound advertisement—could feel the slightest distinction in sharing an honor which every cross-roads politician in New Jersey can secure almost for the asking. But strange things happen every day in the year.

Mr. Drake will occupy a seat in the convention as an alternate delegate for W. W. Smalley of Bound Brook. But routine details of how he comes to be there are not essential. Throbbing details of why he wants to be there and what he proposes doing are the most important. Once upon a time, as the old story goes, Mr. Drake was engaged in booming a town between Plainfield and Elizabeth that possessed the poetic name of Lorraine. Now it happened that among the instruments which he used to attract attention to the town was a glorious Fourth of July celebration. That was in 1892, and in those days Foster Voorhees was not the important man he is today. Well, Silas likes Foster and he asked the curly-headed lawyer to deliver the oration of the day at the celebration. Voorhees consented. As everyone knows Si. Drake is not the man to stand on the dignity of the occasion, and after the present Acting-Governor had finished his patriotic peroration the redoubtable Silas ascended the platform and in an impromptu speech proposed Voorhees for Governor of New Jersey. Silas cheered his own sentiments to the echo and from that day to this the sage of Lincoln has claimed to be the great original Voorhees man of New Jersey. And knowing Silas as the man who does not hem and haw on formalities let it be known that Voorhees has been the Gubernatorial bee which has buzzed around Silas' hat all the time.

To sit in the State convention tomorrow and be able to cast a vote for Voorhees as the nominee for Governor will be the fulfillment of a cherished ambition for the Lincoln statesman. Perhaps the astute politicians, who like to have affairs arranged to a nicety, will try to stem the tide of Silas' enthusiasm in the convention, but we warn them to look out.

Silas is bound to be heard in the convention tomorrow.

Conflicting Trolley Laws.

The progress of the trolley through the rural districts of New Jersey has been watched with interest by many Plainfielders. Particularly interesting were the happenings in Piscataway township. Just at present the latest turn of events shows a conflict of township ordinances and State laws which is bound to be perplexing as the judiciary of the State has not yet given any opinion in the matter.

According to the township ordinances under which the franchise to the Brunswick Traction Company was given allowing them to pass through Piscataway township, it was necessary for the trolley line to be completed and to have its cars in operation six months after the granting of the franchise. The time expires tomorrow and the township authorities state that the franchise will be forfeited if the cars are not running. A reputable lawyer, well posted in trolley matters, has called the attention of The Daily Press to the fact that a statute recently passed by the State Legislature gives any trolley company two years in which to complete its lines. Another law says that any trolley line then building may have until January 1st, 1900, to complete its lines. Then there are several other law applying to trolley work.

The result is a general misunderstanding and the trolley companies of the State are not sure where they are standing. The township authorities claim that their ordinances are binding for the reason that they were accepted by the trolley corporations when the franchise was granted. It seems probable, however, that the Brunswick company will make no attempt to take advantage of the State laws but start the cars running between the site of the bridge near Bound Brook and Dunellen.

EMPEROR FRANZ JOSEF OF AUSTRIA.

Emperor Franz Josef has reigned fifty years. A jubilee celebration was to occur in December. It has been a sad reign, culminating in the assassination of Empress Elizabeth. She was the fifth of the emperor's family to meet a violent death. His only son, Rudolph, was found dead January 30, 1889, under suspicious circumstances.

Congressional Talk.

The New York Herald this morning printed the following gossip of the political situation in the Third and Eighth districts:

In the Third district the Republican convention is to be held next week, and Benjamin F. Howell, the present member of Congress, is to be put in nomination again. The Democrats talk of nominating former State Senator Keys, of Somerset.

Representative Fowler is sure of renomination by the Republicans of the Eighth district. The talk about the selection of Col. Charles W. Fuller, of Bayonne, in his stead is baseless. Col. Fuller has no idea of entering the race, and so announced publicly a few days ago. Some Bayonne folks who were not pleased with Mr. Fowler's selection of the Bayonne postmaster succeeded in getting up a little diversion against him at the primaries the other night, but it will go for nothing. Mr. Fowler accepted the man whom the city committee of Bayonne unanimously recommended for the appointment.

Fudge, Home News.

It has often been remarked by our citizens who have had opportunity to make comparisons, and by outsiders as well, that the New Brunswick daily newspapers are larger, newsier and more up-to-date generally than those of any other city of the same size in this State. There is no doubt about this being true.—New Brunswick Home News.

Fudge! Plainfield, so far as population goes, is in the same class with New Brunswick, but the newspapers of this city are away ahead of New Brunswick sheets in every detail. It don't require a critical eye, either, to see it.

General Nunez has appealed strongly to the government to assist the late insurgents, who have disarmed. No longer able to forage and live in the community, as is made possible in a state of war, thousands of these men are turned loose on a country unable to furnish facilities of work. It was feared that many of them would be forced to become bandits. The Cuban general asked that rations might be provided for a time and even hinted at payment for warlike services. The latter suggestion is of course preposterous. But these men to a large extent might be employed by government order. The crying needs of Cuba are good roads and the cleansing of cities, while doubtless other public works are also available for immediate undertaking. The disbanded insurgents might be employed in work of this nature until the revival of prosperity and business interests. Then they would be absorbed in the new industrial tide.

It is said that the regulars will not be dispersed to their western posts, but kept massed in the east, ready for quick mobilization in case of need. Uncle Sam's doughboys have been pretty well baked already, yet they are too well bred in discipline to kick or murmur.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

William R. Moore, of New street, is very proud of seven cotton plants that he has in his yard that are in full bloom. When his late son, Cyrus Moore, was in Virginia, he sent home some cotton seeds, and from them he has succeeded in raising the seven plants.

* * * * * *

City Judge George DeMeza is the owner of a cute little fox terrier, of which he is very fond. The dog goes by the name of "Rex," and is known to almost everyone who is acquainted with the Judge. Rex is too lively for his master, and seeks acquaintances outside his own home, so it is no unusual thing to meet the little dog in stores, on street corners, or far out in the country. He has a number of tricks which he can do to perfection, and these he seems willing to perform for the amusement of anyone. An interesting little story is told in connection with Rex and a well-known lawyer of this city. Rex is very fond of driving and is never happier than when perched up on the seat of a trap alongside his master. This lawyer, one day, drove to Pluckamin. On his arrival he drove up to a friend's house, when out jumped Rex. The lawyer was surprised to see the dog, for he had never noticed his being there, but made a young lady of the house a present of the dog. What was his surprise a few days afterwards to meet the City Judge and with him was the dog which had been given away. Explanations followed, then it was found out that Rex had made his way home from Pluckamin on foot.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 21—William H. Terry is spending the day in New York.

John Fenner and Robert Craig have returned from their vacation spent in East Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania, and elsewhere.

The vacant lot next to W. H. Cole's coal yard is being used as storage ground for the fine stone being spread over North avenue.

Frank Elliot has returned to his home in Brooklyn after spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Day.

Miss Sarah Ace, of East Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. George Craig.

Miss Beck, who has been visiting Mrs. J. E. Low, has returned to her home in Elizabeth.

Several candidates were initiated into the Daughters of Liberty Monday night.

Mrs. E. A. Ames, of Forrest City, Pa., is visiting Mrs. W. J. Hamilton.

John Peters, Jr., of New York, is visiting his father, John Peters, Sr.

Mrs. Lottie Taylor has been the guest of her aunt at Bayonne.

Newton Hendershut, of Lebanon, is visiting John Emery.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of the Daily Press.)

New Market, September 21.—One of Abner Coriell's coal wagons broke down yesterday on Front street, Plainfield. The wagon was heavily loaded with coal which had to be transferred to another wagon and taken to its destination.

Miss Edna Smalley, who has been visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Nelson, has returned to her home at South Orange.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, September 21—Wheelmen who have occasion to use Front street after dark complain of the reckless driving of some of the hay carters upon their return from Newark. Some of them stop at every roadhouse on the road, and by the time they reach Scotch Plains they have about as big a load of whiskey aboard as they had of hay on their down trip. This has the effect of making them feel as if they owned the road, and they either drive at a furious gait or else fall asleep on their wagons and let the team go alone to the great danger of not only wheelmen but of other vehicles. Something should be done to abate this nuisance before some bad accident occurs.

Roger Haskard, who has been suffering from a broken wrist for several weeks, the result of a fall from his wheel, was able to resume his position in New York Monday.

Samuel Allen, of New York, was the guest Saturday and Sunday of his mother, Mrs Daniel Allen.

Miss Barbara Zaengle, of Brooklyn, was the guest Saturday and Sunday of Miss Minnie Hosinger.

George L. Dunn spent Monday along the banks of the Passaic in search of the wily bass.

Cory Johnson started Monday upon a short business trip through New York State.

Miss Louisa Barr is entertaining Miss Marsh, of Long Island, for a few days.

Miss Ivy Marsh is recovering from a severe attack of sore throat.

PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germ of certain decay and death.

In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists Ptomaines), are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion of dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass which ferments (the first process of decay) poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak, and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

Poor digestion poisons the kidneys, causing Bright's disease and diabetes.

And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion.

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptognic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first.

A little book on stomach diseases mailed free. Address Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. 9 19-21-23

The marriage of Miss Hangliter, of the West End, to Adam Angerbauer, of East Third street, will take place next Thursday evening at 7:30 at Hope chapel.

Miss Slorah, daughter of Robert Slorah, of Morris avenue, will be married to James A. Cullinen, Wednesday evening, September 28th, at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. W. C. Nelson and wife are attending a marriage today in one of the churches at Haverstraw, N. Y, and then will visit among his former parishioners for a few days.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

A NEGRO CROESUS.

Astonishing Rise to Riches and Power of a Former Alabama Slave.

The richest and most powerful man socially and politically in the Republic of Guatemala is John Knight, a negro, who was born a slave in Alabama and who was sold from the public slave block as late as March, 1860.

Knight was an exceptionally bright boy. He never saw his father, who was sold into a distant State before he was born. The family to whom Knight belonged gave him an education, and at the age of sixteen the boy was sold for $1,600, a high price, considering that the sale occurred in November, 1860, the very time of Lincoln's election.

Knight remained with the family of his new master until the close of the war. In common with thousands of other slaves, he then declared his freedom. He walked to New Orleans, and for the first time in his life went away from his master's properties. In New Orleans he worked as a wharf laborer for a firm which handled fruits from Central America. He saved his money. Everyone about the wharves knew John Knight, the most capable and industrious colored man there. One day in June, 1866, he was sent by his employer down to Yucatan, in Central America, to live there as boss of the packing and shipping of fruits to New Orleans. He had $20 a week salary.

That was practically the beginning of John Knight's millions. He lived in Yucatan a year, worked hard, saved his every cent, and dreamed of the day when he could have an orange, banana and pineapple shipper on his own account. Having heard of the great tracts of free and fertile fruit lands south of San Christoval in Gautemala, he went and located there. A live, wide-awake person was something unique in those days in that region of siestas and tropical sunshine. A revolution, in which Ramon Sanchez had been deposed, was just as its close.

John Knight saw what hard work and an opportunity to gain the favor of the new administration would do for himself. He proposed that for a concession of some 50,000 acres of land suitable for pineapple and banana growing he would go to New Orleans and get the wholesale fruit dealers, who ruled the American market thirty years ago, to agree to buy $2,000,000 a year of Guatemala fruits. The Guatemala Government gladly accepted the proposition. In less than three months the deal was consummated at New Orleans. It was the beginning of the trade of millions of dollars annually.

To make a long story short, John Knight got other concessions, as he demonstrated the profit there was in growing fruits for the United States markets. The shipping business to New York and San Francisco was started and enormously enlarged.

He married a native young woman in Stapa in 1872, and the union has been a great help to his fortunes. About twenty years ago he induced New England capital to embark extensively in coffee growing in Guatemala, and he invested over $150,000 of his own capital in the industry. The Government gave him a very advantageous shipping concession for his efforts in bringing capital to the country. Coffee growing proved wonderfully renumerative for a dozen years. At one time the annual shipments of coffee from the Knight fincas were the largest from any private estate in all Central America.

The negro planter branched out in other directions. He went to Philadelphia and contracted to furnish many thousands of feet of mahogany yearly for ten years. Then he bought up tracts of mahogany trees in Nicaragua and Guatemala. At one time he was the second largest dealer in mahogany in the world. Everything he touched he made a success.

He lives in royal style in the suburbs of Guatemala City. No one in that region except the Barrios ever entertained so lavishly as Don Knight and his wife. Their home is a large modern house of plate glass windows, polished woods, costly hangings—all furnished from New York and New Orleans. A small army of servants attends the wants of the family.—New York Journal.

Pirate of Salt Water Fish.

The greatest enemy to the best species of fish is found in the vicious, voracious, and dangerous bluefish. In size, ordinarily as long as your arm, with teeth like barbs, he can snap in halves a fish of his own size, and nearly all fish stand in mortal dread of him. Generally traveling in schools—sometimes as much as five miles in length—they will in short order decimate a school of shad, spot, menhaden or such like. In his stomach can be found numbers of smaller fish, according to size. One was opened which contained a trout of almost his own size, while another contained a shad nearly as large. Still others are found having within themselves one or more of their own species of smaller size. But their destructiveness does not end here. They will follow a school of shad, spot, mackerel and cod, snapping and slashing their prey until the water is all afoam. They eat until they can hold no more, but their viciousness is not abated. With a snap a shad is sundered and spit out, and the next shares the same fate. They never tire, and the fish destroyed, but uneaten, cover the surface of the water.

Without question the bluefish is by far the greatest factor to be reckoned with, considering the preservation of our food fishes. But man's effort seems to be futile in his extinction or banishment. Nets will not hold him, and only the stoutest line (for he is "game" in every sense of the word), protected with metal about the hook, will withstand his vicious snapping.—Richmond Dispatch.

ILLEGIBLE WRITING.

Some Eminent Men Who Wrote Remarkably Bad Manuscript.

Carlyle would not have struggled with a keyboard, but it would have prevented that miserable compositor fleeing from Edinburgh to London out of his way if he had. Carlyle's, however, was a copper plate to others that could be mentioned. Hugo's manuscripts, we are told, presented the appearance of a sort of battle field on paper, in which the killed words were well stamped out and the new recruits pushed forward in anything but good order. Napoleon was unique in everything, even in his handwriting. His letters from Germany to Josephine were at first taken for maps of the seat of war. And his signature was an indistinguishable hieroglyphic. Byron and Dean Stanley wrote atrocious "fitsts," and it is said that Sydney Smith's was no better, although he used to chaff Jeffrey badly. He used to say that he read Jeffrey from left to right, and his wife from right to left, but neither could make out a syllable. Jules Janin would rather rewrite than attempt to read over again what he had written, and Montaigne could never read what he had written. The acute thinker mended matters by employing a secretary, whose writing was absolutely undecipherable. Balzac was as big a sinner, and Dickens's microscopic characters, written on blue paper with blue ink, appalled many seasoned compositors. A terrible hand had Henry Ward Beecher. His daughter once declared that she had three guiding rules in copying it—if a letter was dotted it was not an "i," and if it was crossed it was not a "t," and a word with a capital letter did not begin a sentence. Jacob Bryan said of Archdeacon Coxe's caligraphy that it could neither be called a hand nor a fist, but a foot, and that a club one. His hieroglyphics formed a clumsy, tangled black skein that ran across the paper in knots, which it was impossible to unite into a meaning.—London Globe.

FATHER OF FORTY-ONE CHILDREN.

Levi Bradshaw of Connecticut the Banner Father and Grandfather of the Country

A short ride from Moosup in what is known as the Sparks district, in the eastern part of Killingly, lives Levi Bradshaw, whose record for populating the earth is such that he deserves to become famous. Bradshaw emigrated from Canada, and has lived in that vicinity about thirteen years. He is now in his seventy-first year. He has been married three times and he is the father of forty-one children, forty of whom are now living. By his first wife he had six children, including a pair of twins. His second wife bore him twenty-four children, half of whom were twins. His present wife presented him with eleven children.

Bradshaw was not 14 years old when he married the first time. The eldest son is now 44 and has several children and grandchildren. Twenty-nine of the old man's sons and daughters are married and all have children. The grandfather does not know just how large his family of grandchildren and great-grandchildren has become. He can enumerate up to 150, but is in the dark as to the remainder. He estimates that they may run up to 200 or so.

The Killingly patriarch married his last wife in Danielson thirteen years ago. Only one out of her eleven children has died. The rest are healthy and robust, like the father. Mr. Bradshaw is believed to be the banner father of New England and the banner grandfather of the United States.—New London, Conn., Day.

PATAGONIAN MARKSMANSHIP.

Can Kill Water Fowls Afloat 200 Yards Distance.

The Yahgans live nearer to the South Pole than any other known people. They occupy certain small islands lying south of Terra del Fuego, and are found also on the south beach of that great island itself. The territory they occupy is a maze of mountain peaks, and the conditions under which they exist are almost beyond realization by a civilized person.

The typical weapon of the Yahgans is the rawhide sling, with which they are able to kill water fowl afloat at 200 yards. To hit any bird at that distance would be called right good shooting. They can knock down and stun a guanaco with a heavy round pebble up to a hundred years. The reason for the sling as a tool of destruction is found in the fact that the Yahgans live on the beaches, where plenty of round pebbles are always at hand. These islanders try out oil from whale blubber and store it for future use in the bladderlike leaves of a kind of seaweed found everywhere in that region.—Boston Transcript.

What Would Mither Say.

A poor old Scotsman, who could no longer till his "wee bit land," was obliged to accept the kindly proffered hospitality of some English friends. On the day of his arrival they, thinking he would enjoy it, procured some cress, which was added to the luxuries already on the table. The poor man, accustomed all his life to fare of the plainest kind, hesitated to partake of such a decided novelty as cress, and was induced to try it only by fear of hurting his hostess' feelings. In a short time she noticed that tears were coursing down Andrew's cheeks, and inquiry elicited this reply:

"I'm thinking what ma puir mither would say gin she could see her son eating grass like a coo!"

He—I'd give up my life for you. She—Would you really give up the life you are living?—Boston Courier.

TO FACE CANNONS.

American Horses That Are Best Suited for Purposes of War.

In the midst of the attention we are giving to the personnel of our armies there is a feature not less important than the feeding and the physical condition of the men, and which we are apt to overlook. It is the condition and training of the army horse. Horses are almost as necessary an adjunct to a successful war as are men.

With the exception of carriage horses for use on the boulevards of large cities, and of race horses—of which class we probably breed the fastest in the world—we have run behind other nations in the production of good and serviceable horses. This was because having such splendid railroad and electric facilities, we have had less need for horses than other people. One of the results of our new expansive policy will be to enlist public interest in the cavalry horse; for while we may have soldiers and a navy that can beat the world, without strong and speedy horses capable of covering a march and capturing a position by a dash, we cannot be fully equipped as a nation.

The effect of quick-firing guns will be to reduce the relative efficiency of cavalry, and of infantry from those of the olden time, but nevertheless the horses will still be a powerful factor in war. The style of horse needed in the army is that known in the older countries as the hunting horse, an animal with enormous chest, clean limbs, heavy loins, deep quarters and free moving action. Such a horse when well-groomed and bred will carry a mount of 150 pounds across country at an excellent riding pace for the space of five or six hours, and will be comparatively fit and fresh for a prolonged march at the close.

Hunters thus trained in the field to rough work, make excellent army horses. Not being much accustomed to the delights of the chase in this busy country, we have not developed the European type of hunting horse; but he is coming.

The best type of the American horse for use in the army, now comes from Kentucky, and from the neighboring mountainous states. It is claimed by some that the small, "chunky" horse is far better fitted for transporting cannon than horses of finer proportions and of greater weight and frame.

It was the need of horses of such endurance and powers which more than anything else defeated Napoleon's campaign upon Moscow.

The Russians were convinced of this, and when some of them saw a French gun at the base of an ice-covered mole with the horses that drew it, lying with broken limbs beside it, because Napoleon had omitted to bring horse-nails, they exclaimed with joy: "God made Napoleon forget that there is a winter in this country."

The great purposes of horses in war are to transport guns, to carry the soldiers, to protect them in case of a charge and to furnish food to the army in case of famine. Many a soldier has protected his own life fighting an enemy from behind the dead body of his horse, and when a retreating force was cut off from its base of supplies, an army was often provisioned by the sutler's forces returning to the scene of defeat and cooking the horses that were killed in battle.

And in the Sioux campaign of 1876 General Crook was so hard pressed for food that he had to kill some of the horses, the command subsisting on the meat for several days.

The well-trained cavalry horse fights some upon his own account. He rears upon his hind legs and strikes venomously with his forelegs at the sight of an enemy whose colors he knows nearly as well as those of his master. In a charge of infantry the horse being so much larger, offers a greater target than the rider whose chest is protected by the erect neck and head of his gallant steed. Horses thus save the lives of the men, and few phases of war are better calculated to inspire terror in unmounted troops than a desperate advancing charge of cavalry at close quarters, with dust flying and hoofs clanging, and the discharge of carbines keeping music to the war-like neighing of stallions on full gallop. The skirmishes during the Peninsular war were mostly of this character, and the Duke of Wellington used to say that a man and his horse thus equipped, were equivalent to five infantry soldiers, though since the introduction of repeating rifles the proportions of Wellington's time are sadly altered now.

It is somewhat sad to state that despite all the uses of horses in war, and notwithstanding the great exposure of this noble animal to danger in case of battle, statistics show the death of a greater proportion of horses from disease, neglect or starvation than from actual slaughter in action. Want of food, want of water and want of rest, the common misfortune of every campaign, kills over fifty per cent. of the horses; and overwork, disease and exposure destroy a far larger proportion than are actually killed in war. If these good people who spend their nights dreaming about the parliament of Man and the federation of the world, would devote some of their spare energy to enforcing the plainest dictates of humanity in the cases of dishonest army contractors the peace societies would do much to mitigate the horrid treatment of horses in war, and accomplish some real good. Even in times of peace the mortality amongst horses for cavalry and artillery purposes is very large. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, Uncle Sam lost 1,061 cavalry and artillery horses out of a total of 6,531; and this percentage which is very large would be much greater in war times, as owing to the excitement which occurs the horse sometimes suffers incredible tortures from want of food, rest and water.

HAWTHORNE GAVE UP EVANGELINE.

Tried to Write a Novel on the Incidents but Was Unsuccessful.

"Few people know that Hawthorne came near publishing 'Evangeline,' which Longfellow finally wrote," said a Massachusetts gentleman, the other day, "but it is a fact. A few years ago there died in Salem, Mass., an old gentleman named Horace Ingersoll, who was not related to Bob Ingersoll, but who was a wonderful man in his way. Years and years ago Horace Ingersoll heard the story of 'Evangeline' from a woman friend of his who had been spending some time in Nova Scotia. One day the old gentleman, who was a personal friend of both Hawthorne and Longfellow, was dining at Longfellow's home in Cambridge, and Hawthorne was there also. After dinner Ingersoll told to the two writers the story of 'Evangeline,' and Hawthorne decided then and there that he would make a novel of it. He wrote a few chapters and then gave it up in despair, because he found that the subject was too grand for his prosaic pen. So Ingersoll gave Longfellow permission to use the narrative, and under his poetic touch it blossomed into one of the masterpieces of literature. I knew Ingersoll personally and he told me of the circumstance only a few months before his death. And, by the way, it is worthy of mention that Ingersoll died in the house in which Hawthorne lived for many years."—Washington Post.

CHAPTER XIX.

Poor Lilac felt that, if she remained a moment longer listening to the cruel words that came from her ladyship's lips, she would be unable to keep her enforced calm from breaking down, and she shrank with terror from the very idea of exhibiting any emotion in the old lady's presence. It was not until she had shut herself in her boudoir and locked the door, that her proud self-control gave way, and, falling upon her knees by the side of the couch, she sobbed bitterly.

The unrestrained tears gave her considerable relief, and, when, in half an hour's time she rose and bathed her face, she felt able to think clearly over what Lady Garth had said. There was nothing new in what she had suggested, nothing that had not come into Lilac's own doubting mind. It was this fact that made her ladyship's remarks so disturbing. All the doubts that one by one Roy's sweetheart had put behind her as unjust to her lover were brought simultaneously to life again by Lady Garth's words, and the peace which had come to her during the last few days, and which was due chiefly to the long, tender and sympathetic letters she had received from the mines, was dissipated in an instant. Everything had to be pondered again in the light of her ladyship's opinion.

The most distressing thought was that she had come between Roy and Evangeline. If all that Lady Garth had said was true, that her presence alone was preventing the happy marriage of the two people she loved, then she need have no hesitation in deciding what course to take, although the taking of it would destroy all her own hopes of happiness. But, in spite of her ladyship's assertion, it was difficult to imagine that Evangeline, if her "Robin Adair" were really Roy, could have deceived her so well. Lilac walked about the room debating the point.

If she could only go to Evangeline and ask her the question which it was of such importance to her piece of mind to have answered! Twice she unlocked her door with the intention of going to her friend's room, on the chance that, in spite of the lateness of the hour, she might find her still awake; but each time she turned back and locked it again, thinking how unlikely it was that she would obtain an answer from Evangeline that would quite satisfy her doubts. However much the heiress loved her cousin, it was difficult to imagine her admitting the fact to the girl who was to become his wife; and to deny her love would be as natural even to the most truthful of women that Lilac was obliged to acknowledge to herself that no amount of denial on Evangeline's part would really satisfy her. It seemed incredible, but it was exasperatingly true, that in the same house with her was the only person who could answer the question that tortured her, that this person was her friend, and full of the deepest sympathy and affection for her, and yet it was impossible to extract from her an answer which would decide her doubts one way or the other.

Perhaps if she asked her, Evangeline would tell her his name, and then all her fears on that score would be at an end. Flushed and excited at the thought, the distraught girl unlocked her door once more and crept noiselessly in the direction of Evangeline's room.

Midnight was chiming from the clock in the turret, and the darkness and silence of the house told her that everybody had retired for the night. She scarcely dared to hope that she would find her friend awake. She knocked very gently, therefore at her bed-room door when she reached it, and her heart sank when there was no answer. The hope that one word from Evangeline might set all her doubts at rest was such an exciting one, and she had been building upon it so much, that she was very reluctant to go back and wait till morning for her conversation with the heiress. Consequently, when no answer came to her second knock, she pushed open the door gently, and walked across the dark room to the side of the bed, to call Evangeline's name in a whisper.

"Evangeline, dear, are you awake? It is I—Lilac."

There was no reply, and something in the apearance of the dimly seen bed made Lilac put her hand to the pillow. The bed was empty!

She was just beginning to wonder what could possibly have become of her friend, for the dressing-room beyond, like the bed-room, was in complete darkness, when the sound of low sobbing reached her ears from the inner room, the door of which was ajar. Lilac paused, with her hand still upon the pillow, undecided as to what she should do. Her first idea was to retire as quietly as she had come; but the sound of Evangeline's sobbing was so full of anguish that Lilac could not go away without trying to comfort her and help her to bear whatever grief it was that seemed to be breaking her heart.

She crossed quickly into the dressing room, where, in the moonlight that streamed through the uncurtained window, she could see Evangeline kneeling against the old-fashioned window seat, her face in her hands, her body shaken by her sobs. So lost was she in her grief that she did not notice her friend's entrance until Lilac had thrown herself upon her knees by her side and placed her arm around her waist.

"It is I—Lilac," she said, afraid of startling her.

But Evangeline showed little surprise.

"I thought everybody was asleep long ago," she responded. Her voice sounded strangely calm after the abandonment of grief of a moment before.

Lilac kissed her tenderly.

"I could not sleep, and came to talk to you, she said, still kneeling by her side in the moonlight. "Can you not let me share your trouble, darling, whatever it is?"

For the moment she had forgotten her own perplexities and the question she had come to ask, but she remembered it when Evangeline answered, in her quiet resigned voice—

"No, dear, I cannot talk about it. It is a foolishness that I shall conquer some day, although it is very hard to have to do so."

The fact that she was so anxious for her own sake to know what Evangeline's "foolishness" was made Lilac afraid to invite her confidence. It seemed to her as if her sympathy was not sympathy at all, but only a selfish curiosity; and she was glad when her friend went on without questioning. She had risen from her knees and was leaning against the woodwork of the window, so that the light no longer fell upon her face.

"I should value your sympathy, dear," she said; "but my trouble is about somebody that I ought not even to think of, because it seems that he never cared for me, although I felt sure that he did. I thought that it was only my horrible money which made him hesitate to tell me so, and, if he had not gone away, I might have said some think to show him that I returned his affection. But evidently he never cared for me. I do not know why I was so sure of his love, because he never said a word of love to me, and I hate and despise myself for having given him my heart. So please do not ask me any more questions, Lilac dear!"

Lilac did not ask any more. She thought they were unnecessary. It seemed to her that every word the heiress spoke must refer to Roy; and, when Evangeline showed by an abrupt change in the conversation and of manner that her secret was to be once more locked up securely in her own breast, Miss Garth wondered at the solemnity with which Lilac kissed her and bade her "Good-night," saying, as she left her—

"Do not be unhappy, dear! Perhaps Robin Adair loves you after all, and only a temporary cloud has made you doubt it. You are too sweet and noble, I think, for Heaven to deny you your heart's desire.'

Poor Lilac! She did not think of her own sweetness and nobility of character.

She went back to her own room, feeling that it would be a relief to her feelings to weep as Evangeline had done; but she was unable to shed a tear. Indeed it seemed to her that she was an interloper, and that she had done a great wrong ever to let Roy speak to her of love. But for her everything would have gone smoothly in his life and Evangeline's; and she had come between them, to delude him, or by her helplessness work upon his Quixotic generosity until he thought that he loved her. He could never have guessed that Evangeline Garth cared for him as she did, the heiress could hide her real feelings so well! His life had been spoiled, Lilac told herself, by her becoming part of it before he had realized his own true feelings for his cousin; and, as she began mechanically to undress, she said to herself that, for his sake as well as Evangeline's, she must have no share in his life again.

While undressing she came across the two letters Roy had written her from Nevada, which she always carried in the bosom of her gown, and she sat down at the reading lamp in her boudoir to read them through once more. As she read, the calm apathy of a despairing determination gave place in her mind to a war of perplexing thoughts. For it was hard to go through the letters and doubt that the writer loved her with his whole heart, as he claimed to do; and, if Roy really loved her with the one love of his life, as he said, she felt that no sense of duty could call upon her to give him up, and that no sacrifice she could make would be able to bring back happiness to the girl she loved more than herself.

Did Roy love her as he said he did, or were his assurances only part of his generosity, as Lady Garth called it? This was the question which troubled his sweetheart all night long, and she felt that she could do nothing to decide it until Roy himself came home. She wondered how she would be able to bear the suspense of waiting.

Lilac's suspense did not last so long as she had anticipated. On the morning after her eventful interview with Lady Garth and Evangeline, she slept far beyond her usual hour. She had fallen into a deep sleep shortly before daybreak, worn out by the mental excitement through which she had passed and, when she opened her eyes, it was to find the broad daylight streaming through the window.

A slight rustling sound attracted her attention, and turning her head, she caught sight of Evangeline stealing on tiptoe towards the door. Evangeline stopped when she found that Lilac was awake.

"I hope I have not disturbed you," she said. "I wanted you to sleep till luncheon-time, if you could, after being up so late last night. We had breakfast long ago; so I will send yours up here, and you need not disturb yourself just yet."

"Oh, I am wide awake!" said Lilac, wondering whether this bright and animated Evangeline was the same girl who, a few hours before, had been sobbing her heart out over her hopeless love, or whether she had not dreamed it all. "Do you want me?"

Evangeline smiled more brightly.

"No; I crept in to prepare you for a surprise when you rose; but pray do not hurry. It is only a letter from Roy which you will find on your dressing-table, with such wonderful news! He wrote to aunt Gwen at the same time, so at present I know more about the young man than you do." She stood in the doorway, and had to raise her voice to finish the sentence, for Lilac had already disappeared into her dressing-room in search of the precious epistle from her lover.

Evangeline, guessing that she would like to be quite alone, ran down-stairs to discuss her cousin's expected return with his mother. For the letters her ladyship and Lilac had received were the two which Sir Roy had dispatched on the eve of his departure from the Seven Cent mines—the letters which he had written while in such doubt and perplexity with regard to his little "prairie-flower's" love.

"Isn't it glorious," said Evangeline, as she ran into the morning-room and threw her arms about the old lady's still slender waist, "to think that in two days at most we shall see Roy again? It seems too good to be true. I cannot think how you can keep from skipping about, auntie!"

Lady Garth answered without enthusiasm.

"Of course it will be a great pleasure to see my boy again after his long absence."

"You speak as though you were rather sorry than otherwise, aunt Gwen," said Evangeline; and her ladyship rejoined coldly—

"Well, I cannot help thinking that perhaps it would have been better if Roydon had adhered to his original intention of remaining another month abroad."

"You would like to wait another month for him? What for, auntie, pray?"

"Well, my dear, it would have given him a longer interval in which to get over his foolish infatuation for Miss Marvel. I fear from Roydon's sudden determination that he may still be under the spell which has been cast over him. If he had stayed away a little longer, he might have got clear of it."

"My dear aunt Gwen, they will make a very suitable couple, and already I love Lilac almost as much as I love Roy."

"You admit that you love him, then?" questioned her ladyship quickly; and Evangeline answered without reserve—

"Yes, auntie, very much—but not as you wish me to love him, thank goodness! If you will not rejoice with me over the dear fellow's home-coming, I must go and rejoice with Lilac."

She found, however, when she ran up-stairs full of excitement, that Lilac's door was closed; and, when she tapped at it, the only answer she received was a few words from Lilac within saying that she was busy. Evangeline went away wondering.

"Here is Roy coming home," she said to herself ruefully, "and the two people who ought to love him best the information seems to have sent into the dumps!"

She would have wondered more if she could have entered the room and seen Lilac's pale face full of a despairing anguish.

Poor Lilac! The letter which she had torn open with such delighted anticipation had come as a cruel blow to her. Her lover unfortunately had given no hint of the report he had received from Major Emmott or of the confusion it had brought to his mind, and under the effect of which he had written; and the sudden change of its tone from that of his previous letters seemed to the poor girl who loved him so well capable of only one explanation. Roy had discovered that he did not love her. She suspected even that he was hastening his return in order to tell her so; and her pride as well as her unselfish devotion to him and Evangeline urged her to leave Delverton Hall before his arrival. When Evangeline knocked at the door of her room, she was busy packing the smaller of her two travelling trunks.

The thought had occurred to her that it would be fairer to await the Baronet's arrival, and postpone all action until she had given him an opportunity of saying whether he cared for her or not; but she dismissed the thought as soon as it came. How could she trust herself to meet him? How could she be sure that she would not break down, and, by showing the intensity of her love, appeal once more to the "Quixotic generosity" which had probably made him first suggest that she should be his wife? To leave Roy quite free to follow the dictates of his heart, she must be no longer dependent upon him for a home; he must feel that she was not suffering in any way from her action in helping him to escape from Deadman's Gulch. If she appealed no further to his pity, he would be as free as if he had never met her to marry Evangeline whose love he must appreciate sooner or later at its true worth; and Lilac went on industriously with her packing, her hands shaking a little as she folded her dresses and her face white as death. All the time her thoughts were busy as to what she should do.

At first her only idea had been to get away from Delverton Hall and hide herself in the great world of which she knew so little; but the more she thought of Roy the more clearly it began to dawn upon her how futile her plan would be to make him feel that the responsibility of her welfare was removed from his shoulders. However much his infatuation for her had dwindled away, Sir Roydon Garth was not the man to let a girl to whom he was indebted disappear from his sight without knowing whether she was provided for. There would be no rest for him until he heard that she was independent of his help. Almost in despair Lilac suspended her packing as she realised how certain it was that by running away she would only give the Baronet the additional trouble of looking for her. She must avoid that at all cost; and, with a sudden inspiration, she sat down to write her last letter to the man she loved.

Evangeline knocked again while she was thus engaged, and this time Lilac rose to unlock the door.

"What a hermit you are, dear! I have been dying to rejoice with you over the good news," began the heiress impulsively; and then she saw the signs of packing. She noticed, too that Lilac was wearing her serge travelling dress.

"You are surely not thinking of going to Liverpool to meet Roy?" she exclaimed in surprise; and Lilac answered quietly—

"No. I am going to Liverpool, but not for that. I wish you would order the brougham for me, so that I can catch the afternoon train."

"But, my dear girl, Roy may be home to-day, for all we know, and therefore would miss you."

"I know," said Lilac, as quietly and coldly as before. "I do not wish to meet Roy, dear."

"You do not wish to meet Roy!" Evangeline could not believe her ears. "Aren't you going to marry him?" she exclaimed incredulously. And Lilac shook her head as she answered almost in a whisper—

"No. I have decided to marry somebody I met on board the Gemini—Mr. Mark Mowbray."

(TO BE CONTINUED.

GLADSTONE AS A BOY.

"Master Willie's" Opinion Generally of Most Account in the Family.

John Gladstone, the father of the great statesman of Great Britain, liked that his children should exercise their judgment by stating the why and wherefore of every opinion they offered and a college friend of William's, who visited him during the summer of 1829, furnishes amusing pictures of the family customs in that house, "where the children and their parents argued upon everything." They would debate as to whether the trout should be boiled or broiled, whether a window should be opened, and whether it was likely to be fine or wet the next day. It was always perfectly good-humored, but curious to a stranger because of the care which all of the disputants took to advance no propositions, even to the prospects of a rain, rashly.

One day Thomas Gladstone knocked down a wasp with his handkerchief, and was about to crush it on the table, when the father started the question as to whether he had the right to kill the insect; and this point was discussed with as much seriousness as if a human life had been at stake. When at last it was adjudged that death was deserved, because it was a trespasser in the drawing-room, a common enemy and a danger there, it was found that the insect had crawled from under the handkerchief and was flying away with a sniggering sort of buzz, as if to mock them all.

On another occasion William Gladstone and his sister Mary disputed as to where a certain picture ought to be hung. An old Scotch servant came in with a ladder, and stood irresolute while the argument progressed; but as Miss Mary would not yield, William gallantly ceased from speech, though unconvinced, of course. The servant then hung up the picture where the young lady ordered; but when he had done this, he crossed the room and hammered a nail into the opposite wall. He was asked why he did this.

"Aweel, miss, that'll do to hang the picture on when ye'll have come round to Master Willie's opeenion."

The family generally did come round to William's opinion, for the resources of his tongue-fencing were wonderful, and his father, who admired a clever feint as much as a straight thrust, never failed to encourage him by saying, "Hear, hear! Well said! Well put, Willie!" if the young debator bore himself well in the encounter.

Why Good Swimmers Are Drowned.

The sudden drowning of a good swimmer is not due to a cramp, as generally supposed. There is no reason, says a high medical authority, why cramp in a leg should prevent an ordinary swimmer supporting himself in the water by his hands or on his back or cause him to throw up his hands and sink once for all like a stone. The explanation is that the drum of the ear is perforated and the pressure of water causes vertigo and unconsciousness.—Atlanta Constitution.

Not the Qualities.

Ned—If you want to marry an heiress, why don't you propose to Miss Elderly? She's rich.

Ted—Yes, but I object to her past.

Ned—Why, I thought that was above reproach.

Ted—It is; but there's so much of it.

"I have heard that she walks in her sleep," said the gossip.

"Indeed," returned Mrs. Parvenue scornfully. "So common, isn't it? I should think she would ride.—Chicago

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Preparations for the football season are now going on among the Rutgers College athletes who have arrived at New Brunswick for the fall term. There will be plenty of good material in the freshman class, and with last year's players who will return a strong team should be the result. A training table will be established this year for the first time. For years it has been the custom for Rutgers to play the opening game of the season with Princeton. The contest has of late years been so onesided that Rutgers has dropped Princeton from her schedule this year. The schedule of games as completed is as follows: September 28th, Lehigh at South Bethlehem; October 8th, Swarthmore at Swarthmore; October 12th, Stevens at Hoboken; October 15th, New York University at New York; October 22d, Hartford at New Brunswick; October 26th, New York University at New Brunswick; October 29th, Union at Albany.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Charles H. Dunham, of Central avenue, and G. E. Stillman, of West Seventh street, left Sunday morning on their annual wheeling tour. They will visit the Gettysburg battlefield and the Shenandoah Valley.

The last bicycle run of the season of the Y. M. C. A. cycling squad will be held tomorrow night. The secretary of the Orange Association has invited all the members of the Northern New Jersey League to a reception at that place, and Plainfield ought to be well represented. Captain Cuming will pilot all who will go.

Entries closed yesterday for the race meet of the Riverdale Field Club at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon. Besides almost all of the well-known local riders, there will be a number of contestants from neighboring towns. The races will begin at 2:30 o'clock sharp. The admission fee will be 25 cents. Ladies will be charged 15 cents. Wheels will be checked free.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the First Church of Christ of this city, is said to be a good speaker and well informed on all topics of the day. He has devoted some time to the incidents of the late American-Spanish war, and is fully prepared to give an interesting and doubtless instructive description of the pictures and views to be exhibited at Stillman Music Hall tomorrow night by Prof. B. Benton Parker, of Schnectady, N. Y. The pictures and views number in the neighborhood of 200 and are said to be most perfect. Reserved seats can be obtained at box office.

Al. Reeves and his famous big company of white and colored performers appear at Music Hall Saturday night and present a bill of great merit and amusement. There are over 50 people in the company and include some of the best-known people in the minstrel and vaudeville ranks. Mr. Reeves himself is a noted artist, and as a premier star banjo performer, has been the "head-liner" of innumerable companies. He has now, however, gathered about him an organization of which he is sole proprietor and manager, and promises an entertainment of superior finish.

FACTS ABOUT THE HAWAIIANS.

How They Became Christains. Their Greeting for Our Soldiers.

Hawaiians all become "Christians" through the simple process of an edict—kapoo—of one of the sturdy old Kamehamehas. That worthy king, observing that it was easier to kill an enemy with a rifle than with a club, and that the rifle was the invention of the Christians, took a short cut through the theological mazes of the missionaries who were trying to convert his subjects, and announced that all Hawaiians were from that moment Christians. As he added that he would knock on the head any who objected, the thing was done as fast as his couriers could deliver his message to his loving subjects.

All native women, ride, full-blood, half-caste and white, and everywhere but in Honolulu, ride men's saddles. The low caste ride native ponies in a careless, slovenly manner, but the high castes and whites, sitting astride an American horse—the possession of which is almost a mark of rank—ride with a dash and style that are fine to see. On all the islands but Oahu, and even on that outside of Honolulu, where fashions from "the states" prevail, the women all dress in a gown falling straight from the shoulders, and in this garment, called a holoku, they ride man fashion, the skirts being so very full they need not be divided.

Poi, the staff of life of the native Hawaiians, is made of an esculent root called tara, much resembling a big sweet potato. The tara, raw, is pounded into a thick, stiff paste in wooden troughs, packed in matting and allowed to ferment. When it is to be served this is thinned to any desired consistency in a calabash, and conveyed to the mouth by the fingers. It is pale blue in color and slightly acid in taste, but foreigners soon acquire a liking for it, especially when thinned with milk so that it can be drunk.

Aloha is, in their limited vocabulary, at once a greeting and farewell, a formal expression of regard and of deep love. In the latter case it is increased in warmth and depth of meaning by modifying adjectives annexed instead of prefixed as "Aloha nut," "Aloha nui loa," or even "Aloha nui loa kea!"—and then it is time to speak to papa.

Our soldiers, so say the reports from Honolulu, were greeted with "Alohas" and "leis." The latter are wreaths of flowers, made either to fit around the hat of a man or head of a woman, or more generously to hang over the neck and shoulders. The native women display much art in weaving the abundant flowers into leis of much beauty. No matter how many men may leave a ranch or plantation house, nor how early it may be in the morning, the mistress has been busy with her maids and every guest is decked with a lei. A popular man departing on one of the little inter-island steamers is bade farewell by a hundred friends, who rub noses with him until the gong sounds, and then load him with leis, so that he can scarcely stagger up the gangplank.—New York World.

EVOLUTION OF SOUTHERN WOMEN.

They Have Gained a Self-Reliance Never Dreamed of Before the War.

In 1860 there were only about half a million females in the United States engaged in ganful pursuits, almost all of whom were women and girls at work in the factories in the New England States. Few or none of them could have been found south of Mason and Dixon's line. In this year of grace, 1897, there are five million wage-earning women in our country, of whom the South has its full proportion. This evolution had its inception when the war closed and the South lay prostrate and impoverished, its fertile fields a desert waste, its four millions of slaves liberated, its one million of splendid men dead or disabled, and its fair women and their children half naked and half starved. These women had been reared in the lap of luxury and were distressingly helpless, languid and dependent. Thousands of these were left self-dependent, with young children to raise and educate. However much they shrank from doing men's work, they had to do it, and did it well. The necessity that seemed a calamity has proved a blessing. The evolution or development through which the Southern women have passed has resulted in their remarkable growth, and in no way impaired their attractiveness. They are stronger physically and mentally. They are vastly more self-reliant, and more independent of men. They realize their superiority to such men as are thriftless, self-indulgent, or dissipated, and look upon them with pity or contempt. They have discovered in themselves possibilities of which they never dreamed.—Godey's Magazine.

PAPER MATCHES.

A New Process that Makes Them Cheaper and Lighter for Exportation.

It is predicted that paper is the coming material for matches. The prospect of the wooden match industry being appreciably affected by a new process for manufacturing matches of paper is held to be extremely probable, particularly as the best wood for this purpose is constantly growing scarcer and more costly. The new matches are considerably cheaper than the wooden product, and weigh much less, which counts for much in exportation. The sticks of the matches consist of paper rolled together on the bias. The paper is rather strong and porous, and, when immersed in a solution of wax, stearine and similar substances, sticks well together, and burns with a bright, smokeless and odorless flame. Strips one half inch in width are first drawn through the combustible mass, and then turned by machinery into long, thin tubes, pieces of the ordinary length of wood or wax matches being cut off automatically by the machine. When the sticks are cut to size they are dipped into phosphorous, also by machinery, and the dried head easily ignites by friction on any surface.—New York Journal.

SHOES FOR HUNTING DOGS.

This Practical Method Prevents Their Having Sore Feet.

They do many strange things in Nebraska, but the latest and strangest is putting shoes on bird-dogs. Col. Robert Coffin, a veteran sportsman of Randolph, is responsible for the innovation. Now hundreds of dogs in all parts of the State have been trained to wear shoes in the field while hunting grouse and prairie chicken.

A little consideration will make clear the practical advantages of having a hunter that must travel dozens of miles over stubble or virgin prairie in a day's pursuit of game shod with something more durable than what nature has provided. Heretofore it has been almost impossible to hunt with the same dogs more than two consecutive days. Their feet would become too sore.

The way Col. Coffin overcame this difficulty was to fit his dogs with canvas shoes that covered the feet closely and were tied snugly at the ankles. Great difficulty was found in teaching the dogs to wear the shoes and hunt. Now all old hunters in Nebraska equip their dogs with these canvas shoes.—New York World.

Not So Innocent as He Seemed.

Two venerable clergymen who were traveling in an elevated train in this city the other day noticed a beautiful little boy, with the typical angelic face, seated opposite them with his mother. "Ah, me!" exclaimed one of them, "will we ever be as pure and innocent in the next world as that dear little boy opposite?" His companion was just going to make a suitable reply, when the dear little boy broke out as follows, in a voice that could be heard all through the car: "Mamma, if I had a pistol, I'd shoot those two old crows across the aisle!"

President Kruger's Widow.

President Kruger's now famous decision in the case of a dispute between two sons as to the division of their father's property—it having been willed equally between them—has gained the Boer President the title of the "South African Solomon." President Kruger said to the eldest son: "You are the eldest, are you not?" "Yes," was the answer. "So you shall divide the property." This pleased the elder immensely. "You are the younger," continued Kruger to the other, "so you shall have first choice."

Mother—"Johnny, I see your little brother has the smallest apple. Did you give him his choice as I suggested?" Johnny—"Yes'm. I told him he could have his choice, the little one or none, and he took the little one."—Tit-Bits.

STORIES OF PREACHERS.

How Spurgeon Rose to the Head of His Class in School.

London Truth is responsible for this story: A bishop of St. David's confided to an old Welch clergyman his difficulty in mastering the Welsh double L. The parson replied: "Put the tip of your apostolical tongue to the roof of your episcopal mouth, my lord, and then hiss like a gander."

The late Charles H. Spurgeon distinguished himself in school by a continuous session on the "dunce bench" throughout one cold winter. The bench happened to be next to the stove. At last the teacher suspected possum tactics and had all the seats reserved, bringing the bench next to the door. Spurgeon at once rose to the head of the class.

A distinguisher preacher of somewhat arbitrary manners was engaged to preach in Belgravia and purchased a new hat for the occasion. He was met outside his residence by a young man who was to guide him to the church. His guide, after what the parson thought was a rude stare and smile, said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but your hat—" "Ah, yes; never mind the hat, but mind your own business," the parson interrupted, curtly, and the young man was silenced. The people they met stared and smiled, too. "Strange how many people notice when one has a new hat," thought the parson. The church was reached and the worshippers approaching naturally turned to observe the noted preacher. The vicar met him at the vestry door to welcome him, but hesitating, said: "Pardon me, canon, but pray why do you wear your hat so?" The tile was doffed and the outside was found to be still covered with the white paper, which the absent-minded divine had not removed.

Precise.

"So you don't approve of so liberal a plan of autonomy for the Cubans," said one Spanish official.

"Certainly not," was the reply.

"What would you suggest?"

"Well, I don't want to be unreasonable. I'd tell them that they will be permitted to do anything they want to, provided they will guarantee not to want to do anything that we haven't of them we wanted them to do."—Washington Star.

CURE FOR ASTHMA.

DISCOVERY OF A LEADING PHYSICIAN.

A Public Test Will Be Made Tomorrow at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store.

All day tomorrow free sample packages of the celebrated "Schiffmann's Asthma Cure" will be given away free at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store, 143 West Front street.

The doctor wants each sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchitis in this city to call and get one. When asked regarding his reasons for giving his remedy away in this manner he said: "People are naturally skeptical about an asthma remedy, and when you consider the number of so-called "cures" on the market you can hardly blame them. Now I claim that my Cure cures. It will instantly relieve the most violent attack. It has permanently cured thousands who had been considered incurable. If I did not believe it why should I be giving it away? The sufferer who gets a sample package can tell in two minutes whether it is as I represent it, and it doesn't cost him a cent. That is fair, isn't it?"

It certainly does not look as if anything could be fairer. Those living out of town can get a free sample by writing their name and address (only) on a post card addressed Dr. R. Schiffman, 315 Rosabel street, St. Paul, Minn., up to Sept. 30th; not later.

VOORHEES NOMINATED

State Convention of Republicans at Trenton Today.

ORGANIZATION DETAILS.

UNION COUNTY PLAYS A CONSPICUOUS PART.

Attorney-General Griggs Presiding, Caucus of Union and Somerset Delegation and How the Honors Were Bestowed—Fowler to Nominate Voorhees.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Trenton, September 22—Acting-Governor Voorhees has been nominated for Governor. Congressman Fowler made the nomination, which was seconded by Congressman Pitney.

Trenton, Sept. 22.—Voorhees, Voorhees, everywhere one goes it is Voorhees, everything one hears is Voorhees. All is Voorhees. It is a great day for the curly-headed Union county legal light. No Republican convention held in recent years was so unanimous in feeling of favor for one man.

Others there are who attract attention, such as Attorney General Griggs, Senator Sewell, Congressman Pitney, but no star shines as brilliant as the Voorhees one. The fact that the nomination of Voorhees for Governor was a foregone conclusion long before the delegates were even named deprived the gathering of a great deal of interest which has marked former State conventions.

No county plays a more conspicuous part today than Union, whose favorite son will get the nomination. Nearly a full delegation is present, only one Plainfield delegate being absent. That one is W. H. Drayton, of the Second ward. The Union county delegation met in the Trenton House at 10:45 o'clock this morning. It was called to order by Charles Codding, of Westfield, chairman of the county executive committee. Former Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, was chosen chairman of the delegation. Charles E. Reed, of Rahway, wns selected for secretary.

Without much ado the county's share of honors was parceled as follows: Vice president, E. B. Horton, of Cranford; member of committee an resolutions, Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield; member of committee on rules, S. R. Mulien, of Summit; member of committee on permanent organization, C. A. Smith, of Westfield; member of committee on credentials, John B. Barr, of Elizabeth. The chairman of the delegation was instructed to cast a solid vote for Voorhees.

The Somerset county delegation met at the State street house at 10:30 o'clock. It was called to order by L. H. Thompson, of Somerville, chairman of the county executive committee. Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, was named for chairman of the delegation, and was authorized to cast a solid vote of the county for Voorhees. J. Newton Voorhees, of Middlebush, was named as secretary.

The other honors fell as follows: Vice-president, L. A. Schenck, of Neshanic; member of committee on credentials, Job Kenyon, of Raritan; member of committee on rules, Jos. VanFleet, of Hillsboro; member of committee on resolutions, W. H. Whiting, of Bound Brook; member of committee on permanent organizatihn, R. M. Clark, of North Plainfield. Senator Reed was requested to assist Mr. Kenyon in urging the credential committee to allow Somerset county eighteen instead of seventeen delegates.

Long before 12 o'clock the delegations commenced wending their way to Taylor's opera house where the convention was held. The theatre was

HAD TO DANCE WITH ALL.

DENNIS O'KEEFFEE, OF THE NAVY, FETED BY CATHOLIC CLUB.

He Accepted His Honors Gracefully and Tripped the Light Fantastic Toe—Infantryman and Artilleryman There.

Last night Dennis O'Keeffee, of the Battleship Detroit, experienced a few of the pleasant features of going to war. He is a member of the Catholic Club, and was tendered a reception by the members in honor of his devotion to his country. To say that the popular young naval man bore his honor gracefully would be putting it mildly, for he was the attraction for all the girls, and had to dance with every one of them.

The Catholic Club has a hearty way of honoring its members, who thus devote themselves to their country's cause, and does not hesitate to welcome into its circle an outsider or two. John Scott, of the 22d Regt., N. Y. Vols., and Dennis Begley, of the 5th U. S. Artillery, were present and were made the centre of admiring friends as well as O'Keeffee. Both Scott and Begley are Plainfield boys.

The reception was an informal affair. Prof. O'Reilly furnished music for dancing, and ice cream, cake and soda was served before the affair broke up.

There are twenty-two members and past members of the club who are either in the army or navy, and these will all soon be made honorary members of the club in appreciation of their services.

GROWTH OF LEGAL FIGHT

ANOTHER NEW ACTION IN THE THORN-MIODOVNIK TROUBLE.

The Barber Now Seeks to Recover $200 Damages From the Plumber on Curious Charges—Case in Justice Smalley's Court.

The tables have been turned in the A. B. Thorn against David Miodovnik case, and now instead of Miodovnik being the defendant he is the plaintiff, and is suing Thorn for $200 damages. The case, as it originally stood, was for about $85 which Thorn claimed as due him from Miodovnik for putting a hot-water heating apparatus into the latter's barber shop on West Front street.

The case was tried twice before it was decided, and had to be rehearsed before two juries. Then judgment was given for the plaintiff for the full amount of the claim.

This was in Justice Nash's court. Early this week Miodovnik, through his lawyer, Wm. Newcorn, brought suit in Justice Smalley's court against Thorn for damages done by what the barber calls poor work. He puts his damages at $200. This he computes on the loss sustained by not having the bath room, which the heater was supposed to make fit for use, in operation; counsel fees, time lost in attending the trial, etc.

The case is an interesting one in many particulars. No doubt the matter could have been compromised in the beginning, but has so far been fought to the finish.

Whether a compromise will be effected or not in this suit, is not known.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Maggie Bergen Becomes the Wife of an Elizabeth Man.

The marriage of Miss Maggie Bergen, daughter of Edward Bergen, of 656 South Second street, to George Warren, of Elizabeth, was celebrated last evening at the home of the bride at 8 o'clock in the presence of about forty relatives and friends from this city and Elizabth.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, the Episcopal service being used.

The bride was attended by Miss Elizabeth Mills, of Roselle, as bridemaid, while Mr. Weber, of Elizabeth, acted as best man.

The bride was gowned in a traveling dress, with hat to match. She and her husband left the city on the 10 o'clock Blue Line train last evening for a short honeymoon, after which they will reside in Elizabeth.

The coach that conveyed the bride and groom to the North Avenue station was decorated with tin cans, pails, bells and lots of white ribbon, and as the coach passed through town no one could help but notice the rig, and a large crowd was attracted to the railroad station to see the couple off.

To Dance on Anniversary.

The picnic of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men, which was to have been held at Mountain Side Grove last week, has been postponed until October 7th, when it will be held in conjunction with the celebration of the anniversary of the formation of the tribe at Red Men's Hall.

INTEREST REVIVED IN WHEEL CONTEST.

Fast Riders to Gather Again at the Oval.

LIST OF THE ENTRIES.

THOSE WHO WILL RIDE AT THE RACE MEET SATURDAY.

Some of the Best Riders in the State Are to Compete—The Meet Will be a Great Success Unless Prevented by Rain—List of Officials—T. A. Cuming Official Referee—Fifty-four Entered.

Unless stormy weather inopportunely prevents, the race meet of the Riverdale Field Club at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, is bound to be a great success. After two years of idleness the bicycle track at the Oval will once more see a gathering of the crack amateur riders of this section. It only remains for the people of Plainfield to turn out in full force for management and riders have done all within their power to give the good folk of this city an excellent exhibition of bicycle racing.

When Robert C. Wood, of the Riverdale Field Club, first decided to have the track put in condition for wheel contests, it was with the view of giving the local riders a chance to show what they can do on the track rather than to hold a big race meet. Then it was decided to give up baseball and continue the bicycle racing for one Saturday alone with the expectation of giving the local riders more opportunity to distinguish themselves. Of course, some outside riders were expected, but not anywhere in the numbers and prominence in which they have appeared. It now looks as if the Riverdale Field Club meet would prove a formidable rival to the National circuit meet, which is to be held at Trenton Monday.

The meet has been directly under the charge of Harry K. Lister, of North avenue, who has used every effort to boom the meet and with apparent success. Most of the same officials who have assisted in his previous efforts on track and road will officiate at Saturday's meet. Thomas A. Cuming, the hustling young local consul for the L. A. W., has been appointed official referee by Chairman Mott, of the L. A. W. racing board. The other officials will be as follows: Judges S. P. T. Wilbur, Albert B. Meredith and Charles B. Morse; timers, W. J. VanSickle, Charles E. Vail and Raymond A. McGee; starter, Harry L. VanEmburgh; scorer, Nathan Titsworth; clerk of the course, Harry K. Lister; assistant clerk of the course, Matthew Sweeney; umpires, Carroll L. Runyon, Harry Cuming and Sandford Robinson.

The entry list is very satisfactory and includes some of the best-known riders in this section. There are fifty-four riders entered whose names are as follows: Charles Embleton, Westfield; Jack Jaspar, Bayonne; H. Van Ness, Newark; John H. Allgair, Jr., Somerville; Milton B. Brown and tandem mate, Passaic; Herman DeGroat, Millburn; J. Ernest Waring, Sewaren; W. R. Grigsly, Montclair; John Letzelteo, Newark; Ray Dawson and tandem mate, Boonton; Michael Burke, Plainfield; Jos. Burke, Plainfield; John W. Williams, Trenton; Hamilton Crisp, Trenton; Hans Nelson, Oak Tree; Clarence Rittenhouse, Plainfield; Arthur Chapin, Scotch Plains; George W. DeHaven, Sewaren; Louis A. Schmolholz, New Brunswick; William A. Mouis, Jr., Bayonne; Joseph J. Boland, Rahway; Frank E. Boland, Rahway; Frederick D. Adams, Carteret; W. T. Downs and tandem mate, Newark; A. A. Dufrane, Elizabeth; Clinton E. Ayres, Newark; E. A. Withington, Paterson; Peter J. Simmons, Plainfield; John B. Ferry, Jr., New Brunswick; Edward Thomas, New Brunswick; Wm. Jeffrey, Plainfield; Wm. Embleton, Westfield; Wm. Goltra, Westfield; Eugene Richter, Plainfield; Wm. J. Dodd, Plainfield; J. T. Conquest, Perth Amboy; George V. Voorhees, New Brunswick; Joseph Gabriel, New Brunswick; Edward Warren, Kearney: James E. Trice, New York; Wm. Frank, New York; Gus Welsing, New York; Henry Welsing, New York; Harry Brugesser, Newark; Ray Poole, Plainfield; Fred M. Letson. Stelton; A. C. Cornell, New York; H. S. LaVell, New York; Nick Pfiffer, Elizabeth; Chris J. Bedinger, New York.

CONDEMN THE CANTEENS

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE W. C. T. U. OF UNION COUNTY.

Temperance Woman Deplore Sale of Liquors in Army and Navy—Crusade Against Cigarettes Was Also Approved.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 22—The fourteenth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Union county was held in this place yesterday and was well attended.

The election of officers resulted in the following choice: President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield; recording secretary, Mrs. G. Mosher, of Westfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Noe, of Elizabeth.

Among other resolutions passed at the afternoon session were these:

"Resolved, That the W. C. T. U., now in session this 21st day of September, 1898, in deep sympathy with our overworked soldiers in every department of their work, deeply deplore the canteen system in our camps. We therefore petition those who control the regulations of the army and navy and camps to abolish so destructive an agency for evil to the army, the navy and the home. We plead with you in the name of the mothers, wives and children of the soldiers and in the behalf of all that is pure and sacred and in the name of our God—that this system, which has cursed the world, may be utterly abolished from our camps.

"Resolved, That this convention indorse the measure taken by The New York Journal against the cigarette trust, which has poisoned so many boys, and we appreciate the self-denial practiced by the publishers of that paper when they refuse to take advertisements from the cigarette trust and thereby lose a revenue of $70,000 annually."

The evening session was held in the Methodist church, where Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson delivered a most interesting and instructive address, taking for his subject the cause of temperance.

The Union County W. C. T. U. received a number of new members today and the membership now numbers over 500, the number required to send a delegate to the State convention.

LITTLE INTEREST IN BOARD OF TRADE

No Quorum Present and Meeting Adjourned to Next Tuesday Night.

Last evening was the time for holding the regular meeting of the Board of Trade, but as usual for the past few months, there was a lack of a quorum. The nearest to a quorum was nine members, and after waiting for over an hour President Lounsbury suggested that the meeting adjourn to some other night this month. He said that a great many members objected to Wednesday evening as the time for meeting, and he suggested that another night be selected. A motion was then made that the meeting adjourn to next Tuesday evening.

After the adjournment Mr. Bradley, of the firm of Landis & Hughes, publishers of maps of large cities, exhibited some of the firm's work to those present. Everyone was well pleased with the specimens. Mr. Bradley is in this city for the purpose of securing the material for making a city map, and has already interested many Plainfielders.

CAUGHT THE POPULAR FANCY.

J. W. Johnson Has Been Very Successful in Making Souvenir Spoons.

In all the multitude of souvenir spoons now on the market, there is none more tasteful and satisfactory than the "Clara Barton" spoon designed and made by J. Wesley Johnson, of this city, a prominent New York jeweler. It has caught the public fancy in the short time that it has been out and promises to be very popular. Edward White, the Plainfield merchant will sell them in this city.

Mr. Johnson has met with remarkable success in the manufacture of souvenir spoons. Just after the Maine was blown up he placed on the market a spoon with a picture of the Maine in the bowl. The handle was of an appropriate design. As a result, a thousand gross of these spoons were sold before the demand ceased.

The "Clara Barton" spoon has a gold bowl with the head of Miss Barton engraved in it. The handle has a red enamel cross upon it and the words, "Red Cross Society. Clara Barton."

Tinner Cuts His Hand.

Charles Barris, of Cottage place, a tinner employed by Carney Brothers, cut his hand yesterday while at work about the cornice on the new building being built on Somerset street, opposite Manning avenue. He is not hurt so badly but what he can work, using the injured hand carefully.

A MAIN ROADWAY IS NOW FAST CRUMBLING.

Dry Weather Has Ruined a Principal Thoroughfare.

CAN'T BE REPAIRED NOW.

PARK AVENUE, FROM NINTH STREET TO CITY LINE, IN BAD SHAPE.

The Roadway Has Crumbled to Sand, Making Wheeling There Very Poor—Will Have to Be Re-macadamized—City Can't Do It Now—There Are Other Streets Showing Similar Signs.

Those Plainfielders who have had occasion to drive or wheel out Park avenue from Ninth street to the city line cannot help being impressed by the very poor condition of the roadway. The macadam surface, once so firm and smooth, has now crumbled into sand and is so rough and uneven that cyclists find progress there decidedly unpleasant. Among those who noticed the roadway when it first began to crumble was Councilman Elliott T. Barrows, chairman of the street committee. A conference with Street Commissioner Gavett followed and the need of improving that portion of Park avenue considered. It will not be until next spring that anything will be done to the street, however.

The greatest enemy to the macadam road is the dry weather and it is the dry weather that has been the chief agency in reducing Park avenue to its present condition. As long as the top dressing of the macadam remains moist at all it is knitted together like cement. As soon as it becomes thoroughly dry for any length of time it surely crumbles and the end of the road is not far off. It was the long spells of dry weather that has ruined this and many of the county roads in this section. Most of the city streets are watered every day or so and their life greatly lengthened, but where the rain is the only wetting that the road receives, the dry weather plays havoc.

Councilman Barrows says that it will be impossible to patch Park avenue in the locality mentioned this fall, as it will have to be re-macadamized to do any good. Any kind of repairing or patching would hardly last while it was being put down. Under the present state of affairs, it will be impossible for the city to re-macadam Park avenue this year, but the street committee hope to see the work done next. Park avenue is one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, and is one of the three principal ways over which the army of wheels and vehicles pass in coming or going.

West Front street, near Grove street, is already beginning to crumble, although put in good condition nearly a year ago. Other streets in the city are fast getting in that condition. The advocates of a permanent pavement for the streets in the business section point out these facts as strong arguments for the adoption of their schemes.

EXPERIENCES IN THE KLONDYKE.

J. P. Wolfe Hears From His Brother Who is After Gold.

William C. Wolfe, brother of John P. Wolfe, of Rose Hill Farm, Somerset county, who is now in the Klondyke region, has written to his brother under date of August 9th. Mr. Wolfe does not speak very flattering of the conditions and circumstances of those that are located near him. He says that very little gold is being secured where he is and that the average amount obtained is from 50 to 65 cents per day for two men. He speaks of the trouble the white people have had with the Indians for the reason that the former killed one horse belonging to an Indian. He also says that many people who have gone further into the Klondyke region than they have are returning with precious little gold. He says that he is not sick of his job, and that he will stay as long as he can.

LeVere Resigned as Leader.

Owing to a lack of interest on the part of the members of the Queen City Band, Benjamin LaVere, who has been its leader for one year, tendered his resignation last evening and retired from the organization. It is to be regretted that Mr. LaVere has taken this step, and it is also to be regretted that the people of Plainfield will not support a good band. Just what music the city will have in the future is all uncertain, but the public hardly deserve any for their lack of appreciation.

DID HE ABUSE HIS GIRLS

SERIOUS CHARGE MADE AGAINST AN ITALIAN RESIDENT.

Neighbors Testified to Seeing Cruel Conduct of John Dentz to His Daughters, But the Latter Said They Were Not Abused.

There was an exciting time this morning in the borough court when before Justice Crosley a case of assault was tried. The complaint charges John Dentz, of Grove street, with beating and ill-treating his two daughters, Clementine Dentz and May Dentz. Judge DeMeza, of this city, represented the father, while Lawyer Frank Blatz, of the firm of Murphy & Blatz, represented the State.

Theodore Stites, a neighbor of Mr. Dentz, told the court that he saw Dentz either push or knock the oldest daughter off the piazza the 11th of September, and that both daughters had applied to him for shelter as they were afraid that their father would beat them.

Mrs. Overland, another neighbor, stated how she had seen the youngest daughter tied with strings in the cellar of the father's house. She said that the oldest daughter had come to her and asked for help.

Mrs. Pauson, a neighbor, was an unwilling witness. She admitted, however, that she had heard strange noises at the Dentz home, and had seen the father throw knives at the girls.

Clementine Dentz, the oldest daughter was then called, and much to the surprise of the court and those present, denied the charges made. She said that her father only whipped her when she deserved it, and that he had done nothing out of the way to her. She was a good witness for her father.

The youngest daughter was then called and she followed the example of her sister. She said that her father only chastised her when she deserved it and she did not like the idea of people making complaints against her father.

This concluded the taking of evidence, and Judge DeMeza talked to the court for a few minutes. He presented all of his available arguments, but was finally told by the court that Dentz would be held for the Grand Jury on the evidence adduced.

Dentz furnished bonds in the sum of $150 for his appearance before the Grand Jury, and Mr. Brown, of Cottage place, was the bondsman.

LIKE A NEW CHURCH.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN THE MT. OLIVE EDIFICE.

The Remodeled Church to be Formally Opened Next Sunday When There Will be a Grand Rally of Members.

The work of improvements that have been going on at the Mt. Olive Baptist church will be completed next Saturday. An entrance has been made to the chapel part of the building which gives a large and easy exit and ingress. A storm door has been erected to protect the basement from rain and bad weather.

Inside of the church the kalsomining and painting was done by R. S. Bartin, while the decorations are the work of Theodore Vroom; P. C. Thompson did the carpenter work and Mr. Crosmells the brass work. The windows were stained by Mr Burdick. The very handsome carpet was purchased of Woodhull & Martin. The entire work was done under the direction of Pastor Jackson and leading officials of the church.

Next Sunday the church will be formally opened and there will be a grand rally. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, will preach a sermon, and the offerings will be received by Pastor Jackson for the church and by Superintendent M. C. Dobbins for the Sunday-school. There will also be services in the morning and evening and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend all of the services and contribute largely toward the church fund, which has been created to pay off the indebtedness incurred by the improvements.

A New Kind of Paper.

Amateur photographers will find something worthy of their attention at the Camera Club rooms Monday evening. A demonstration will then be held to show the excellence of Velox paper, which is something entirely new. The paper will print by artificial light. In subdued daylight it prints with remarkable swiftness. The demonstration will be free to all and all those interested in camera work are invited to be present.

UPS AND DOWNS IN LIFE OF A SOLDIER.

Chas. A. Peterson's War Record Show Vicissitudes in Army.

ON THE MOVE CONSTANTLY.

LAST LETTER RECEIVED SHOWS HIM TO BE IN PORTO RICO.

In His Letters He Did Not Complain in a Severe Manner of His Lot as a Soldier—He Wanted Small American Flags Sent to Him to Present to the Natives—Likes the Climate—He is Anxious to Get Home.

As illustrating the vicissitudes of army life, the following notes from the experiences of Charles A. Peterson, of Company B, U. S. Engineer Corps, are interesting.

Mr. Peterson is well-known in Plainfield as the son of the Watchung avenue florist, and as the efficient assistant of Street Commissioner Gavett. The notes are taken from letters received by members of Mr. Peterson's family.

He enlisted in the latter part of May, was assigned to duty at Willett's Point, L. I. Ten days of the stay at this point were spent in the hospital, recovering from lameness caused by "Government shoes."

July 6th, found him at Old Point Comfort, after a sea voyage and a march through a drenching rain.

Two days later he was at Newport News, awaiting the transport boat, "LaGrande Duchesse." While here, he saw many of the famous war vessels of our navy, including the uncompleted "Kentucky" and "Kearsage."

On the 11th we heard from him on the high seas near Charleston, S. C. At the latter place the soldier boys were well treated, receiving grapes, peaches and other welcome additions to their military menu. Being invited out to breakfast with some of his friends, he had the honor of an introduction to the Mayor's daughter.

On July 31st he writes from Ponce, on the south coast of Porto Rico, and corroborates the reports that the inhabitants of that island welcomed the arrival of the Americans. He refers to the abundance of pineapples, bananas, etc., and says "all we have to do is to go after them."

On August 8th he writes that they are expecting orders to move on to San Juan, and requests that some small American flags be sent for him to present to the natives.

Rumors of peace began to reach the army, but there was difficulty in obtaining definite information.

Charlie considers the climate "fine," never warmer than ninety-five degrees, and quite cool in the evenings.

The last letter received was dated August 28th, and our soldier boy was then looking forward to an early return to the United States (mainland) and a furlough of twenty days.

All the later letters are sent as "soldiers' mail," endorsed as such by one of the army officers, the only stamp being a "postage due."

It was seldom that Mr. Peterson could give his family any address to which they could direct their letters, and, indeed, the troops were never certain where they were going or where they would go.

The letters are singularly free from complaints of the hardships of army life, a single reference to the food furnished and a bare mention of a few days of serious illness on his arrival in Porto Rico, being the only cases in which he speaks of the unpleasant part of his experience.

USUAL RUSH OCCURRED.

Rutgers Students Clashed at the Opening of College Yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Sept. 22.—Rutgers College began its 133d year yesterday. The incoming Freshman class numbers seventy, of whom fifty-four are in the scientific and sixteen in the classical sections.

Professor Scattergood, instructor of mathematics, has resigned and has been succeeded by F. Cuyler Van-Dyck. This is the only change in the faculty.

After the chapel exercises there was the usual rush between the students of the two lower classes. The Freshmen waved a college banner bearing the class numerals. The Sophomores, after a struggle of ten minutes, succeeded in getting it. The banner was torn to shreds and the bits distributed among the Sophomores to be worn as trophies.

Received Six New Members.

Watchung Lodge, I. O. F., met last evening and received six new members. The charter will be surely closed at the next meeting to be held in two weeks.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.

Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

IN HONOR OF ROOSEVELT.

Oyster Bay's Great Reception to the Colonel of the Rough Riders.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 22.—The celebration in honor of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt by the citizens of Oyster Bay, L. I., took place yesterday afternoon and was one of the greatest events in the history of the town.

Preparations for the reception to the colonel of the Rough Riders were begun soon after his arrival at Montauk Point from Cuba, and since that time every patriotic citizen of Oyster Bay has given all his available time and spare energies in the effort to insure its success.

The town presented a gay appearance. Flags floated from all the houses and public buildings and the main road was one long vista of American flags and banners suspended between telegraph poles.

The ground selected for the celebration was in a large grove directly opposite the railroad station. In the center of the grove was erected a large grand stand for the speakers and invited guests, and immediately adjoining it was the band stand. On either side of the grand stand were large bleachers for the accommodation of the public.

Oyster Bay was astir early in the morning. Visitors began to arrive soon after dawn. At first they came in all sorts of vehicles from adjoining towns. A little later the railroad began to contribute its share of visitors and soon the town was thronged.

It was nearly three o'clock before the Hon. Townsend B. Cox mounted the speaker's platform and called the meeting to order. The Rev. William T. Estes pronounced the invocation.

Then followed the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Augustus A. Smock, assisted by the united choirs of the local churches and the Oyster Bay Glee Club. A baritone solo was then sung, after which Mr. Cox introduced Colonel Roosevelt.

The appearance of Mr. Roosevelt was the signal for great and prolonged applause. Mr. Roosevelt's address consisted of a brief talk, reciting some of the salient features of his experiences in Cuba. At the close of the address William J. Youngs, on behalf of the citizens of Oyster Bay, presented to the colonel a gold mounted sword.

BLAME FOR SPAIN'S DISASTERS.

President of the Peace Commission Says It Rests on All Parties.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—Senor Montero Rios, president of the Senate and president of the Spanish peace commission, in an interview, is quoted as saying:

"It is a painful spectacle to see the politicians on all sides trying to throw on each other the blame for disasters, the responsibility for which rested on all parties. I, personally, have always favored autonomy for Cuba, Spain being unable to forcibly maintain her sovereignty at such a great distance."

Continuing, Senor Montero Rios remarked:

"It is useless to speak of our disasters. Has not the country accused all our governments of exhibiting too much weakness towards the United States? What Spain wanted was a man ready to sacrifice himself, and who recognized the impossibility of war with a powerful nation, especially after years of useless conflicts with the insurgents."

The government has decided upon the remuneration which the peace commissioners of Spain will receive for their services while at Paris. Senor Rios will receive twelve thousand francs monthly and expenses, and each of the commissioners will receive eight thousand francs per month and their expenses.

Gold Democrats Won

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 22.—The Connecticut Democratic State Convention, which was held in this city yesterday, resulted in a decisive victory for the gold faction of the party. Some very turbulent scenes took place, and it was not until late in the evening that the final vote was taken.

Former State Secretary Phelan of Bridgeport presented the name of ex-United States Treasurer Daniel N. Morgan of Bridgeport for governor; John W. Coogan of Hartford presented the name of William Waldo Hyde of Hartford, and Warren W. Chase of Stonington named Colonel William Henry Stevenson of Bridgeport.

The nominations closed here and an informal ballot was taken. It resulted thus:

Morgan 143, Hyde 50, Stevenson 34. This ballot was made formal and unanimous.

Cyrus G. Beckwith of New London was presented as a candidate for lieutenant governor, but he refused to permit his name to be used, and Samuel Bassett of New Britain was nominated by acclamation.

All other nominations were made by acclamation, and the balance of the ballot was nominated as follows:

Joseph Fanning of Norwich, state secretary; Asa M. Ross of Thompson, treasurer; Edward S. Roberts of Canaan, controller; Louis Blydenburg of New Haven, attorney general.

A NEW NAVAL STATION

Its Establishment Will Place Us On a Par With England.

CULEBRA ISLAND THE SITE

Important Decision Arrived At by the Navy Department and Based on the Official Survey Made by Captain Chester of the Cincinnati. A Board of Officers Will Go to the Island.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The navy department is preparing to establish a powerful naval station in the West Indies on one of the islands secured from Spain. It was at first thought that a navy yard or some sort of station would be located in Porto Rico, but an examination of that island shows that there are no suitable places on its coast for even an anchorage for our vessels.

The Water at San Juan is quite shallow and is not deep enough for a battleship. The coast at that point, also, is exposed to the prevailing winds, so that it would be almost impossible to secure a safe harbor there. The bottom is mostly coral, and it would be a hopeless task to attempt to dig a channel sufficiently deep for our heavy draft warships.

The island of Culebra has been selected as a naval station, and as soon as it has been fitted up with guns and ammunition and a garrison stationed there, the United States will control the important Virgin Passage and will rival England as a controlling factor in the West Indies.

Captain Chester of the Cincinnati was recently ordered to make a survey of this island and report to the department on its value from a strategic standpoint, and also in regard to its adaptability as a naval station.

Captain Chester's report is now at the department. It shows that the island of Culebra is one of the most important of the many bits of land that dot the South Atlantic and Caribbean seas. It is only a few miles directly east from Porto Rico, and, with St. Thomas, on the opposite side, guards the Virgin Passage.

Captain Chester reports that Culebra has an ideal harbor, with a long, narrow entrance, which is well protected by a reef which faces the channel for a width of one hundred yards. The harbor possesses a depth of 29 feet, which is more than sufficient for the largest ships of our navy.

Captain Chester states in his report that Culebra has only about seven hundred inhabitants and is one of the oddest islands in that region. At present it is controlled by a governor, who is appointed by the governor of Porto Rico.

The army of the island consists of two soldiers. No harbor duties are collected and the natives of the island are required to ship all their goods direct to Porto Rico.

Before anything can be done in the way of establishing a naval station at Culebra Congress will have to appropriate funds and authorize the work. The department is considering the appointment of a board of officers to proceed to the island and make a survey and report upon what will be needed to fit it up for the reception of ships and to make it a strong point of defence.

ROUGH RIDERS AT WHITE HOUSE.

Praised by the President for Their Work at Santiago.

Washington, Sept. 22.—President McKinley yesterday informally received a delegation of about a dozen members of the Roosevelt Rough Rider regiment. A majority of the delegation was from New Mexico and was en route home. Each of the callers was presented individually to the president, who, after greeting them personally, spoke with earnest enthusiasm of the work of the regiment in the Santiago campaign, saying that he was pleased to have the opportunity on his own behalf and on behalf of the country at large to thank the regiment through he present delegation for the work it had done.

"Your record is one," he said, "of which the entire nation is proud. I tell people who talk with me about the Rough Riders that you left the boats in squads of twenty or thirty, inquiring the way to Santiago, and that you hardly stopped until you arrived there. You have not only done well, but I have no doubt you will all be willing to again serve your country in an emergency."

The response was that they would be, to a man. "We want our colonel to raise a brigade instead of a regiment next time," said one of the youngest members of the party.

The president also congratulated the soldiers upon their good fortune in securing competent officers to lead them and met with a hearty response in all that he said about Colonel Roosevelt and Generals Wood and Young.

The Commerce Commission.

Brooklyn, Sept. 22.—Ex-Mayor Schieren has been agreed upon as chairman of thte commission appointed by overnor Black to inquire into the causes of the decline of the commerce of the port of New York, in compliance with an act of the legislature, and he is now at work considering the scope and nature of the inquiry to be conducted.

Sir Julian Pauncefote Honored.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The retirement of Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, from the active diplomatic service would have taken place yesterday had not the British foreign office extended his term of service until next April, in recognition of his long and capable service.

Russia's Protest

Yokohama, Sept. 22.—Advices from Seoul say the Corean cabinet has decided to cancel the engagement of the nine American, nine British, five Germans, five Frenchmen and two Russians who were enlisted in Shanghai to act as an imperial guard.

Cattle Record Broken.

Kansas City, Sept. 22.—All local cattle records were broken at the stock yards here when 18,035 head of cattle were received. The previous record was 17,447 head, received on August 3, 1897.

POSITIVELY IDENTIFIED

Bridgeport Victim Now Said To Be Miss Emma Gill.

SWEETHEART IS ARRESTED

Identity Established to the Satisfaction of the Police. The Brother of the Murdered Girl is Certain. An Arrest in Hartford. Everything Seems to Verify the Facts Stated.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 22.—Tuesday it was the general belief that the identity of the victim of the Yellow Mill Pond murder would never be known. Now, not only has the mutilated body of the woman been positively identified to the satisfaction of the police, but a young man, who is the alleged accomplice in the crime, is under arrest.

Superintendent of Police Birmingham is positive that the dead girl is Emma Gill, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gill of Southington, and, acting under instructions from him, Detective Smith of Hartford arrested in that city yesterday morning Walter C. Foster of Hartford, for alleged complicity in the girl's death.

The identification that thoroughly satisfied the police was made yesterday morning by a brother of the murdered girl, and in speaking of the matter Superintendent Birmingham said: "No further proof of the identification should be required than a glance at the brother's face, every feature of which was duplicated in the features of the dead woman."

The identification was made certain by the discovery of a mole on the side of the neck of the victim. This mole had not been noticed previously by the police, and the brother called their attention to it before viewing the head.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 22.—Walter C. Foster, a young man employed as a salesman by the Fleischmann Yeast Company of this city, has been arrested by Detective Walter Smith for alleged complicity in the Bridgeport murder mystery. The arrest was made at the instance of the Bridgeport police, and Foster was taken to that city last night.

The arrest of Foster lends support to the report current here that the body of the Bridgeport victim had been identified as that of Emma Gill of Southington, twenty-four years old, who worked as a domestic in the family of James H. Pratt of that place, and who has been missing.

Foster kept company with her. She left on a vacation four weeks ago, returned two weeks afterward, and went away again, pleading illness, saying that she was going to stay with Foster's sister at Stratford.

Her parents received two letters signed by her, saying that she was ill, the last dated September 7, and written in another hand. After this their letters were returned to hem unanswered and marked by the postmaster "Unknown."

Yellow Mill Pond is on the road between Bridgeport and the town of Stratford.

Yacht Rebecca Founders.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—A dispatch from Delaware Breakwater says that the schooner yacht Rebecca, owned by Edward Dudley of Philadelphia, bound from New York for Philadelphia, foundered near the new breakwater at 3 o'clock yesterday morning.

The owner of the yacht, his guests and crew were rescued by the tugs Vidette and Hughes and taken to Lewes, Del.

The Rebecca was a handsomely appointed yacht, 82 feet long, and of 37 tons registered.

It is thought that the accident was caused by the absence of a signal light on the end of the new breakwater. The yacht will be a total loss.

Floods in Southern Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 22.—The southern part of Spain has been visited by terrible floods. At the village Herrera, near Cadiz, eighty persons have been drowned.

A great many cattle have perished and the olive harvest is lost, especially in the provinces of Seville and Granada.

There have been many deaths in other parts of the flooded country.

The Reynolds Murder.

New York, Sept. 22.—The grand jury filed with Judge Newburger, in Part I of general sessions, an indictment for murder in the first degree against Dr. Samuel J. Kennedy.

Kennedy is accused of the murder of Emeline C. Reynolds, better known as "Dolly" Reynolds, in the Grand hotel, Broadway and Thirtieth street, on August 16. He will plead Friday morning.

Admiral Cervera in Spain.

Santander, Spain, Sept. 22.—The Anchor line steamer City of Rome, chartered by Admiral Cervera to transport to Spain the Spanish sailors captured at the battle of Santiago, who were recently released by the United States authorities, has arrived here from Portsmouth, N. H., which place she left on September 12.

Bank of England's Gold.

London, Sept. 22.—More gold left the Bank of England yesterday and there was a sharp rise in the discount rate to 2 1-4 per cent.

Yesterday's announcement in these dispatches about the effort of the bank to control the money market by borrowing on consols is confirmed.

Funeral of Dr. Hall.

New York, Sept. 22.—It was decided yesterday, at a meeting of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the funeral of the Rev. Dr. John Hall, that the date shall be October 4. H. E. Rowland was in the chair. The committee was in session for three hours.

Gen. Garcia Coming Here.

Washington, Sept. 22.—It is expected by members of the Cuban delegation here that General Calixto Garcia, second in command of the Cuban forces during the war, will come to this country within two weeks, visiting New York, Baltimore and Washington.

A CASE OF YELLOW FEVER.

A Transport Arrives at Camp Wikoff with Sick from Cuba.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 22.—The camp officials received a decided setback yesterday, when a transport arrived from Cuba, having on board sick and convalescent soldiers from the hospital at Siboney, and bringing one unmistakable case of yellow fever.

The transport was the Segurance. She has not yet been boarded. The boarding officer, Dr. Magruder, had been ordered back to Washington, as no yellow fever cases were expected, and when the transport arrived there was no regularly appointed quarantine officer to go out to her.

General Wheeler, who is again in command, had a talk with Colonel Greenleaf, who has been superintending the hospital work, and it was decided to send one of the surgeons from the camp to inspect the Seguranca.

How many soldiers she has on board is not known yet.

The arrival of the ship will necessitate the opening again of a detention hospital. This will be established behind the headquarters occupied by General Shafter while he was in the camp.

All the sick from the Seguranca will be sent to the detention hospital as soon as they are landed.

THE ARMY IN PORTO RICO.

Request for Recall of Certain Regiments Giving the President Concern.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Representative Stone of Pennsylvania saw the president yesterday in an effort to have the Pennsylvania troops, at present in the field in Porto Rico, recalled, and others substituted in their places. The president promised to give attention to the request.

Others who talked with the president yesterday say that the general subject of the recall of Porto Rico troops is giving him some concern, as is also the question of the discharge of individual soldiers in this and other departments of the army.

Many applications are daily made for such discharges, and to some of them the president gives personal attention.

He has laid down no general rule for conduct in such matters, but allows the circumstatnces i neach case to control.

The Brooklyn Arrives.

New York, Sept. 22.—The cruiser Brooklyn anchored off Tompkinsville, Staten Island, yesterday morning. She left Newport, where she had been participating in the historical celebration, early Tuesday afternoon. Just when she will go to the navy yard is not known, but it will probably not be before next week.

At present there is not even berthing room at the yard for her and until some of the other vessels are ordered away or taken out of dry dock it is probable that the Brooklyn will remain anchored in the bay.

Philadelphia's Jubilee.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22.—The programme for the peace jubilee, on October 26 and 27, includes a civic parade, dedication of the restored Independence hall, reception to President McKinley and a bicycle parade on the first day. Features of the second day will be a naval parade on the Delaware, parade of land and naval forces, dedication of the rant monument in Fairmount park, with an address by President McKinley, who will there review the troops. In the evening a banquet in honor of the president will be given.

No News from Fashoda.

London, Sept. 22.—Inquiries made at the British foreign office yesterday showed no news has been received at the office from Fashoda, and that no information has been received from eneral Sir Herbert Kitchener since he left Omdurman.

News from the British commander is momentarily expected, however, and it will doubtless be in the nature of tthe guesses made, namely, that the Egyptian flag is now flying over Fashoda.

Furlough for the Ninth.

New York, Sept. 22.—The Ninth regiment, New York volunteers, which arrived in this city from Chickamauga last Friday, and which was given a leave of absence by Colonel Greene, assembled at noon yesterday at the armory, when the men were given a further furlough of thirty days and were instructed to report at ten o'clock on October 2.

Mrs. Curzon May Not Go.

London, Sept. 22.—The St. James Gazette says it regrets to learn that it is very doubtful whether Mrs. Curzon, the wife of the newly appointed viceroy of India, will be able to accompany her husband to India, the delicate state of her health making it desirable for her to remain in England for the present to recuperate before facing the Indian climate.

Low Price for Cotton

New York, Sept. 22.—Five minutes before the close of the cotton market yesterday the October future sold at 5.22c., the lowest figure ever recorded in the history of the exchange. The lowest previous record was when December option sold for 5.23 in November, 1894.

Socialist Meetings Prohibited.

Berlin, Sept. 22.—The police authorities have prohibited the holding of five projected Socialist meetings in Hamburg, called for the purpose of discussing the recent speech of Emperor William regarding the imprisonment of the provokers of strikes.

To Seize Khyber Pass.

London, Sept. 22.—There is a growing belief in Indian circles here that Khyber Pass, the principal northern pass from Afghanistan into India, will shortly be taken possession of by Great Britatin.

Japan Would Disarm.

Yokohama, Sept. 22.—The Japanese government has replied to the czar's circular proposing universal disarmament, expressing approval of the plan and promising to support it.

The New Secretary of State.

Washington, Sept. 22.—It is now expected that Mr. Hay will be installed as secretary of state before the president's departure for the West in October.

SAILING FROM PORTO RICO.

Four Hundred Spanish Soldiers Left San Juan Yesterday.

San Juan, Sept. 22.—The repatriation of the Spanish soldiers began yesterday. Four hundred men sailed for Spain on the French steamer Chateau Lafitte.

Eight hundred infantry, belonging to the Asturias Battalion, will sail to-day on the steamer San Francisco.

The water front was crowded with thousands of people when the Spanish engineers marched to the wharf, where they were received by Captain General Macias and General Ortega. The captain general made no speech, but shook hands with the officers and men. There was no demonstration by the people.

Some Spanish field pieces are already on board the San Francisco, but a question has arisen in the commission concerning the disposition of some of the guns, and it was not settled when this dispatch was filed.

The captain general has given notice to the Spanish troops to retire from Aibonito, Baranquitas and Barros, and from Humacao, Guamani and Cayey.

Our troops will occupy these towns when they are evacuated.

Residents of Porto Rico and Americans here are alarmed because Spanish ships returning from Cuba stop at this port. They fear the introduction of yellow fever into the island from the Spanish steamer City of Cadiz, as some of her sick were too ill to proceed and were brought ashore. Our commissioners will protest if there is a repetition of this.

The volunteers have now all been disbanded and the Spanish soldiers are dismantling armories and barracks and boxing the guns and ammunition. They rejoice over the prospect of an early return to their homes.

Rear Admiral Schley has refused to purchase the coal stored here, and it may be purchased for the use of the United States army.

HEAVY ARTILLERY FOR MANILA.

Gen. Miller to Command the Expedition Recently Ordered.

San Francisco, Sept. 22.—The California Heavy Artillery, Major F. S. Rice commanding, has received instructions to proceed to the Philippines. It is thought that it will be at least two weeks before the next expedition can get away.

Several of the transports of previous expeditions are expected to arrive within a few days, and it will take at least ten days to fumigate and load them for the voyage.

Washington, Sept. 22.—General Miller, now in command at San Francisco, will command the reinforcements ordered to Manila.

Batteries A and D of the California artillery will go with the expedition.

General Miller has made application to have the troops which accompany him armed with the Krag-Jorgensen rifle.

The department will stand upon the order recently issued regarding arms, and the commanding general at Manila will decide what regiments, if any, shall be armed with the Krag-Jorgensens.

General Merriam, who reached San Francisco Tuesday from Honolulu, has telegraphed the war department of his arrival, and says that he will send his report by mail.

This report is upon the subject of camping grounds and military matters in general at Honolulu.

Modern Explosives in War.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22.—Hudson Maxim of New York, the well known expert on explosives, read a paper here before the chemical section of the Franklin Institute on "Modern High Explosives and Smokeless Powders and Their Applications in Warfare."

Mr. Maxim maintained that it was a crime for a nation not to seek the most destructive weapons that could be secured and not to be always prepared for war. The more terrible the weapons the less would be the loss of life, because war would not be so quickly precipitated. There would have been no war with Spain, he contended, had it not been that the Madrid government and some other governments had firm belief in our unpreparedness.

Secretary Alger at Knoxville.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Secretary of War Alger, Surgeon General Sternberg and party arrived yesterday from Lexington and were met by a reception committee. The party proceeded at once to Camp Poland, where the Second division of the First corps, commanded by Brig. Gen. McKee, passed in review before General Alger. The party also inspected the camps and hospitals and in the afternoon left for Chattanooga and Camp Thomas. The city was in gala attire and a half holiday was observed in the secretary's honor.

A Murder Near Dawson City

Seattle Wash., Sept. 22.—George Bowman of Bridgeport, Conn., was murdered last winter during a terrible snow storm by a companion who came from Springfield, Mass. He was almost in sight of Dawson City when his strength failed him and he sank down in the soft snow. His companion, who was the leader of the party, went back to him and, with an oath, shot him dead. This is the story that is told by J. C. Sachs, who has just returned from Alaska.

English Sculling Championship

London, Sept. 22.—W. A. Barry defeated George Towns of Australia yesterday in the final heat of the races for the sculling championship of England; time, 23 minutes and 23 seconds. Towns had the lead for a mile but dropped out of the race on the second mile.

Senatorial Nominations.

Buffalo, Sept. 22.—Three Republican senatorial conventions were held yesterday morning, at which the following nominations were made: Forty-seventh district, N. W. Moreen; Forty-eighth district, Simon Sisbert; Forty-ninth district, eorge A. Davis.

Harrison Will Attend

Chicago, Sept. 22.—Mayor Harrison has acceptetd an invitation to attend the christening ceremonies of the battleship Illinois at Newport News, October 4. A party of aldermen and city officials will accompany the mayor on the trip.

WERE THEY MURDERED?

Picquart Insinuates That Henry and Picard Were Not Suicides.

GREAT SENSATION IN PARIS

New Charges Against Dreyfus by the Minister of War. His Trial Before the Civil Court Postponed. Meeting of the Committee on Revison of the Dreyfus Case.

Paris, Sept. 22.—The trial of Colonel Picquart and M. Leblois, a lawyer, on the charge of revealing documents concerning the national defence, began yesterday before the Correctional Tribunal, but the public prosecutor asked for an adjournment on the ground that the prosecution of Colonel Picquart on the charge of forgery and using forged documents had been ordered by the minister of war.

M. Labori, who was counsel for M. Zola during the latter's famous trial, indignantly opposed the adjournment, which, he said, was an attempt to hand over Colonel Picquart to the clutches of the military authorities.

Colonel Picquart then made a statement which caused a sensation. He said: "This is, perhaps, the last time I shall speak in public. I shall sleep, perhaps, in the military prison of Cherche Midi. Therefore I wish to declare that if I find there the strangling cord of Lemercier Picard, or the razor of Colonel Henry, it will be murder, for I have no idea of committing suicide."

The people in the room became intensely excited, and shouted, "Vive Picquart!"

The judges, after a short deliberation, decided to adjourn the case indefinitely, and Colonel Picquart was led away between policemen.

Lemercier Picard, the man referred to by Colonel Picquart, was a detective, understood to have been employed in the Dreyfus affair, who was found hanged in his lodgings about a year ago, under circumstances which did not make it certain that he had committed suicide.

The papers here say the minister of war, General Chanoine, ordered the prosecution of Colonel Picquart on the charge of forgery and using forged documents, after the minister had examined the documents in the Dreyfus case.

The commission appointed by the minister of justice, M. Sarrien, to examine the documents in the Dreyfus case and pronounce upon the advisability of the government's formally granting the prisoner a new trial, met yestetrday afternoon at the ministry of justice. The greatest precautions were taken to insure secrecy.

It is understood the commission will come to a decision by Monday next, when M. Sarrien will communicate its findings to a cabinet council, which will be presided over by President Faure.

The Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse.

Southampton, Sept. 22.—The North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, Captain Engelbart, from New York on September 13, which arrived here yesterday noon, has gone into dry dock at this place to have her starboard propeller repaired, one blade of which was lost on September 1, on her outward passage.

The company's steamer Saale has arrived here from Bremen and taken the Kaiser Wilhelm's passengers bound for Bremen to that port.

For a Three Years' Cruise.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The gunboat Wilmington will be ordered to the South Atlantic station. Orders have been issued to prepare her for a three years' foreign cruise, the work to be done at the Boston navy yard, and to take precedence of all other work there excepting on the Helena. The Bancroft and Osceola, also at Boston, have been placed out of commission, and the Governor Russell, now at the Norfolk yard, is also transferred from the active list.

News from Manila.

Manila, Sept. 22.—The report that the last Spanish garrison in the island of Luzon had surrendered, is premature. The Spaniards still hold seven sea ports in Albay province, the principal hemp district.

The disturbances have already resulted in a diminution of the output of Albay hemp by 250,000 bales, compared with last year's figures.

Further fighting seems imminent, and unless peace is concluded, the shortage will be doubled.

Corea's Promise to Russia.

Yokohama, Sept. 22.—Advices from Seoul say that the Corean cabinet has decided to cancel the engagement of the nine Americans, nine British, five Germans, five Frenchmen, and two Russians, who were enlisted in Shanghai to act as an imperial guard, Russia having protested that their engagement was a breach of the promise made when Russia withdrew the Russian adviser and instructors from Corea.

The Changes in China.

Pekin, September 22.—Rumors, which it is impossible to disregard, are in circulation to the effect that the empress dowager of China has recovered her ascendancy over the emperor, who is now, practically, in a state of tutelage.

New Yorkers for Manila.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Sept. 22.—There is a story current among the officers of the 201st New York that the regiment will be ordered to the Philippines about October 10, but this cannot be verified.

Exposition Building Burned.

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 22.—The Exposition building, the largest structure of its kind in the Northwest, was completely destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. The loss will aggregate $100,000.

Ex-Senator Eaton Dead.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 22.—Former United States Senator William Eaton died at his home on Church street yesterday morning from a stroke of paralysis sustained Sunday. He was 83 years old.

Reform in Cursing Habits.

Bloomfield is a name suggestive of all that is good and admirable, and the New Jersey town that bears that title doubtless has many pleasant things to contemplate and enjoy in suburban life. But there are bitter things to be taken with the sweet, as according to reports sent out from that place, the citizens of Bloomfield are subjected to terrible stunts in profanity. It is veraciously stated that not only is the town painted red now and then by some bibulous individual, but that at times the atmosphere is of a dull-blue color resultant from the expressive and inelegant statements made by certain reckless citizens loitering on the public streets.

The profane habits have become so offensive of late that the Society of Sacred Heart met last night to inaugurate a crusade against the cursing population. A resolution was adopted protesting against the general use of profane language in Bloomfield, especially among the young people. As one of the contributing factors for reform the township officials will be asked to take some action to suppress the lurid expressions heard on all sides.

More power to the reformers of Bloomfield swearing habits. There isn't a town on the face of the American map but what needs restriction on the flow of profanity indulged in by thoughtless and debased inhabitants. And Plainfield needs it badly.

Rejuvenation of Cycle Racing.

From the number and prominence of the entries for the race meet to be held on the Crescent Oval track Saturday afternoon the rejuvenation of Plainfield to the good old cycling days of a few years ago seems promised.

The Riverdale Field Club is composed of an active and an athletic lot of young men, who conduct their events with excellent taste and fine manners. Since they have adopted Plainfield as their home no act of rowdyism or other disagreeable circumstance has appeared to offer a blight to their success in either the baseball or the cycling field. And judging from the general character of the Riverdales no unseemly episode is likely to occur.

There is no reason why bicycle racing should not prove popular in Plainfield, one of the most devoted towns in the country to the steel steeds, and under the management of the Riverdales there seems to be everything in favor of it. Of course, as with the old Crescents, the Riverdales are seriously handicapped by the lack of commodious transit facilities to and from the track.

Congressional Convention.

The Democratic Congressional committee of the Third district has decided to hold the convention for the nomination of a Congressman at New Brunswick Monday, October 3d. The basis of representation in the convention will be one delegate for each one hundred Democratic votes cast at the Congressional election in 1896.

In accordance with that above call, William J. Logan, chairman of the Somerset county executive committee, has set Saturday, October 1st, as the date for holding the primaries for the election of delegates, except in North Plainfield, where the primary will be held the evening previous. North Plainfield will be entitled to three delegates.

Democratic Primaries.

As will be noted in another column the Democratic primaries for the election of delegates to the State convention will be held in the various wards of Plainfield tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock. The primaries are called as a result of a notice issued by John L. Crowell, chairman of the Union county Democratic executive committee.

The apportionment of delegates for the various wards in Plainfield is as follows: First ward, two delegates; Second ward, two delegates; Third ward, two delegates, and Fourth ward, three delegates.

GENERAL PIO PILAR.

This smooth-faced, boyish-looking gentleman is causing Aguinaldo considerable trouble. General Pio Pilar is Aguinaldo's rival for the position of leader of the insurgent Filipinos, which the latter now holds. The cut was made from a photograph obtained by the New York Herald.

Cost of the Spanish War.

The swollen condition of the United States treasury is one of the most remarkable facts consequent on the Spanish war. When before in history has a war occurred leaving a magnificent surplus, which is growing bigger every week? Yet that is the simple fact. We now see that a loan of $100,000,000 would have answered the purpose much better than one of $200,000,000. The swift conclusion of the war defeated all our expectations, and the result is unique. The war expenses were provided for by a $200,000,000 loan, of which $155,000,000 has been paid in, and by the war revenue bill. The latter has been yielding and will continue to yield about $12,000,000 per month, and by the end of the fiscal year next June it will have paid into the treasury about $145,000,000. This, with the sale of the bonds, will make $345,000,000 provided for at the start to meet the expenses of the fighting by land and sea.

The total war expenditure up to the end of August was $115,000,000, and it is estimated that the total settlement of the war expenditure and of the obligations growing out of the war will add about $120,000,000 more, making a total of $235,000,000. These expenses will be settled gradually, and probably a year will elapse before they are all met. If nothing is done by congress to lessen the national income, then the treasury will present this balance of debit and credit: On the one side $345,000,000 extraordinary income plus the treasury balance when the war broke out, $226,000,000; total, $571,000,000; on the other hand, war expenditures, $235,000,000. This will leave the enormous surplus in Uncle Sam's strong box of $335,000,000, such an engorgement of government finances as threatens to work evil by the withdrawal of currency from the channels of business. The question is already exciting anxious attention among bankers and men of business all over the land, and there is no doubt that every effort will be made to bring about such a reduction of income as to prevent this threatened congestion. One may ask again, where is the war in all history hitherto which has filled a country's treasury to overflowing instead of emptying it as fast as it filled? It is a unique situation.

The American consular agent at Valencia is already making commercial suggestion. He thinks there would be great openings for American capital in Spain. Most of us would prefer to try Spain's quondam colonial possessions first.

To know the "how" and "when" in the art of silence is more difficult than to know them in the art of speech. It means more, too, in living one's life to some purpose.

Vanity is the intellectual enjoyment of small minded people. Without it the world would be very unhappy.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Here is a question that one hears nowadays in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, and other towns: If gas can be made and sold profitably at fifty cents per one thousand cubic feet in Trenton, why should we pay more?—Tribune.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

A splendid entertainment is assured at Music Hall tonight, at the exhibition of pictures and dissolving views by Prof. B. Benton Barker, of Schnectady, N. Y. Not only will the pictures and views be entertaining, but a further pleasure will be had in the descriptive lecture by Rev. H. W. McKane, of this city, and the musical features in the programme. These consist of vocal selections by Mrs. Lorena McKane, assisted by Prof. William E. MacClymont, accompanist. The leading events of the late American-Spanish War will be reviewed and illustrated and hearty enjoyment can confidently be expected.

* * * * *

The Al Reeves famous big company of white and colored performers appear at Stillman Music Hall Saturday night and will undoubtedly be welcomed by a large audience. The programme is one well calculated to please all lovers of genuine amusement, and the reputation of Mr. Reeves as a caterer of theatrical interests are such that announcement of the several artists engaged by him is guarantee of their efficiency. A special feature is Miss Fanny Fern Thatcher, a lady of great promise as a vocalist. She is the star of the white performers, and in the person of Miss Zoe Ball, the colored race has a phenomenal contralto singer, who in her particular line in the rival of the Black Patti.

* * * * *

An attraction that will no doubt have an audience limited to the capacity of the house is Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryder's latest great success, "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which will be seen at Music Hall during the present season. The play is now in its third successful season, and wherever presented the past two years it has drawn immense crowds, and is described as novel, because it is a page of human nature. It exalts virtue and courage, teaches good manners, and its characters are drawn from life and are types to be found anywhere in our largest cities.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 22.—The annual meeting for the election of officers of the Social Club will be held Tuesday evening of next week.

At the meeting of the Township Committee of Cranford this evening, the further hearing of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railroad Company's franchise will come up and it is expected that the franchise will be granted as all opposition against the trolley going through South avenue has been removed.

The second quarterly conference of the Methodist church will be held this evening.

—Don't forget the Democratic primaries tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in each ward.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

NEW DIVINE MISSION.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S EXPLANATION OF HIS GREAT PROJECT.

He Will Try to Reconcile Leo XIII and the King of Italy—Germany's Ruler Would Extend the Pope's Influence For the Benefit of Society.

Emperor William of Germany has a project in view more stupendous than anything he has ever attempted. It is nothing less than the almost insuperable difficulty of uniting the hands of Leo XIII with Humbert of Italy after their long separation because the king's father wrested Rome from the papacy. His crusade of Jerusalem will only be made after a secret visit to Italy. This crusade is to be the first step in the extraordinary scheme of this extraordinary young kaiser. Himself a Protestant, the idea that dominates him is that the whole human race will be vastly benefited by the increased moral influence of the papacy. The emperor says he will not die contented until he has accomplished this herculean task. Not long ago during a dinner in the officers' mess and after coffee, which followed, the kaiser explained the one great idea of his life to General Hoffmann Scholtz, inspector general of the Prussian cavalry, as follows:

Man's activity is necessarily bounded by certain limits. These limits, however, are very elastic, and I have always held that the greater a man's opportunities for having an influence with his fellow men and for performing mighty deeds in the world, the more should he labor to extend the sphere of his activity and to make it encompass events of striking moment. For myself, it is my duty first of all to watch over the national interests and to safeguard the honor of this great empire, whose destinies have been transmitted into my hands. But, apart from this and without any prejudice to it, I feel that I have other missions. There are other events in which I can take a part, other happenings wherein my influence may be of the greatest good.

The chief of these is the present unhappy position in which the head of the Catholic church finds himself in the Eternal City. That position is a consequence of the unfortunate war which the Vatican has felt obliged to wage against the Italian state. How to put an end to it the keenest diplomats so far have not understood. But that an end to it should come is quite clear to me. For years past I have dwelt in thought on the subject, but during recent events, and precisely on the occasion of the Hispano-American war, the matter has been brought home to me more deeply than ever. At moments I have grown impatient and exasperated at realizing that the one man who in certain cases could have the greatest influence as the arbiter of peace remains with his hands practically tied owing to this dull and sterile contest between Vatican and Quirinal.

The idea, as I say, has long been simmering in my mind, and I have already tried my hand at practical efforts. Misfortune and ill success, however, dogged my steps and made me momentarily relinquish my projects. My hopes were centered chiefly on the co-operation of Cardinal Sanfelice. My visit to Naples in 1896 was chiefly to see him. In the two long colloquies which there took place between us the cardinal entered heartily into my plans. All Italy knew that he was a saint. But he was at the same time a man of great shrewdness and common sense, and he frankly admitted that there was a great deal of injudiciousness in the intransigent or uncompromising attitude of Cardinal Rampolla and most of the others who surround the pope. Cardinal Sanfelice was for conciliation. Many other members of the sacred college of cardinals—the men who have in their hands the election of the pope—were also for harmony between church and state, and my hopes ran high. I conceived the idea that Cardinal Sanfelice might be named the next pope, and to this end I worked. With his nomination the popes would have ceased to lay claim to the temporal power, the Italian government would lay aside its attitude of persecution toward the church, and both would be at liberty to dedicate their entire forces to other and nobler ends.

But with the new year 1897 Cardinal Sanfelice was borne to his grave, the pope delivered a few bellicose speeches, and the Italian government redoubled its hostility. In spite of all that, I did not desist from my purpose. Other events called for my individual energies, and for the moment pope and king were left to themselves. But the good that was to be done is still to do, and I am resolved to go on with my undertaking. The entire world will gain if I can bring about the rapprochement of Leo XIII and Humbert I. No one will doubt the sincerity of my Protestant leanings, but it is precisely because I am a Protestant that I have a clear and accurate conception of the power and influence of the papacy.

At the present day two great evils threaten humanity. They are socialism and atheism. Against each of these the pope is a bulwark. In fighting infidelity no aid should be neglected. Socialism is infidelity to the monarch or the state, and atheism is infidelity to God. The pope is the spiritual ruler of the largest communion on earth, and he is by far the most powerful and authoritative of spiritual rulers. His word is promptly and willingly obeyed by hundreds of millions of people spread throughout the globe. He can order and direct the consciences of these multitudes. He can say, "These are your religious tenets; those must be your social sentiments," and suddenly he is obeyed. His power, therefore, for good is immeasurable. Kings and emperors are the divinely ordained guardians of social order and directors of social well being, just as the leaders of religious bodies are the divinely ordained moderators of conscience, but just as kings and emperors can have their beneficent influence in the religious order so can spiritual guides help and promote the social weal.

The pope's range of power is the vastest of all, and consequently the possibilities of the good he may do are the most farreaching. I think it imperative, therefore, that he be put in a position to freely accomplish all the good of which he is capable. He must be liberated from his self imposed imprisonment in the Vatican. All the trammels that surround and harass him in his daily life must be removed, so that he will then be at liberty to fight the common enemies, socialism and irreligion, and he will be in a position to make his voice heard in the interests of peace when nations go to war without just motive and in the interests of humanity when acts of cruelty or injustice are being anywhere committed.

I have meditated long and deeply on this subject. The fact that it preoccupies me so much convinces me that I am inspired to take action in the matter. It is like one of the voices that Socrates had about with him which whispers in my ear that this also is my mission to remedy the pope's position and open up the field for his range of well doing. It daily urges me to act. Whether I shall succeed or not it is beyond my power to foretell. Judging from the circumstances, there is every evidence that success should not be outside the bounds of possibility. I am going to do my utmost, and more than this no man can do. I feel for the moment that I have no other concrete and practical mission before me. To succeed in such an undertaking would be a climax and a crowning worthy of any man's life. As I say, I am going to energetically attempt it. The small preternatural voice unmistakably spurs me on, and I think than this no better augury of success could be desired.

For this moment I can say no more, and it does not behoove me to be too explicit about my plans. They are already laid, and my immediate actions will be a development of them. Their result will be their justification, and it will also be the justification of many acts in the past which may have seemed strange and unaccountable to my good Protestant subjects, but which had their motive and their origin in a desire to accomplish great and enduring events. I am acquainted with both Leo and Humbert. I know how estimable both of them are, and I feel it is a most deplorable circumstance that political imbitterment should make enemies of two men who personally are capable only of esteem and regard one for the other. But I shall not die until my ends in this regard are attained. Death otherwise would find a void in my existence, and I feel within me that I have not been born in vain.—New York Journal.

AS BUILDERS AND PRINTERS.

Work of French Catholics on an Imposing Inscription In a Paris Church.

Tens of thousands of French Catholics have acted the part of builders of the Church of the National Vow in Paris by contributing stones to the basilica. They are now called upon to act the part of printers in stone by contributing toward the inscription in the basilica of Pontmain of the words of the apparition of 1871: "Mais priez, mes enfants, Dieu vous exaucera en peu de temps. Mon Fils se laisse toucher." The inscription is to be on an imposing scale, each word being a work in itself. It is to have place in the sanctuary and is to coincide with the consecration of the basilica under its new title of that of Notre Dame de la Priere (Our Lady of Prayer), according to the recent designation of Leo XIII. The work is moving forward under the patronage of the bishop of Laval.

Contributions are coming in from all parts. A lady contributes a sum for the letter U, which occurs five times in the words of the apparition and is also the initial letter of her family name. The offering is made for the members of her family, living and dead. A superior, in the name of the religious community of which she is the head, undertakes the expense of the words "Mons Fils." The contributions already amount to 1,500 francs. More are needed. Those who thus work are working for eternity. They are making themselves coworkers of her who came to deliver the celestial message in the night sky. They are helping to form the letters which will be spelled out by future generations, "But pray, my children; God will soon answer your prayers. My Son allows himself to be moved."—London Catholic Times and Opinion.

A Zulu Priest.

There arrived in London on Aug. 11, from Italy, the first Catholic priest of the Zulu race who has ever been ordained. He is the Rev. E. K. Muller, who was only a few weeks ago raised to the priesthood in Rome. Father Muller during his stay in London celebrated mass every morning at St. Joseph's, Highgate.—New York Evening Post.

A Poem Written by the Pope Predicting His Own Death.

[Translated from the Latin.]

For the last time it shineth, inwrapped in pallid shadow;
Now, even now, the sun is setting; black night creeps on, O Leo!

Black, indeed, for thee! The veins and arteries grow dry; no longer courses through
The life giving fluid; from the exhausted frame passeth all life!
The fatal shaft of death is sped; the funeral robe is widely spread,
Wrapping the frozen, stonelike bones.

Forth flees the breath, flinging aside its broken chains;
It pants, it burns, ethereal heights to climb;
Thither its parting course it bends, to the goal of journey long and hard.
O God of Mercy, accept its tremblous offerings!

Oh, may I reach to heaven's height, my labor done unto the last,
In light and presence of my God, rejoicing in eternity!
In thee, O Virgin, was my joy; e'en though a child, I loved thee, Mother.
Oh, catch me to thy heaven! There let me be one amid its hosts.
Oh, thou auspicious God, clear I cry out, my joys are great!

Provinz Westpreußen.

Elbing. Das bei der Schichauwerft neubestellte deutsche Panzerschiff hat eine Länge von 115 Meter und eine Breite von 20.4 Meter. Die Lieferung soll am 1. Februar 1901 erfolgen. Die Kosten, ausschließlich der Armirung, belaufen sich auf 14,250,000 Mark.—Rußland bestellte bei der Schichau'schen Werft vier Torpedojäger und einen großen geschützten Kreuzer von 18,000 Pferdekräften und mit einer Geschwindigkeit von 25 Knoten.

Flatow. Der Förster des Dominiums Hohenfier hatte das seltene Glück, mit einem Doppelschuß zwei Hirsche zur Strecke zu bringen, von denen der eine ein kapitaler Zehnender, der andere ein Achtender ist; dieser ist mit Rehposten geschossen. Bemerkenswerth ist, daß dies die ersten Hirsche sind, die der Jäger in seinem Leben geschossen hat.

Rheinprovinz.

Düren. Beim Turnfest in Niederau entstand eine wüste Streitszene wegen der Preisvertheilung. Ein Turner wurde hierbei erstochen, ein zweiter schwer verletzt.

Remscheid. Der Frau Dr. med. Kahn, die an der medizinischen Fakultät der Züricher Universität promovirt hat, waren seitens der Behörde wegen Führung des Doktortitels Schwierigkeiten bereitet worden; auch war der Krankenkasse untersagt worden, die Dame als Kassenärztin anzustellen. Der Minister hat jetzt auf Grund einer königlichen Verordnung die Promotion der Dame bestätigt, sie kann daher den Doktortitel nunmehr auch in Preußen rechtlich führen.

Provinz Sachsen.

Osterburg. Ein verheerendes Feuer, wie es seit langen Jahren nicht in unserem Orte geherrscht, vernichtete die Borghardt'sche Dampfschneidemühle. Wie das Feuer, welches in einem Arbeitsraum oberhalb des Dampfkessels zum Ausbruch kam, entstanden ist, liegt in vollständigem Dunkel. Der Schaden an geschnittenen Brettern und Balken wird auf circa 20,000 Mark geschätzt. Bemerkt sei noch, daß dem Besitzer schon vor einigen Jahren sein Besitzthum gleichfalls durch Feuer vernichtet wurde.

Wahrenberg. Zwei 13 Jahre alte Knaben, Otto Wendt und Wilhelm Liebrecht, Söhne angesehener Bürger, badeten in der Elbe zwischen den Buhnen. Beide Knaben wagten sich zu weit in's Wasser und gingen unter. Auf das Geschrei der wiederauftauchenden Kinder eilte man mit einem Kahn zu Hilfe, doch war es zu spät, sie waren bereits wieder versunken und ertrunken. Erst nach fünfstündigem Suchen fand man die beiden Leichen. Beide Knaben hätten am anderen Tage ihre Geburtstage begehen können.

Provinz Schlesien.

Bunzlau. Das Queisthalbahnprojekt geht nunmehr seiner Vollendung entgegen. Die ganze Bahnstrecke mißt 27.5 Kilometer, wovon 17.5 Kilometer auf den Kreis Bunzlau entfallen. Für diesen Kreis sind die Grunderwerbskosten auf 380,000 Mark veranschlagt. Der Graf zu Solms auf Klitschdorf sowie die Gutsherren von Gießmannsdorf und Herzogswaldau haben sich bereit erklärt, den erforderlichen Grund und Boden unentgeltlich herzugeben.

Militsch. Vom Nonnenfalter arg heimgesucht sind gegenwärtig einzelne Forsten im Kreise. Zur Vernichtung des gefährlichen Falters zieht man seit Wochen die größeren Schulkinder heran, welche Tag für Tag die Wälder absuchen und die Schädlinge tödten. Mitunter gewähren die Kiefernschläge einen traurigen Anblick, da die Nadeln vollständig abgefressen sind. Auch der in diesem Jahre hier zahlreich auftretende Rüsselkäfer richtet großen Schaden an.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Kiel. Der kürzlich aus Kiaotschau heimgekehrte Obersteuermann Eduard Strebe, der an Bord des Minenversuchsschiffes „Pelikan" kommandirt war, verstarb in Folge Hitzschlages auf See während der Manöverübungen.

Ratzeburg. Der Lauenburgische Kreistag beschloß, zum Andenken an den Fürsten Bismarck eine Bismarck-Stiftung in's Leben zu rufen, die durch Sammlungen und einen Beitrag des Kreises aufgebracht werden soll. Man will die Stiftung mit einem in oder bei Ratzeburg zu errichtenden Kranken- oder Siechenhaus in Verbindung bringen, zu welchem Zwecke schon 25,000 Mark vorhanden sind. Der Kreisausschuß wird Weiteres in der Angelegenheit veranlassen.

Provinz Westfalen.

Bochum. Um dem im westfälischen Industriebezirke schon seit längerer Zeit fühlbaren Mangel an Steigern abzuhelfen, hat man an der hiesigen Bergschule Hilfskurse eingerichtet. Zwei Kurse fanden mit der jüngst abgehaltenen Abgangsprüfung ihren Abschluß. Die Prüfung erstreckte sich auf Mathematik, Mechanik, Maschinenlehre, Naturlehre, Wetterlehre und Lehre vom Abbau. Das Ergebniß war sehr günstig; sämmtlichen 132 Schülern der beiden Kurse wurde die Befähigung zur Uebernahme eines Steigerpostens ertheilt.

Dortmund. Hier mißhandelte der Händler Max Knopf sein noch nicht drei Monate altes Kind mit einem Schüreisen so schwer, daß es an den erlittenen Verletzungen starb. Der Vater behauptet, die That in angetrunkenem Zustande vollführt zu haben. Als er im Begriffe stand, nach Holland abzureisen, wurde er verhaftet.

Refined Torture.

It's on the Decrease in Plainfield now. A Citizen Explains Why.

Year in and year out many of our citizens have struggled along bearing unnecessary burdens of the back, seeking relief from sources where it could not be found, suffering the refined torture which goes with a bad back. The little conqueror has brought about a wonderous change and from all parts comes the same report, hundreds of grateful citizens hasten to endorse the good work and speak publicly of their own personal benefit. Read what this Plainfield citizen days:

Mr. F. O. Smith, of 686 West Front street, Contractor for Painting, etc., says:— "For some time past I had symptoms of kidney trouble and despite all my endeavors to get rid of it I never was successful until I obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at L. W. Randolph's drug store. There was a distressing pain across the small of my back which clung to me all the time. When I got seated at times if I moved a sharp pain struck me in the back and loins and almost made me exclain. Any change in the weather or if I caught the least cold always aggravated the trouble and caused me to suffer severely. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by one of my employes who had been cured of a long standing case of kidney complaint by their use. I commenced the treatment and derived benefit from it immediately and before I had finished the first box I was cured. It affords me pleasure to recommend such a valuable remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

GOOD JOB WORK.

THE DAILY PRESS office can do it—anything from a milk ticket to an auction bill; even larger, too.

The job department of THE DAILY PRESS office is the largest and best equipped in Plainfield or vicinity. The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.

If you need job printing at all you need the kind that reflects credit for neatness and style on you. You can get that kind

CHAPTER XXI.

With feverish anxiety Sir Roydon Garth was looking forward to his arrival at Delverton Hall, and the settlement one way or the other of his doubts and misgivings. Try as he would, he found it impossible to prevent his putting one question repeatedly to himself, although he knew that it could not be answered until he reached home. All day long he was recalling every incident of his courtship, every word and look which Lilac had given him, and trying to decide from them whether he had reason to doubt her love for him, even in the face of Major Emmott's letter.

As the end of his journey approached, and with it the moment when he expected to meet Lilac and learn the worst or the best, Sir Roy's impatience and disquietude increased. It seemed to him that the happiness of his whole life would depend upon the result of that interview. Absence from his sweetheart had only tended to increase his devotion to her, until he felt that the love of his little "prairie-flower" was the only thing in the world worth thinking about or living for.

When at last he reached Delverton, and found himself hurrying up the drive under the arched trees, it seemed to him that years must have passed since the beginning of the journey.

Halfway towards the house he caught sight of a tall graceful figure coming towards him. It was Evangeline starting out upon an errand of mercy to one of the villagers; but for a moment there flashed into the young Baronet's mind the idea that it might be Lilac, and he stood still, empowered by a hundred emotions. His heart sank a little, and he walked on slowly when he discovered his mistake.

Evangeline flew towards him with a cry of welcome, and, putting up her hands, drew down his bronzed face to kiss him affectionately. Roy had scarcely patience to receive the caress.

"Where is Lilac?" he asked, feeling that the moment was come which he had longed for and dreaded together through all his long monotonous journey.

His cousin seemed inclined to defer it.

"You must come in and see auntie, and rest and eat before you ask questions, sir," she said, with a half-hearted attempt to appear playfully imperious. But Roy ignored the suggestion.

"You have bad news for me," he said his lips so dry that his voice sounded harsh and indistinct.

Evangeline stared, wondering what had roused his suspicions. She thought it unadvisable to keep back the evil tidings any longer.

"Yes, dear—she went away as soon as your letters came," she said gently. 'She was not worthy of your love, Roy dear—"

Her cousin interrupted her with the question—

"She has gone to Mark Mowbray?"

"Yes, dear; they are to be married soon, I believe. She has stayed here all this time letting us think that she cared for you, while intending to marry this other man as soon as you came home. But you ought not to have made me tell you. You are faint and tired—"

She broke off with a cry of distress as the tall handsome man staggered back dizzily, and she threw her arm around him as if to support him. But Sir Roy put his cousin's arm away and steadied himself by an effort of will.

"It must be a mistake! I can't believe it!" he said, hoarsely; and he went on almost fiercely, "I will not believe that she has played with me in such a way until I have seen her and heard it from her own lips!"

"She has left a letter for you," answered Evangeline, quietly. "Come into the house and read it. Oh, Roy, Roy, I am so sorry! I believed in her just as much as you did; but we were forced to accept what she herself said!"

She burst into tears and walked by his side, crying silently for his distress, when he strode moodily towards the Hall.

They entered by the open French window of the morning-room, where Lady Garth was sitting writing, and the old lady sprang up to welcome back her son. But Sir Roydon Garth stood like one in a dream while she kissed him.

"I want to see her letter, mother," he said in his strangely-harsh voice; and he stood motionless while the old lady hurried to fetch it.

Evangeline spoke to him, but he made no reply.

When the fatal missive was brought to him which Lilac had written with an almost breaking heart, he tore it open and read it through, his pale face betraying nothing. Suddenly however her ladyship uttered a sharp cry of terror, for the young man swayed slightly for a moment, then fell senseless upon the floor.

* * * *

When the whole establishment at Delverton Hall had been thrown into consternation by the news that Sir Roydon had arrived from abroad only to be taken seriously ill as he entered the house, and the men-servants had been summoned to carry him, still unconscious, up to his room, and then to be despatched in hot haste to bring medical assistance, it was Lady Garth who took possession of the letter which had finally caused her son's breakdown after all the wearing anxiety that had been sapping his strength ever since the receipt of Major Emmott's letter.

"It is plain that he cannot have completely recovered from the effects of the accident at Deadman's Gulch," the Doctor said when he arrived; and his face grew very serious when the Baronet's unconsciousness changed at last to delirium.

"His constitution is a sound one, luckily," said the clever old family-practitioner, who, twenty-four years before, had assisted his patient into the world. "But he will require very careful nursing. Shall I engage a professional nurse for you, Lady Garth?"

Her ladyship shook her head.

"Evangeline and I are both considered good nurses," she said. "I think we shall be more zealous than any stranger could be—eh, Evangeline?"

Evangeline nodded, unable to speak. Her cousin's illness seemed to have affected her even more than Lady Garth.

Her ladyship would not admit that there was anything serious in her son's illness, or that the departure of his sweetheart had any particular connection with it.

"He has been overworking himself over this horrible mining business," she said to Evangeline when the Doctor had gone; "and the departure of Miss Marvel will no doubt come as a relief to him when he is well enough to realise that she is fully provided for.

The thought seemed to comfort her not a little; but in spite of the brave face she showed to her niece it required all Lady Garth's remarkable power of ignoring unwelcome facts to keep her from breaking down. For, although she would not admit it even to herself, the disturbing thought troubled her that she was in a great measure responsible for the Californian girl's sudden departure. When she read the letter which had fallen from her unconscious son's hand she felt more than ever that the writer's sudden decision to leave Roy free and marry another man was due to their interview on the night before she left Delverton.

CHAPTER XXII.

Although Lilac had stated to Evangeline, who was naturally horrified and indignant, her intention of becoming Mark Mowbray's wife, and also mentioned it in the letter she had left for Sir Roy himself, informing him that his cousin loved him and would make him a better wife than she ever could, she had no such purpose in view as that of seeking the author or of asking him to redeem the promise that he had made her on board the Gemini. She had been compelled to tell a falsehood in order to set the Baronet's mind at rest with regard to her fate, and save him from any scruples that his undoubted sense of honour would cause him to feel if he discovered or guessed that she still loved him. Her only idea when she left the Hall was to take passage back to California, and throw herself once more upon the hospitality of her uncle.

She was quite sure that the old man would be glad to have her once more with him at the ranch, and she hoped that by this time Lance's passion and resentment would have cooled a little. Whether that was the case or not, to return to Deadman's Gulch seemed the only course open to her, and she anxiously counted the money still left in her purse, wondering whether it would be sufficient to secure her a passage.

Her eyes were blinded with tears when she reached Liverpool in the evening, and she wiped them away hurriedly as, on getting out of a third-class compartment, she heard her name spoken in a very familiar voice. A tall showily dressed man, with black hair and little black eyes, had been standing on the platform at the precise spot where her carriage stopped, and he lurched forward, with his little eyes opened wide with astonishment and a pleased ring in his whining tones as he said—

"Hallo, Lil! I knew that I should find you!"

It was her cousin, Lance, but looking so different in his soft slouch hat and Inverness cape, open to reveal a white waistcoat, from which a showy gold watch chain dangled, that Lilac felt she would not have recognized him if it had not been for his voice, which she remembered only too well.

Her first feeling was one of shrinking fear, and she glanced round as if meditating escape; but the friendly way in which he grasped her hand reminded her that his power to do her an injury, even if he wished it, would be very small in England. She was in so lonely and miserable a frame of mind however that there was something cheering in the sound of his familiar voice, and the girl did not feel so utterly alone as she had done when she found his great hand clasp her own. After all, he was her cousin, and travelling alone for the first time in her life, Lilac turned towards him with a sense of protection.

"Got any luggage?" he asked. And, when Lilac pointed to her modest Gladstone bag, which was all she had brought away with her, and which she had retained with her in the railway-carriage, her cousin secured it at once for her.

"Say, Lil, are you all alone?" he asked, as she began to walk by his side down the platform.

Lilac nodded.

"He has not left you, has he?"

"Nobody has left me," she said. I am going back home of my own free will."

"Home?"

"Yes—to uncle Seth, at the ranch."

Lance burst into a harsh, unmusical laugh.

"Uncle Seth will be glad to see me back, whatever you think," the girl said, her eyes filling with tears—at which her companion laughed all the louder.

"Maybe he would be," he explained, "if he wasn't dead and the ranch sold. That is how I can afford to come over here and dress like a gentleman. But I suppose you are so used to swells now that you did not notice my fixings." As he spoke he glanced down admiringly at his white waistcoat, and seemed surprised that Lilac was not equally interested in his finery.

"Uncle Seth dead?" Lilac gasped, turning pale.

Lance answered cheerfully—

"Yes; the old skinflint died the week after you left. Sylvester had been trying to get him to sell the ranch; and, as soon as it was mine to sell, I let him have it for a very tidy price, and came over to enjoy myself and look you up. I did not think I should be so lucky, and that darned Baronet out of the way, too! Why, there is nothing to prevent our getting married at once!"

Lilac had only a dim idea of what he was saying. The news of her uncle's death had come as a great shock to her, not only because she had been fond of the hard-grained old man, as far as he would let her, but because the fact of his death and the sale of the ranch left her without a home of any kind. When the money in her purse was gone she would be entirely destitute.

When she spoke her question sounded a mercenary one.

"Did uncle Seth make any provision for me?" she asked. "He used to say that he would.

Lance flushed and laughed uneasily

"He asked me, just as he was going off—he caught a chill, you know, and went out like a candle—to look after you, and see you did not want. So it is all right, Lil. You marry me, and I will make a lady of you. I was surprised to find what a lot the old skinflint had put by! Why, we can live like fighting cocks!"

"But I cannot marry you, Lance," said Lilac, with her eyes full of tears as she thought of the poor old man who had derived so little enjoyment from his money while he lived and gained so little gratitude for it when he was gone.

"Can't marry me? Why it is just the thing! Of course it's kind of me, I know," drawled Lance, after the way you have been carrying on with that high-flown Britisher; but I always meant to marry you and I won't draw back just because I have a little dust! Come round here, where there are not so many people, and let us talk it over."

Lilac followed her cousin obediently to a side-platform, which was quite deserted, except for the presence of one man on a seat, hidden behind a newspaper, in which he seemed too deeply interested to notice any one passing by.

"But I cannot marry you, Lance, because I do not love you," said Lilac pathetically, sad to have to anger the only friend that she seemed to have left to her.

Lance was very angry indeed.

"Come, Lil," he said, his voice changing—"that was all very well when there was another man in the way; but you say yourself that you have got tired of him and were going back to the ranch. It is lucky for him that you did tire of him, because I should not have let him stand in my way."

"I have not tired of Sir Roydon Garth,' said Lilac quietly, thinking it best to speak quite plainly to her cousin, so that he might dismiss all thought of marriage with her. "If I do not marry him, it is only for his sake; and I shall love him as long as I live."

Her companion's face grew white with passion.

"You love the skunk still, and, after all, he won't marry you? By Heaven, I will kill him for you!"

The girl was alarmed at the savagery in his voice and did her best to explain. Her cousin's face changed when he heard that the lovers had not been together since Lilac left San Francisco.

"You are a sensible girl, Lil," he said, "not to marry one of those high-flown British aristocrats. You would never be happy. Why don't you forget all about him and marry me?"

"I cannot, Lance. You must not ask me," she said, frightened by his earnestness.

"But I love you," Lance cried fiercely. "I have never cared for anybody but you and never shall. And look here, Lil—I swear that, if you do not marry me, you shall marry nobody else! I'll kill you first!"

They had reached the farther end of the deserted platform, and the hulking Californian put down the bag he was carrying, as if intending to take the girl's hands. In stepping back to avoid him, Lilac would have fallen over the edge of the platform if he had not caught her. He drew her back to a position of safety, but did not release his grasp of her arm.

"Do you know that I could kill you here, and nobody would be the wiser?" he said savagely. "See those red lights? That is a train coming in. What is to prevent my pushing you over in front of it, and saying that you fell by accident? Now tell me whether you will marry me or not!"

As he spoke he pushed her back almost to the edge of the platform, and there was a savage light in his little black eyes which terrified her.

"Don't, Lance—don't!" she cried in alarm. "You will let me fall without meaning to do so."

"Then say that you will marry me!"

"I cannot, Lance."

He pushed her farther back, so that she retained her footing on the platform only with difficulty. The approaching train was coming nearer. He was merely trying to frighten her, but he was so excited and so maddened by her persistent refusal to marry him, just as he had been assuring himself that the obstacle he had been fearing in the person of Sir Roydon Garth no longer stood in his path, that Lilac's position was a sufficiently dangerous one. She tried to scream, but the cry died in her throat through sheer terror.

"Say you will marry me!" hissed the bully once more, but as he uttered the words, his voice was strangled by the drawing tight of his collar, as a strong hand seized him from behind and flung him backwards, reeling, across the platform.

Owing to his hold of her arm, Lilac was drawn forward a few steps, clear of the incoming train. The man who had been engrossed in his newspaper had put it down in time to notice her danger and come to her assistance. He stood now with his face turned towards Lance Marvel, so that Lilac did not see his face at once.

"You great, hulking brute," he said fiercely to the bully, who hung back afraid now that he had a man to deal with instead of a helpless girl, "you ruffianly coward—what are you doing?"

Lilac had not recognized his figure in the obscure light any more than he had recognized hers, but the moment that he spoke she knew the voice as once, and sprang forward, with a little cry of pleasure at finding a friend.

"Mr. Mowbray!" she cried; and the author turned in utter astonishment just as two porters came up to meet the incoming train and put an end to any further chance of violence on Lance's part, if he had had courage enough to meditate any.

Mark ignored him entirely in the delight of meeting his "ideal woman" when he so little expected it.

"My dear Miss Marvel," he said, his musical voice full of pleasure as he took her hand; and then he stopped suddenly and caught her slight form in his arms, for, overcome by all that she had passed through, this last surprise had been too much for the girl's nerves, and she had fainted."

Till now Lilac had been keenly on the alert for her own safety. Now that the presence of her author friend relieved her from any such necessity she collapsed suddenly, and, if Mark had not caught her quickly in his arms, she would have fallen upon the platform.

When she recovered consciousness, she found herself in a waiting room, alone with her rescuer, who bent over her with a glass of brandy in his hand which an obliging porter had brought him.

"Where is Lance?" she asked, when she opened her eyes.

"Who is that—the man who tried to kill you, or pretended to be about to do so?"

"Yes—he is my cousin Lance Marvel, from Deadman's Gulch," explained Lilac, sitting up. "How have you got rid of him?"

She was still full of terror and the author hastened to reassure her.

"Your precious cousin is in custody," he said. "I had him locked up for attempting your life; but we need not proceed against him unless you wish it. I shall not give him a chance of bullying you again. Try to drink a little of this brandy—it will make you feel stronger—and then rest a bit. You need not be afraid; I will take good care of you now that we have met again."

Lilac obeyed, with a pleasant sense of being cared for.

"You will be wondering what I am doing in Liverpool," she said, after a little while; but Mark showed no curiosity.

"There will be plenty of time to talk about that when you feel better," he said. "You were not waiting for anybody, were you?"

"No; I was alone. I do not know where I shall go next."

"Then I will tell you. As soon as you feel strong enough, we will get into a cab and drive to my mother's. She has heard a great deal about you, and will be delighted to welcome you."

"But were you not leaving Liverpool? Why were you at the station?"

"I was waiting for a friend who was travelling by the train which arrived as you fainted. He did not expect me to meet him however, so it does not matter. It is lucky, though, that I thought of coming to meet him, and got here a little before the train was due. You must have passed me with your worthy cousin when I was deep in my newspaper. It has a scathing attack on my last book, and I found it very interesting. Do you think that with my help you could now walk to a cab?"

Lilac stood up at once.

"I am quite strong," she said. "I do not know what made me so foolish as to faint; But"—she hesitated—"but I have no claim upon you that you should take such an interest in me, Mr. Mowbray."

"I thought that we were friends," he said, in his most matter-of-fact tones; "and my mother, I need hardly say, will be really pleased to see you, even if you are unwilling to do more than pay her a complimentary visit."

Lilac glanced up at him gratefully.

"Besides, I am very anxious to hear all about you—what brings you to Liverpool, and what you have been doing since we parted; and it will be pleasanter to talk at home than here, where we may be disturbed at any moment. I wonder that we have had the room to ourselves for so long."

As he spoke he offered her his arm; and poor Lilac felt too utterly friendless, now that the chance of returning to her uncle's roof was lost, to make any further protest against his kindness. In five minutes more they were seated in a cab and driving rapidly through the streets on their way to the author's home.

The girl felt as if she were in a dream, from which must come an awakening that it terrified her to think of. She dared not consider the future. What chance would she have, without training or accomplishments of any sort, to support herself in a world of strangers? When the few pounds in her purse were spent, she would be utterly destitute. For, although she knew that Mr. Mowbray would offer her the hospitality of his home as long as she cared to accept it, Lilac was much too proud to think of accepting it when she could give nothing in return. She knew well enough what return Mark was hoping she would give, but her love was not hers to bestow. Much as she liked the kindly young author, her love was all Roy's. She felt that she must tell her companion as soon as possible the true facts of the case, and prevent him from building upon her acceptance of his hospitality hopes that were not destined to be fulfilled. She seized the first opportunity.

"Well," said Mark, almost as soon as the drive had begun—"have you found me a true prophet? Finding you alone here makes me think that you have"

"I have found only what I expected," Lilac said slowly. "You were wrong in saying that Sir Roydon Garth would not treat me honorably. He is the soul of honor, and I care for him more than I can ever care for anybody else in the world. I left his home before he returned because I care for him so much. I found as I expected, that I should not make a fit wife for him, that I should only stand in the way of the marriage which he ought to make, and so I was going back to California. But when I reached Liverpool I met Lance at the station, and he told me that I have no longer a home to go to. Uncle Seth is dead, and the ranch sold. I am quite homeless!" Her voice quivered as she spoke, and her eyes filled with tears.

"You must not say that while my mother's house is at your service," he said, in his low, musical voice; and then, suddenly carried away by the sight of the tears in her eyes, he forgot the restraint he had imposed upon himself, and turned towards her, his face glowing with passionate love. "I shall always be your friend, whatever happens, Lilac," he said, speaking rapidly and earnestly. "But won't you let me be something more? You know that I love you. I have loved you every moment from the first day I saw you at sea, and every day since I have thought about you, and longed to make you my wife. I do not expect you to love me just yet; but I will win your love, and make you forget this man who is unworthy of you. You are right perhaps in thinking that you would not be happy amid a crowd of cold proud aristocrats, who would never forget that you were not one of them; but I am a Bohemian, and move in a Bohemian circle, where brains and beauty are everything and the accidents of birth meet with the contempt they deserve. I have wealth to render you happy; and I am sure that I should induce you to care for me because I love you so much."

The tears were now streaming from Lilac's eyes, and she made no attempt to check them; but she shook her head hopelessly.

"You must not ask me," she said. "I would do anything to please you, since you are so good to me; but how could I make you happy if I gave you my hand while my heart was really another's? You must not think of it. It is wrong of me to accept your hospitality when I can never agree to your proposal. I oughtn't to have thought of it. Please let the cab take me to some cheap hotel, where I should have gone if I had not met you."

The earnestness with which she spoke made the man exert all his self-control to restrain his passion.

"You must not talk about going among strangers while you have friends," he said. I should be a queer friend if I insisted upon your marrying me as the price of a few days' hospitality. Forgive me for having mentioned my love, and promise to regard me again only as a friend! You must see my mother, and stay with us at least until we have thought out some plan for your future I shall think that I have offended you if you do not."

"You cannot think that when you have been so kind."

"Say that you will be our guest, then, for a little time."

"You are too kind to me. Everybody is so much kinder than I deserve; and I feel as though I bring nothing but unhappiness to everybody."

"That is foolish," Mark said, in his matter-of-fact tone. "It is a great happiness to be able to serve you. You will come?"

Lilac bowed her head.

"Thank you very much!" she said. "But perhaps your mother will not like me?"

"I suppose Garth's mother did not," the young author observed sagely; "but you will find my mother very different, as you will see for yourself—for here we are."

A Divided Family.

Five dwarfs and five full grown and well developed people constitute the family of George Washington Washer, who resides at Three Fork, Warren county, Kentucky. The family of ten members is equally divided in size, the father and four children being dwarffs and the mother and four children being of the regulation size and weight. George W. Washer, the father and husband, is about three and one-half or four feet high, and will weigh something like 100 pounds. While his arms and legs are no longer than those of a well grown boy of eight years, he has the head and body of a full grown man. All of the dwarf children take after their father. The mother and the other four children have no peculiarities in personal appearance. All of the family are bright and intelligent, are well educated and no better family of citizens reside in that county than that of the Washers. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Pat and the Peas.

In an Eastern county court the judge was in a quandary the other day. A coat was in dispute. The parties were Irish, and the evidence was direct and positive for both claimants. After much wrangling Patrick Peters, one of the parties, proposed that he and his opponent, Timothy Maguire, should see whose name was on the coat. Timothy searched in vain, and the coat was handed to Pat, who immediately took his knife, opened a corner of the collar of the coat, and out dropped two small peas.

"There, d'ye see that now?" said he.

"Yes; but what of that?" said Timothy.

"A dale it 'as to do wid it! It is my name, to be sure—pea for Patrick, and pea for Peters, be jabbers!"

He got the coat after that.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK JAIL.

Desperate Gang of Burglars Dug a Hole Almost Through the Jail Wall.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, September 22.—It is believed by the Somerset county jail authorities that John Hoyt, Jerome Kirk, John Moore, Robert Dalley and George Johnson, the five men who were arrested in a cave near this place last Sunday, attempted to break jail. The prisoners had almost succeeded in digging a large hole through the outside wall, and in a short time would have had their liberty, but for the fact that they were turned over to the Hunterdon county authorities to answer to charges brought against them. The men are now kept in close confinement in Hunterdon county jail.

MR. CHAMBERLIN HOME.

Return After Reporting the War for the New York Sun.

E. O. Chamberlin, of Madison avenue, has received word that his son, Wilbur J. Chamberlin, a New York Sun correspondent, who was wrecked off Cuba Sept. 8th, has arrived in Jersey City, his home. Mr. Chamberlin and the crew of the press boat were picked up by a passing vessel and taken to Key West. After being detained in quarantine for four days he was released and came north as soon as he could get transportation.

Mr. Chamberlin went to Cuba at the outbreak of the war and was in the thick of the fight from start to finish. Although in the fever district, Mr. Chamberlain is in perfect heath and has kept well all through the summer.

elaborately trimmed with American flags. The Union county delegation was seated on the first floor under the gallery. Somerset delegates were located in the gallery. Hudson and Essex occupied the choice seats of the theatre.

The convention was called to order at 12:10 o'clock by Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee. Attorney-General Griggs was named for chairman. After ascending to the stage he delivered a short speech, praising Republicanism in both State and National affairs.

The secretaries chosen for the convention are: Charles H. Bateman, Somerset; Alexander C. Yard, Mercer; Charles Bacon, Camden; W. Scott Snyder, Ocean; J. Herbert Potts, Hudson; Orville E. Hoyt, Atlantic; Charles N. Robinson, (colored) Camden.

The committee selected to draft a platform consists of Secretary of State Wurts, Major Anderson, Senator Johnson, of Bergen, Senator Stokes, of Cumberland and Congressman Gardner, of Atlantic.

The convention was in session only a short time when General Sewell moved that it adjourn for fifteen minutes to give the committees a chance to confer. The fifteen minute recess was prolonged an hour.

Soon after the convention was called to order Congressman Pitney was spied at the head of the Morris county delegation and the delegates broke out into a tumult of cheers for the Congressman, which lasted several minutes.

The nomination speech will be made by Congressman Fowler, of Elizabeth.

There is no man at the convention who is regarded with much more importance than Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield. He is one of the busiest men around the convention. The nomination of Voorhees will be made by the secretary casting a ballot made of a solid gold plate suitably inscribed. The idea of this is from Mr. Murray's fertile brain.

A number of colored politicians from Plainfield, headed by Billy Kline and "Gamey" Nelson were around all the the morning on a still hunt for promises of something in the way of booty in patronage if the Republicans win this fall.

Sheriff Kirk and former Assemblyman Codington were among the prominent Plainfielders present.

At the preliminary meeting of the State executive committee last night, to arrange the smaller details of the convention today, there were several outsiders, including Attorney-General Griggs and Governor Voorhees, Gen. Sewell only found it necessary to positively assert himself once in the meeting. A proposition was made that a committee be appointed to elect a secretary of the State committee to fill the vacancy that has existed since the death of John Y. Foster, and it was suggested that the Gubernatorial nominee be one of the committeemen. The General thought this a very bad scheme, and told the assemblage that they must not put the nominee on the committee. The candidate, he said, if a member of the committee, would be overrun with applications for the secretaryship. Of course, Sewell's wish prevailed.

The committee to select the secretary was then named and consists of Franklin Murphy, of Essex; Major Anderson, of Somerset; Congressman Loudenslager, of Gloucester; John Kean, of Union, and William Bettle, of Camden. It is understood that the secretary will be either W. Scott Snyder, of Ocean, who has served as assistant secretary for a number of years, or Augustus Barber, of Gloucester.

D. C. Blair, State committeeman from Warren county, resigned from the committee, and his cousin, A. Blair Kelsey, was chosen as his successor.

The committee decided upon Newark as permanent headquarters.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A very interesting sight is to be seen in the window of G. L. VanEmburgh & Son, the dry goods merchants of West Front street. It is a piece of plate of the main superstructure of the U. S. Battleship Texas ith a hole therein that was made by a one-pounder shell fired from the Spanish Battleship Cristobol Colon at the Santiago fight in July. There are several indentures in the plate besides. The plate was secured by Walter Arlington Clark, of West Front street, who is employed in a steel works in New York city, where Government work is done.

JOTTINGS OF THE DAY.

ENTERPRISINGLY GATHERED AND CONCISELY TOLD BY REPORTERS.

Newsy Notes of More or Less Importance Bunched Together for the Ready Reference of Press Readers

—Don't forget the Democratic primaries tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock in each ward.

—There was a regular meeting of Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, last evening.

—It will pay all housewives to read S. Scheuer & Co's advertisement in today's paper.

—F. W. Dunn, whose sign was blown down in the tornado two weeks ago, has had it replaced.

—Canning and table peaches are still holding the fort at Neuman Bros. The fruit is fine and prices right.

—It has been remarked that Plainfield society folks are rather slow in starting the fall and winter social season.

—Next Monday evening there will be an important meeting of Plainfield Council, No 711. Royal Arcanum, and every member is urged to attend.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

J. H. P. Wharton, of this city, left yesterday on a business trip.

The condition of Allen Laine, of Craig Place, is reported as slightly improved today.

Miss Mary L. Thickstun, of 407 Central avenue, has returned from Belmar, where she spent the summer.

Mr. Broomfield, regent of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has returned from his summer outing.

L. W. MacIntosh, bookkeeper at L. M. French's carriage repository, is unable to be at business on account of an attack of rheumatism.

Mrs. Auguste Saltzman, of this city, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Fritts, at Hawley, Wayne county, Pa., is reported to be quite ill with pneumonia. The relatives in this city have not received any word recently concerning her condition.

CLAMBAKE AND FUN.

Well-Known Men Enjoy an Outing on a Samptown Farm.

The Powers' farm, near Samptown, was the scene of a large gathering of professional men yesterday afternoon at the clambake given by Counsellor W. K. McClure, ex-Assemblyman Klotz, of New Brunswick, and Henry Haurand. The bake began early in the afternoon and was over by 7 o'clock.

"Billy" Brown was the chef, and the bake was one of the best that he has ever had charge of.

There were about fifty present, and the company comprised many of the lawyers of this city besides well-known men in other walks of life. To while away the afternoon two shoots were arranged, a miss and out shoot in which there were 15 contestants, and a match. Henry Haurand and P. Jay were the only two left in the miss and out shoot, and both received a prize, a gigantic pumpkin.

Two teams were made up of nine men on a side, called the Hayseeds and the Buckwheats. Each man shot atten birds, and the Hayseeds won the match by a score of 63 to 62.

Henry Haurand supplied the table and the Plainfield Bottling Company furnished the liquids free of cost.

Opening of Trolley Tonight.

This evening the formal opening of the trolley line in the borough of Duncllen will take place. Arrangements have been made with the Plainfield Street Railway for a trolley car and power for the event. The power will be turned on the new extension at 8 o'clock. The car will first carry the officials of the company and borough over the extension, after which a bannuet will be given at Taylor's Hotel. The car will then continue to run every fifteen minutes and will carry people free.

The Cadi's Damaged Eye.

City Judge DeMeza is wearing a green patch over his right eye today as the result of a little accident he met with last night. The Judge had come in late and was putting up his horse and wagon in the dark. In stooping over the wheel to get something out of the bottom of the carriage his eye came in contact with the hard tire and made a painful bruise.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers from North Plainfield have been recorded during the past week: W. H. H. Wyckoff, sheriff, to Millinery Building and Loan Association, North Plainfield, $1,600; Township of North Plainfield to John Zellar, North Plainfield, $1; Rebecca Stewart et al to John B. Mills, North Plainfield, $500.

Writ of Attachment Removed.

The writ of attachment which was placed on Mr. Dallas' goods, by Justice Nash for James Arnold, the Somerset street grocer, has been removed, the defendant having paid the grocery bill of $4.19 for which the attachment was issued.

CABLES CATCH WHALES.

One Sixty Feet Long Killed by the Western Brazilian Line.

Submarine cables are usually imbedded in the slimy bottom of the ocean, but at certain points they hang like wire bridges over deep submarine valleys, so that whales and other large inhabitants of the deep may become dangerous to the cable. Once in a while it is the cable that becomes dangerous to the whales, as recently shown in an accident to the Western Brazilian line.

There was some difficulty with the wire, and after many futile efforts the seat of the trouble was discovered seventy-six miles north of Santa Catharina. The cable ship Viking was sent to repair the damage, and began to take up the wire.

After the cable proper had been grappled and was wound to the surface on the large drums provided for the purpose, it was found that it floated very much easier and was more buoyant than was usually the case.

The reason was discovered when in a loop of the cable the carcass of a whale of more than sixty feet in length came into view. It appears that the whale had become caught under the cable, and, not being able to lift it nor go forward or back, it became suffocated. By its last spasms or attempts to free itself, the whale had damaged the cable so that the insulation was rubbed off and the wire became useless.

After a Chinese Wedding.

On the day following a Chinese wedding, at least in certain provinces, the bride's youngest brother goes to inquire after her and to take a present from her mother of a bottle of hair oil. This is a custom so ancient that none knows the origin thereof. No further communications take place between the bride and her family for three months, when her mother sends a sedan chair and an invitation to visit her. If there has been neither a birth nor a death in her husband's or in her mother's house for 100 days she goes and makes a short stay at her old home. This visit over, she cannot see her mother again until after her first child is born, and not then should the child be a girl. Even then if there has been a death in either family the visit cannot be made, and there have been many instances where a mother and daughter living very near each other have not met for years.—Boston Post.

Give and It Shall be Given You.

There is in Austria a monastery which, in former times, was very rich, and remained rich so long as it was charitable to the poor; but when it ceased to give, then it became indigent, and is so to this day. Not long since, a poor man went there and solicited alms, which was denied him. He demanded the reason why they refused to give for God's sake. The porter of the monastery answered: "We are become poor;" whereupon the mendicant said, "The cause of your poverty is this: Ye had formerly in the monastery two brethren, the one named Date (give), and the other Dabitur (it shall be given you). The former ye thrust out; the other went away of himself."

A Lot of Rheumatism.

Old Lady—Where is your husband, Mrs. De Long?

Mrs. De Long—He couldn't come. He has the rheumatism all over him.

Old Lady—Goodness me! And he's over six feet in height!

A Woman President of a Model Town.

There is in Russia a district which is wholly administered and during most of the time exclusively inhabited by women. It is the Province of Smolensk, and comprises a district of about fifteen square miles, from which all the able-bodied males emigrate in the spring and proceed to neighboring towns and districts in search of work, remaining away about nine months of the year. In their absence the women cultivate the fields and manage local affairs generally, under the presidency of a woman Mayor. Before nightfall the women assemble in a sort of clubhouse and play cards till one or two in the morning. Virtue there is compatible with unlimited cakes and ale and though the hours are late and so much time is given to amusement, the commune is prosperous, disorder is unknown, and it is one of the best conducted portions of the Empire. The Czarina takes an interest in it and is proud of it, as she has every reason to be.—New York Tribune.

One of Grant's Appointments.

President Grant appointed Pillow P. Bliss of Mitchell Chief Justice of the Territorial Supreme Court of South Dakota, who since then has held many responsible positions, but who, up to that time, enjoyed no legal education. He was a cabinet-maker by trade, and just before going to Dakota he manufactured for himself a very nice office desk, which he took with him. Shortly after his arrival some one discovered his private memoranda, and they were passed around among the members of the bar. He had noted thus: "Ult. means last month; inst. means this month; prox. means next month," etc. On various occasions when the attorneys would object to his rulings as not law or good sense, he would reply: "Gentlemen, this is the law as laid down by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Dakota Territory, and it goes." He was nicknamed "Old Necessity," because necessity knows no law.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

STATE CONVENTION WAS OF ONE MIND.

A More Harmonious Gathering Never Took Place.

VOORHEES THE ONLY MAN.

REPUBLICANS UNITED IN THEIR SUPPORT OF "WAR GOVERNOR."

Union County and Roger Murray Were Prominent in Trenton—County Delegation Did Not Get Choice Seats—Murray's Gold Ballot for Voorhees—Booms Started in Somerset Delegation.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, Sept. 23.—Never in all the annals of either political party in Jersey was there a convention like the one held yesterday by the Republicans.

There was not the slightest suggestion of anything but the most satisfactory amiable understanding among the three hundred odd Republicans who gathered there from all parts of the State from Cape May to Sussex. There was a unity of ideas on the part of the G. O. P.ites that was remarkable to behold. Foster M. Voorhees, the "War Governor," was the logical candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination and to him every delegate looked. There were other aspirants for the honors, but they seemed to recognize that Voorhees was the man for the place and turned to and lent a hand in rallying the party around him.

It was a remarkable convention and everybody remarked on the fact. While it was a foregone conclusion for several days before the convention that Voorhees would surely be nominated, there was no certainty but that other points might come up to cause trouble in the ranks. If there were, nobody saw them, and the political sea was calm indeed.

As Foster Voorhees came from Union county, it was eminently proper for the delegation from that county to assume the role of an important body. The little silk badges, proclaiming Voorhees as candidate for the nomination for Governor, worn in 1895, were rejuvenated by many of the Union county delegation and worn in addition to their fancy delegation emblem of silk. As chairman of the county committee, Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, was a very busy man. But he was not a whit more busy than Plainfield's Assemblyman, Roger F. Murray. Murray went down the night before and was on his feet most of the time after his arrival at Trenton button-holing, or being button-holed. He took an active part in the preliminary work of the convention, and was prominent in the council-of-war in which the county honors at the convention were partitioned out.

Murray was the most active of the Plainfield delegates, nearly half of which did not arrive until it was almost time for the convention to open. At the county caucus, held at the Trenton House in the morning, neither the Second nor Fourth wards were represented.

The scheme of a gold ballot originated with Assemblyman Murray, although he passed it off as a gift of the Plainfield delegates. It was a handsome solid gold plate, properly engraved, and gotten up for Murray by R. H. Radford, of Plainfield. It was a great pity that through a misunderstanding the ballot was not produced at the opportune moment, as the ballot cast by the convention for Voorhees had to be written on a scrap of paper.

Owing to the prominence that Union county attained as the home of the candidate, the Union delegation considered that they were entitled to one of the choice positions in the Opera House. Their expectations were in vain, however. The committee from the State committee, placed them on the main floor but up under the gallery where they were almost hidden. It was agreed that when Voorhees should be named the delegation should make themselves heard in some way, but the hubub was so great on all sides that any special demonstration on the part of the Union county men was impossible.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler was selected as a worthy citizen of Union county to nominate her man, and he did it very successfully. Fowler has quite a dramatic manner about him that was particularly appropriate on this occasion. His speech brought forth roars of applause.

As there wasn't anything to fight about regarding the Gubernatorial candidate, it was expected that there would be a cloudburst of sundry booms for county and township offices among the different delegations. Some of the

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

PRETTY NUPTIAL AFFAIR IN HOPE CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

Miss Annie Hangliter is Now Mrs. Adam Angerbauer—Married Under a Bell of Golden Rod, Which Really Rang.

The wedding bells rang merrily in Hope Chapel last evening for the first time in many months at the marriage of Miss Annie Hangliter, daughter of Robert P. Hangliter, of 225 Monroe avenue, to Adam Angerbauer, of 318 East Third street, a popular young clerk in Smith Brothers' grocery store. The young couple were united in matrimony by the pastor of the chapel, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, at 7:30 o'clock, in the presence of about sixty invited guests, and many more friends of both the young people, who came in to witness the ceremony.

The couple are both well-known to the society of the West End, and were started out on their matrimonial life with best wishes from a host of friends. They will reside for the present at the groom's home, on East Third street, but later expect to go to housekeeping.

The wedding party, consisting of the ushers, maid-of-honor, bride and her father, entered the chapel from the rear, and moved down the main aisle to the front where they were met by the groom and his best man. The pulpit was decorated with golden rod and greens, and directly over the heads of the bride and groom hung a marriage bell of golden rod, in which was hidden a dinner bell. Just at that point in the ceremony when the clergyman placed the ring on the bride's finger, some one behind the scenes pulled an invisible wire and set the dinner bell to ringing.

Consternation reigned on all sides for a few moments, but after some explanations the ceremony proceeded, and the minister gave his blessing on the alliance.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white organdie, and carried a bunch of bridal roses. Miss Laura E. Hangliter, the bride's sister, was maid-of-honor, and was dressed in flowered organdie. She too carried flowers. The ushers were Edward Hangliter, of Philadelphia, and Wm. Hangliter, of this city, brothers of the bride; James Slorah and W. B. Sutton. Henry Angerbauer, the groom's brother, was best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, and an opportunity given the guests to inspect the presents. They were numerous and consisted of household furniture, a handsome silver service from an aunt, a couch from the groom's fellow-clerks, a pretty wall-pocket from the bride's Sunday-school teacher, and other gifts from numerous friends. Supper was served and the couple received the congratulations modestly. There were present guests from Buffalo, Cleveland, Philadelphia and this city.

The wedding march at the chapel was played by Councilman William N. Runyon.

J. W. REINHART'S MOTHER DEAD.

Passed Away at Her Home in Pittsburg Last Saturday.

Mrs. A. G. Reinhart, mother of Joseph W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, died last Saturday at her home, Edgewood, Pittsburg, Pa., after a few days' illness. She was the daughter of James McHenry, who was born in Pittsburg in 1787, and a member of the family which gave James McHenry to the cabinets of Washington and Adams. She lived a life marked by sincere piety and benevolent work, which impressed her character deep in the esteem of those who knew her. She was seventy-eight years old, and the family has been a resident in Pittsburg for 111 years. The funeral services were held last Monday from her late home.

Case Discontinued in One Court.

Murphy & Blatz, representing Adam Fritz in his case brought against Meyers Compton, who is represented by Lawyer William DeMeza, succeeded in securing a discontinuance of the case in Justice Mattison's court this morning. Now the case will be tried over again. It is said that Justice Smalley, in whose court the case was first started, would not discontinue the case, hence the case was taken into the court of Justice Mattison.

FEW PLAINFIELDERS TO PLAY FOOTBALL.

Players Are Working and Can't Spare Time.

MANY GONE TO COLLEGE.

THE PLAYING WILL BE CONFINED TO THE HOLIDAYS.

Almost All of Last Year's Team is Unable to Get Away From Business Duties—Will Meet Good Teams on Election Day and Thanksgiving Day—Rutgers Team Wants to Play.

There is a general feeling of regret among those who are interested in outdoor sports that Plainfield will not see a football eleven in regular games during the season. There are none, however, more disappointed than the players themselves who have found much enjoyment in the game. The present situation precludes the possibility of an eleven of any strength to play regularly every week. Lack of time on the part of the managers and the players would make any attempt farcical.

Early in the season, there seemed a great chance for Plainfield to put a representative eleven on the field. Both Elizabeth and Orange had given up their big teams and were far nearer in line with Plainfield. Then several of the less powerful college teams, including Rutgers, Stevens Institute and New York University, had expressed a willingness to meet the Plainfield boys on the gridiron. The Knickerbocker Athletic Club and the San Remos, who are practically the New York A. C., were quite anxious to schedule games.

When the supporters of the team began to count up the available material, it began to appear that there were many losses from the usual squad without sufficient gains to make up for them. The players of last year's Alis team, while thoroughly up in the game, are still too light to be of much use on the big team. Behind the line the losses were the greatest. George Cathcart, one of the mainstays of the team, will be unable to play at all on account of business duties that will occupy him Saturday afternoons. Harry McGee, who fitted so nicely into the position of full back last year, will be unable to play Saturdays for the same reason. Thomas U. Smith, the well-known half, is also kept off the gridiron on account of business. Teddy Freeman will be unable to resume his old place behind the line as his health will not permit. Darling finds business and health a double reason to keep him off the field.

Lou Waring, good at either quarter or end, cannot play but every other week, while Roy T. Phillips, captain of last year's Alis team and sub-quarter, is now a business man in New York. Henry Ryder is not available for end. Edgar I. Serrell is still ready to line up at end. George Snediker may be able to don the moleskin suit if his studies at the New York University Law School do not interfere. Fletcher Hallock and Will McClure, the tackles, are both available.

All the candidates for the positions of guards are gone. Business duties will prevent both Ed. Brown and "Shorty" Milne from playing. Nathan E. Lewis is away at Stevens Institute. Thomas A. Cuming will play, but he is anxious to give up his old position at centre and try for tackle, for which he is far better qualified, being much too light for the central position on the line. Then there are other candidates who will be unable to play for various reasons.

Rather than make a farce of the team, it was deemed best to give up the idea of a regular schedule and confine the efforts of the supporters to two games, one Election Day and another Thanksgiving. Most of the players can get off on both of those occasions and then there will be considerable material available in the Plainfield boys returning from college.

It was intended to have the team play under the management of the Riverdale Field Club, but nothing will be done in the matter now. Last year's management will look after those two games and they will form the only important games here. While the teams for those occasions have not yet been settled upon, they will probably be Rutger's College or Stevens Institute and the San Remos or Long Branch A. C.

One Candidate Initiated.

A very interesting meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., was held last evening, at which time one member was initiated. In the good of the order those present had an unusually good time.

THE ATHLETIC GIRLS.

FEMININE BASKET BALL PLAYING HAS BEEN RESUMED.

A Practice Game Has Been Played and Resulted in a Very Exciting Contest—Awaiting Decision About Coaching.

Wednesday afternoon saw the resumption of basket ball among the girls of the Plainfield High School. Since the annual meeting of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School when it was decided to continue the game this winter, the young women interested in the game have been very anxious to start practice at once. The class of 1900, now Juniors, prepared to open the season Wednesday with preliminary practice under the direction of their coach, Superintendent H. M. Maxson.

Eight of the Juniors assembled in the gymnasium on the second floor of the Whittier building at the time set. Two girls from the lower classes were taken in to complete the two teams of five girls each. Mr. Maxson found it impossible to come so the game went on alone.

A practice game was played after some informal practice and resulted in a very exciting contest. The new players were delighted with the game and their is every prospect that the High School will see three or possibly four girls' basket ball teams playing before the winter is over.

As soon as the important question of coaches is decided, the other teams beside the Juniors will begin practice.

$150 BUGGY WRECKED.

An Exciting Runaway That Occurred in Washington Valley Yesterday.

A runaway occurred in Washington Valley yesterday in which a $150 buggy, recently purchased by Harry Acker, was wrecked beyond repair. Acker, who lives just beyond the mountains, had harnessed a spirited horse to the buggy preparatory to taking a morning drive.

Acker had just left the animal's head for a moment, when something about the bridle gave way. This frightened the horse and he started away on a mad run, dragging the buggy behind him. Round and around the barnyard he ran, the vehicle catching against posts and the side of the barn until there was nothing left of the buggy except a few odd pieces still attached to the shafts.

The horse finally stopped and suffered himself to be disentangled from the wreckage. As there was no one in the buggy, there was no one to check the animal's flight.

CEMETERY FOR A SHORT CUT.

School Children Said to Use Evergreen Cemetery in a Wrong Manner.

Complaint has been made to the authorities that the school children are using the Evergreen cemetery, on Plainfield avenue, as a short cut from their homes to school. In this way the cemetery has become a playground for the children, who desecrate the graves and run up and down the paths and roads.

The people who live in that vicinity are most all Roman Catholics, who have no interest in the old cemetery, but when those go there whose friends and relatives sleep beneath the sod, they feel hurt and pained at the little reverence that seems to be shown the burial plot.

AN INFORMAL TEA.

Pleasant Social Event at the Home of Miss Wood.

A very charming informal tea was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Katherine Wood and Miss Anne Miller, daughter of Major Miller, of LaGrande avenue, at the home of Miss Wood's father, Francis Wood, 313 Franklin place. The assistants in receiving were Miss Wood and Miss Mary Miller, sisters of the hostesses, Misses Marion Bowen, Mabel Pierson, Annie Miller, Margaret Tracy, Gertrude Baker and Edith Gilbert.

Not a Financial Success.

Music Hall held a small audience last evening when Rev. H. W. McKane, of the borough, gave a lecture with illustrated views of the Spanish-American war. The views were first-class and the descriptive talk was an enjoyment to those present. During the evening Mrs. McKane rendered two vocal solos, accompanied by Wm. E. MacClymont. From a financial standpoint the affair was not a success, but otherwise it was in every particular a pleasure.

An Informal Affair.

The Misses Wilcox, of Fairview avenue, gave an informal social and reception at their home last evening in honor of their cousin, Miss Minnie W. Doremus, of East Orange. There were about fifteen guests present and an evening of great pleasure was had by all. Refreshments was served by the hostesses and thus an event long to be remembered came to end.

GOT EXCITED ABOUT SOCIALISTIC IDEAS.

Audience Divided in Sentiment and no Labor Union Formed.

WORKMEN MET TOGETHER.

WILLIAM L. BROWER DELIVERED A TALK ON SOCIALISM.

Labor Leaders Differed With Him on Certain Remarks and an Exciting Wrangle Ensued—Arthur Scott, a Plainfield Socialist, Tried to be Heard, But Was Shut Off—Meeting Next Week.

No local branches of the International Association of Machinists or the Iron Moulders' Union were organized last night, as was intended, for the workingmen who assembled in Reform Hall for that purpose, had too much of the socialistic fever about them to be unanimous upon perfecting an organization.

Last Friday George C. Cameron, representing the International Association of Machinists, and Wm. Perrine, of the Iron Moulders' Union, met about fifty machinists and moulders in Washington Hall and spoke to them of the benefits of organizing local branches of the unions here.

As it was impossible to do anything but make suggestions then and get an understanding of how the men felt, last night was appointed for the men to organize.

Near the close of the meeting last week Arthur Scott, who represents the socialistic element in this city, arose and made a spirited speech, setting forth the principles of his party, and crying down labor unions. Mr. Scott desired to address the meeting that night at length, but as it was late he was given an invitation to make a speech last night.

So last night Messrs. Cameron and Perrine were obliged to face an audience composed of union sympathizers and Socialists. The company was about equally divided, and applauded their respective speakers heartily. Mr. Cameron called the meeting to order, and after a few words, in which he said that trade unionism fills a long felt want, and that men cannot get it through the ballot box yet because they are not educated to assert their rights. Mr. Cameron then introduced William L. Brower, of New York, who came to speak in place of Mr. Scott. Mr. Brower represents the Socialistic Trade and Labor Alliance, and was given twenty minutes in which to set forth the ideas of his party.

Mr. Brower is a sharp speaker, and had the attention of his hearers from start to finish. The speech was fiery and met with approval from a part of the audience, while the other half were not in favor of all that was said. Mr. Brower wanted to organize the workmen into the Socialistic Alliance. Mr. Perrine and Mr. Cameron replied to Mr. Brower. Mr. Scott and another workingman grew quite excited and demanded the floor with the intention of adding something more to what Mr. Brower had said, but were not allowed to do so.

The men being divided, it was impossible to effect an organization either as a union or as a socialistic party, so the meeting adjourned. Some night next week Messrs. Cameron and Perrine will meet those men who desire to organize a union. The date will be settled later.

NEW COLORED CHURCH.

Of Methodist Denomination With a Minister from Philadelphia.

A new colored church has been organized in this city. It is called the African-American Methodist Episcopal church, and they have secured a meeting place in the old East Third Street mission building on East Third street. This new church has been organized about one month and there are now eleven members on the church roll. Rev. J. W. Wesley, of Philadelphia, is the pastor, and he is working hard to secure a large membership. Services are held during the week and every Sunday morning and evening. Last evening a social and supper was given at the church by the members.

To Observe an Anniversary.

The members of the local W. C. T. U. will observe the anniversary of Miss Willard's birthday by holding a service in their rooms next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The service will be conducted by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson and a full attendance is desired.

Specials at VanEmburgh's.

For tomorrow, Saturday, September 24th, 250 pair fine perfect fitting corsets at 28 cents a pair. Four-quart granite pails, with cover, 18 cents each; 3-hoop heavy stable pails, 22 cents each.

STORMY SCENE IN COURT.

ADAM FRITZ HAS TO DISCONTINUE SUIT BEFORE JUSTICE MATTISON.

Justice Smalley Declined to Discontinue an Action That was First Started Before Him, and Which He Had Adjourned.

There was a stormy scene in Justice Mattison's court yesterday morning when the case of Adam Fritz against Miers Compton came up for trial. The suit is for dispossessing Compton from one of Fritz's houses on Fritz avenue, and was a repetition of a suit started in Justice Smalley's court several weeks ago.

There were a number of points about the case which the lawyers interested, Murphy & Blatz, for the plaintiff, and W. G. DeMeza, for the defendant, differed. When the case came up for trial in Justice Smalley's court two weeks ago, the defendant filed an affidavit stating that a material witness was out of the State, and asked for an adjournment for thirty days. This was granted.

The plaintiff then went to Justice Mattison and instituted another suit against Compton, on the same grounds as the old one, thinking in this way to bring about a trial in a week or ten days. This suit was set for trial yesterday. When the case was called Mr. Blatz asked to have it dismissed.

Mr. DeMeza, whose client was in this way being sued in two courts for the same thing, objected to this and asked for an adjournment, intending in the meantime to bring some action against the plaintiff, Fritz, for thus suing his client in two courts at the same time.

After a heated argument on both sides the Justice decided to dismiss the suit, and thus leave Justice Smalley to continue to have cognizance over the original action.

Mr. Blatz, Fritz's counsel, said that when the adjournment was granted by Justice Smalley, he told him to dismiss the suit, and supposed the Justice had done so, and so began action over again in another court.

TRIED TO CROSS IN FRONT OF TRAIN.

He Was Struck and Carried Some Distance and is Dead.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Berkeley Heights, Sept. 23—John Varreti, owner of extensive brickyards at Berkeley Heights, was struck and fatally injured Wednesday afternoon by the Gladstone accommodation, which leaves Summit at 5:40 p. m. The gateman at the Springfield avenue crossing had lowered the gates when Varreti came along, and, despite the warnings of several, he attempted to cross the tracks. Varetti was struck and carried some fifty feet on the pilot of the engine, and then dropped into a ditch filled with stones. He was picked up and carried into the house of Dr. Wm. H. Lawrence, where his wounds were dressed.

Varetti died yesterday.

FUNERAL OF JUSTICE SPERRY.

Sermon by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass—Wealth of Floral Tributes.

Last evening at the home of Mrs. Stevens, of Grandview avenue, the funeral services of the late Justice Sperry were held. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated, and he was assisted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, who offered prayer. During the service vocal selections were rendered by the Misses Carroll, John Steiner and Charles Hummer.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and impressive. The interment took place this morning in Evergreen cemetery, and those who served as bearers were Mr. Ruttman, W. J. Conroy, J. S. Lunger, J. W. Van-Horn, W. H. Coombs and Justice Crossley.

DANIEL MAIN HOME.

Returned From Cuba on a Transport—Was Sick With the Fever.

Daniel Main, son of Rev. Dr. Main, of this city, returned yesterday from Cuba to New York on one of the transports. Mr. Main was in the hospital corps, and during his stay in Santiago he was ill with the fever. He has not yet entirely recovered from the effects of his illness, but is very much better. On the transport that brought him north there were seventy-six soldiers of the Fifth Army Corps. The transport is still held at quarantine, and will be kept there for several days.

Illness of a Trained Nurse.

Miss Valentine, a trained nurse, who has been residing at Morristown, and who was taken ill at that place, was brought to Plainfield this morning and removed to the home of J. P. Northrop, on Rockview terrace, where she will remain for the present. Dr. E. W. Hedges is in attendance.

Gilbert S. Martin and family, of Mountain avenue, will move Monday to Somerset place.

TROLLEY OPENING WAS WINE-IMMERSED.

Auspicious Running of First Street Car in Dunellen.

TIME OF BIG JOLLIFICATION.

AFTER THE CAR WAS RUN OVER THE LINE BANQUET WAS HELD.

Motor was in Charge of Superintendent Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company—Car From the Plainfield Company—Mayor Brakeley Broke Bottle of Wine Over Dashboard—Banquet Served.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, September 23—The people of this borough, together with leading residents of Plainfield, Bound Brook and New Brunswick, united last evening in one grand outburst of enthusiasm. There was fireworks, huzzahs and general jollification. The cause of this demonstration was the formal opening of the trolley road through the borough, a thing which the residents have waited for long and patiently. The auspicious moment arrived and was attendant with all the signs of success that anyone could desire. All along the line of the trolley road handsome decorations could be seen, while the burning of red fire and the display of fireworks helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered.

Long before 8 o'clock those who had invitations gathered at the corner of Jefferson avenue, where the Plainfield trolley tracks end, and waited for the trolley car that was to take them for the first time over the new road, which is 1 5-8 mile long. In the crowd was Mayor Brakeley and all of the local Councilmen, while there were many other prominent citizens.

It was a little after 8 o'clock when car No. 19 of the Plainfield Street Railway Company made its appearance.

The car was beautifully decorated with red, white and blue, Japanese lanterns, etc., all the work of Motorman William Brown and Conductor Phillip Maguire, both of whom brought the car to this place from Plainfield. The car was filled with many prominent Plainfielders.

After everything was in readiness, Edward Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, took charge of the car on the front platform and ran it over the road for the first time. On the platform with him was Mayor Brakeley, of this place; Superintendent Adlemann, of the Plainfield company; Mr. Rand, of New Brunswick, and a representative of The Daily Press.

Mr. Radel presented Mayor Brakeley with a bottle of choice wine, and as the car passed from Plainfield into the borough, His Honor broke the bottle of wine over the dashboard of the car.

Dr. J. T. Fritts, vice-president of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, made a few remarks and complimented Mr. Radel. He said that the borough ought to be proud of their trolley. He assured the Brunswick company that the Plainfield company would continue to extend any courtesy possible.

Alderman Daley, of New Brunswick, made a rousing speech, which was full of praise and commendation for the Brunswick Traction Company and the pretty town of New Brunswick—the hub of the universe—according to his idea.

Other remarks were made by Councilmen Schneider, Wilcox, Wyncoop and W. J. Winges, of this place. Alexander Findlay, Judge DeMeza, of Plainfield; H. B. Willis, Sheriff Litterst, Mr. Schlessinger, of New Brunswick, and George O. Stevens, of Plainfield, entertained the crowd with remarks and songs.

The car then sped along over the new road in a perfect manner. At various points along the road the car stopped and there was great demonstration by the people.

The car passed on to the end of the borough limits and then returned to Taylor's Hotel, where the guests got off to accept the generous hospitality of the Brunswick Traction Company. Once gathered around the festive board Mr. Radel made Alderman Jacobs, of New Brunswick, "toastmaster." In accepting the honor Mr. Jacobs thanked Mr. Radel and then returned the compliment by calling on the great trolley magnate. Mr. Radel made a few remarks, in which he thanked the people of Dunellen for giving him a franchise, and also explained the reason for delay in operating the road, mainly the slowness on the part of certain officials.

Mayor Brakeley was then called on and he extended the glad hand to the

PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germ of certain decay and death.

In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists Ptomaines), are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion of dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass which ferments (the first process of decay) poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak, and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

Poor digestion poisons the kidneys, causing Bright's disease and diabetes.

And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion.

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptognic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first.

Heroes of the Panther.

New York, Sept. 23.—Some of the most gallant heroes of the war passed through this city yesterday. There were 422 all told--marines, who were on the auxiliary cruiser Panther, the men who landed at Guantanamo Bay on June 11, and drew the Spanish fire while troops were being landed elsewhere.

They fought against great odds one of the fiercest battles of the war.

These heroes came without ostentation. They were welcomed with hardly a cheer. They were unrecognized.

They came from Portsmouth, N. H., and stayed only long enough to get their baggage transported. They are going, some to the Brooklyn navy yard and the rest to Philadelphia.

Coal Miners and Operators.

Monongahela City, Pa., Sept. 23.—Having been successful in the third pool, the miners will now turn their attention to the mines in the fourth pool, where the Chicago agreement is being violated.

The contest will be opened in a few days, and the miners' officials say will be waged vigorously until every operator is paying the district rate.

Three mines in the third pool are still idle, the employer, Captain S. S. Brown, not having signified his willingness to comply with the Chicago agreement. The fight will be continued at these mines.

More Gold Engaged.

New York, Sept. 23.—Further additions to the gold movement were reported in Wall street yesterday, swelling the total to $4,300,000 thus far this week.

Yesterday morning the Bank of British North America engaged $500,000, and Ladenberg, Thalmann & Co. $800,000, making $1,300,000 for the day.

A report from San Francisco stated that the steamship Alameda had arrived there from Australia with $3,000,000 in sovereigns.

America to Take a Hand in the East.

Hong Kong, Sept. 23.—American and English residents here are delighted over the news that the Oregon and Iowa have been ordered to the Philippines.

The general belief is that this order is significant that the United States will soon hold a prominent place in Asiatic politics.

Additional compliments are now being paid to Admiral Dewey and Consul General Wildman.

Death List of Toledo Fire.

Toledo, Sept. 23.—Thirteen persons are now dead as a result of the big elevator fire that occurred here on Tuesday night. Several of the injured workmen are so badly burned that three or four more deaths are likely to occur.

Four persons are still missing. It is said that spontaneous combustion was the cause.

Lynch Brothers Win Double Scull Race.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 23.—The double scull race between Rice and Durnan of Toronto and the Lynch brothers of Halifax for the championship of the world, was rowed here yesterday. The Lynch brothers won by ten boat lengths.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA

Gen. Lee Not to Have the Chief Command.

NO MORE SOUTHERN CAMPS

His Ambition to Lead the Occupying Forces. Gen Wade Likely to Be Chosen for the Important Post. Gen. Wheeler's Command. Bryan's Political Regiment

Washington, Sept. 23.—General Fitzhugh Lee will probably not be selected to command the army of occupation in Cuba. The military advisers of the president are of the opinion that a regular army general should be chosen for this important task, and in this connection General James F. Wade is mentioned. He is an officer of experience and thoroughly fitted for the place. He is at present at the head of the Havana commission of evacuation.

General Lee's ambition to command the force is well known here, and has enlisted much popular sympathy. He has applied formally for the detail, and is quoted as saying to his friends that if he fails in his object he will resign. He is destined, according to present plans, to have a subordinate command in the Cuban army, and it is stated at the department that no argument or persuasion on the part of his friends is likely to increase the importance of his detail. Not a few of the regular army officers would be likely to resent the assignment of a volunteer to the command of 50,000 or 60,000 troops when high officers of the regular service are still awaiting duty at the front.

It has not yet been decided where General Wheeler's cavalry division shall be concentrated. It is probable that it will be encamped at or near Huntsville, Ala., until it is needed in Cuba.

Colonel William Jennings Bryan was at the war department yesterday morning. He will have no trouble in getting his resignation accepted, if he desires it. His regiment is regarded as of no more military value than any political organization whose members wear a uniform and carry rifles instead of torchlights.

The reports regarding the command are not particularly flattering to the regiment, and it will probably be among the first of the next lot to be mustered out.

There seems to be an irreconcilable difference of view between Colonel Bryan and his superior officers in the army as to the outcome of his visit.

Bryan remarked to a friend after seeing the assistant secretary of war and General Corbin that there had been no satisfactory results from his interview.

On the other hand, General Corbin made the assertion that Bryan had not broached the subject of mustering out his men, but had simply called and paid his respects.

To a correspondent's question how he enjoyed military campaigning as compared with political campaigning, Bryan replied that his military experience was a subject he could not now discuss.

General Wheeler's acceptance of the command of the cavalry corps is distinctly conditioned upon his continuing with the troops only so long as may be necessary to establish them on the island, when he is to be permitted to resign and resume his seat in Congress.

The war department has decided to establish no more large camps in the South, except one in Columbia, S. C., which is a famous health resort. The camps at Nashville and Huntsville will be retained, but that at Lexington will be broken up.

At Outs With Italy.

Colon, Colombia, Sept. 23.—Advices received here from Bogota, the capital of Colombia, say that all relations between Colombia and Italy have been severed owing to the action of the Italian government in the Corruti affair, which the Colombian officials consider arbitrary and in violation of the treaty of amity of 1892, which was thereby annulled.

News received here from Carthagena says it is rumored there that Colombia agrees to pay the claim of Punchard, McTaggart & Co., of 10,000,000 francs as a result of a breach of the Antiguian railroad contract.

Seven Klondikers Lost.

Seattle, Sept. 23.—It is believed here that seven eastern men, who started early last spring for the Klondike overland through the Nelson and Pease river regions in Canada, have perished in the marshes.

They have not reached either of the posts beyond the marshes, nor returned to their starting point. Frederick Short of Chicago is the only man whose name is known.

The Quebec Conference.

Quebec, Sept. 23.—The international conference met yesterday at 10.30 and adjourned after an hour's sitting. The Atlantic fisheries question was under consideration.

The commissioners ate luncheon yesterday on board the H. M. S. Renown.

Senator Faulkner, who replaces Senator Gray on the commission, arrived at noon.

Gen. Jackson Cannot Serve.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23.—General Jackson has sent a telegram to President McKinley thanking him for his tender of a position on the commission to investigate the conduct of the war, and expressing regre that pressing privatet business compels him to decline the honor.

The Paris Peace Conference.

London, Sept. 23.—The Daily Mail says that the Rothschilds will loan Spain four million pounds or five million pounds on the security of Almaden quicksilver mines, when the treaty of peace shall have been signed.

Five Days for Argentina.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 23.—El Tempo says Chili has given Argentina five days in which to accept unrestricted arbitration of the boundary dispute between the two countries.

DR. GILMAN DECLINES.

Unable to Serve on War Inquiry Board.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The refusal of President Daniel C. Gilman of Johns Hopkins University to remain a member of the president's commission for the investigation of the war department was a surprise to the authorities here and a great disappointment to Mr. McKinley.

He had expected so much from the presence of Dr. Gilman on the commission, both in respect of the work of the body itself and of the acceptance of its conclusions by the people, that he deeply regretted the receipt of Dr. Gilman's message.

It is believed that the withdrawal of President Gilman will tend to lead Dr. Keen of Philadelphia to decline to act on the commission. He reached New York from Europe Wednesday and left at once for Philadelphia, his home, saying that he should later come on to Washington and see President McKinley.

Speaking of the matter at Philadelphia Wednesday night, he is quoted as saying:

"If Dr. Gilman accepts, he would be one of the very best men on the commission. He is thoroughly capable and would give a verdict strictly in accordance with the facts. I should have the greatest confidence in any report Dr. Gilman would sign."

Another addition to the commission reported yesterday was that of Brigadier General John M. Wilson, chief of the engineer corps of the United States army.

The acceptance of Messrs. Woodbury of Vermont, W. H. Jackson of Tennessee and Thomas J. Livermore of Boston, vice president and manager of the Calumet & Hecla Copper Mining Company, have been announced. These make the present membership of the commission nine.

Quarters have been provided for it in the war department wing of the state, war and navy building, the commodious apartments on the fourth floor, occupied by the board of publication of the Rebellion Records.

The commission will essemble there on Saturday.

CHURCH IN THE COLONIES.

Archbishop Ireland Outlines Policy of Roman Catholic Clergy.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Archbishop Ireland has given the first definite information regarding the policy of the Roman Catholic church in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. It includes approval of the administration plan of leaving the church question out of peace discussions and the announcement that the church in the islands will conform to the new conditions. The archbishop says:

"When the dominion of the United States is fully established, the church will come under the same laws that will govern this country and be separated from the state, as it is now in America."

"There will be no commission from America to investigate the church in Cuba, Porto Rico or the Philippines. The Spanish priests will not be requested to retire, for the reason that they, better than anyone else, know what is needed under the new conditions, and can bring about a change much more easily than any commission that might be appointed. The clergy in the islands are men of intelligence and tact. They will attend to their own work and do it well. None of our priests or bishops could speak the language of the people and would be at a loss to do as much as the men now at the head of the Roman church.

"You may say that the priests of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines will be in accord with American ideas and progression, and they will be left to bring about the necessary change in their own way, and it will be the best way."

OUR NATIONAL TUNE AT GHENT.

How the Air of "Yankee Doodle" Was Obtained for the Musical Director.

After the representatives of Great Britain and the United States had nearly concluded their pacific labors at Ghent, in making the treaty of peace which ended the war of 1812, the burghers of the quaint old Dutch city determined to give an entertainment in honor of the Ministers. They determined, as a part of their programme, to perform the national airs of the two powers.

The musical director was sent to call upon the American Ministers and obtain the music of their national airs. A consultaton ensued, at which Bayard and Galatin favored "Hail Columbia," while Clay, Russell and Adams wanted "Yankee Doodle."

The musical director asked if any of the gentleman had the music. None of them had it. Then he suggested that perhaps one of them would sing or whistle the air.

"I can't," said Mr. Clay. "I never whistled or sung a tune in my life; perhaps Mr. Bayard can."

"Neither can I," answered Mr. Bayard. "Perhaps Mr. Russell can."

Mr. Russell, Mr. Gallatin and Mr. Adams in turn confessed their lack of musical ability.

"I have it," exclaimed Mr. Clay, and ringing the bell he summoned his body servant. "John," said he, "whistle 'Yankee Doodle' for this gentleman."

John did so, the chief musician noted down the air, and at the entertainment the Ghent Burghers' Band played the national air of the United States with variations.—Youth's Companion.

SPARKS OF WISDOM.

The opportunity of a lifetime seldom comes heralded by a brass band.

The minister who writes out his sermons is more apt to realize their length.

This world would be a paradise if people were as good as their pictures look.

WIKOFF THINNING OUT

Few Troops Remain at Montauk Point.

QUICK WORK IN BUILDING

Winter Clothing Ditributed Among Many of the Soldiers. Wooden Hospitals Nearly Completed. City of Mexico' Passengers Landed.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 23.—Last night was more comfortable in camp, and the sentries were able to keep warm by means of considerable exercise, but nevertheless it was no weather for summer clothes. Overcoats and winter clothing have been distributed in a number of the camps, but there was not enough to go all around and a good many of the men had to exercise to keep warm.

The departure of the Third cavalry has taken a good deal of life out of the camp, and the fact that Montauk is fast returning to the deserted state in which the camp found it, becomes more apparent every day.

The arrival Wednesday of the two transports with the yellow fever and other diseases on board, threw everybody into a state of great excitement for a time. It gave the quartermaster an opportunity to show how much he could do in a short time, however, and it is doubtful if a camp ever went up as fast against as great odds as did the new detention camp which General Wheeler ordered built for thte emergency. Fifty teams were set to hauling tents and lumber to the site of the new camp in as many minutes and forty carpenters were at work before noon.

Half of the tents were up, and one hospital ward of three tents had also been erected when, late in the afternoon, the Seguranca was ordered to New York.

The City of Mexico was held here, however, and the labor of building the camp was not wholly lost.

The seventy-six troopers General Wheeler decided to subject to the same quarantine rules which have governed all new arrivals, not because any disease was really feared, but as a precautionary measure.

There are now 423 men in the hospital, and two hundred of them will be sent to New York. The erection of two wooden wards was begun yesterday. They will be completed this week and by Monday all the sick will have been moved out of canvas wards. Then the work of removing the canvas annex will begin, and when that has been completed all the other canvas will be removed.

General Wheeler yesterday morning telegraphed to Colonel Kimball in New York, asking for the final arrangements for the removal of the few troops remaining here. He expected a definite reply yesterday.

It is settled now, General Wheeler said, that the First cavalry will go to Dakota, the Ninth to the department of the Colorado, and the Second, Sixth and Tenth to Huntsville.

The City of Mexico was unloaded yesterday, and the men on her taken to the detention camp prepared for them by the provost marshal. The well men were brought to the iron pier on one of the barges, and after having eaten a luncheon of sandwiches and coffee provided for them by the Red Cross Society, as many of them as were able marched up the hill to their camp.

There were only fifty in the procession. They looked worn and ill, as nearly all of them had had the fever at one time or another, and they showed plainly the enervating effects of the Cuban climate in their sallow faces and emaciated bodies.

The eighteen sick and eight others who are convalescing, went up in ambulances after having been landed at the wooden pier.

What Russia Gets from China.

London, Sept. 23.—A dispatch to the Globe from Hong Kong says that Hauching-chen, ex-Chinese minister to Germany, who went to St. Petersburg last summer on a special mission, and returned to China on September 10, concluded at St. Petersburg, under the terms of the secret convention signed at Pekin on March 27 last, an agreement ceding to Russia the ports of Port Arthur and Talienwan.

The full text of the treaty comprises 530 words. It stipulates that only Russian and Chinese warships shall enter Port Arthur. Chinese soldiers are prohibited from entering Russian territory at Port Arthur and Talienwan. Russia has the exclusive use of the inner harbor of Talienwan and the sole administration of the territories ceded. A tract of land to the north of Talienwan is designated as a buffer belt.

All defence works and lighthouses are exclusively Russian. Russia, by the terms of the treaty, purchases all of the government buildings at Port Arthur. The extension of the Russian-Chinese railway system is to be hastened and the funds borrowed for that purpose must be obtained from Russia. All disputets growing out of the agreement are to be settled in writing in the Russian text.

New Jersey Republicans.

Trenton, Sept. 23.—Acting Gov. Foster M. Voorhees was nominated by acclamation for governor by the Republican state convention yesterday afternoon.

The convention met at noon in the Taylor Opera House. There were 814 delegates present, and the galleries were filled o overflowing when Chairman Franklin Murphy of Essex county called the convention to order.

He introduced the temporary chairman, John W. Griggs of Passaic, attorney general of the United States, and former governor of New Jersey.

Vixen Here.

New York, Sept. 23.—The auxiliary cruiser Vixen, which was present at the destruction of Admiral Cervera's fleet off Santiago, arrived in port yesterday and is anchored off quarantine.

Japan to Raise a Loan.

Yokohama, Sept. 23.—It is understood the Japanese government has decided to negotiate for a foreign loan of $50,000,000.

TROOPS AT CAMP MEADE.

Mustering Out Orders. Sickness and Deaths in Camp.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Sept. 23.—The Seventh Ohio started yesterday for Columbus, where they will be mustered out. This is the last movement away from camp. All of the other regiments will be kept, with possibly one exception, that of the Fourteenth Pennsylvania, which, it is rumored, will be ordered to Pittsburg for mustering out.

Colonel Glenn, however, says that he knows nothing of the muster out of his command.

Surgeon Charles R. Parke of Scranton has been placed on trial before a general court martial charged with refusing to accept descriptive lists from patients of the division hospital.

He is defended by General Gobin and Assistant Adjutant General Norris.

Surgeon Stringfellow of the Fourth Missouri is the complainant in the case.

Private George W. Hoffman, Second West Virginia, died yesterday of typhoid fever. William M. Brown of Company C, Two Hundred and First eNw York, died in the hospital Wednesday night of typhoid fever. His mother arrived in camp to visit him, but her son had been dead an hour when she reached the hospital. She did not know he was ill.

There is no verification of the story that barracks are to be erected here for winter quarters. The soldiers will be sent to Cuba and Porto Rico as soon as the climatic conditions will allow.

CHINA'S EMPRESS RULES.

Imperial Edict Announces Emperor Has Resigned.

Pekin, Sept. 23.—An imperial edict just issued definitely announces that the emperor of China has resigned his power to the empress (dowager empress) who has ordered the ministers to deliver to her in future their official reports.

Shanghai, Sept. 23.—A local rumor is to the effect that the emperor of China is dead. No details are obtainable, but it is said that the gates of Pekin are closed.

Yesterday it was reported from Pekin that the empress dowager had regained her ascendancy over the emperor and that she was now practically ruler of the empire. The report was meagre in detail and nothing beyond the bare statement was given.

A dispatch to the London Times says that the dowager empress has assumed charge of the government and that she will attend all the meetings of the Tsung-li-yamen, be present at all audiences, see all memorials and approve every edict that is issued.

This according to the dispatch means a virtual restoration of the regency and the early reinstatement of Li Hung Chang is consequently expected.

Alger at Chattanooga.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Secretary Alger and party reached this city Wednesday night from Knoxville. The party was met at thte depot by the mayor of the city and a large number of citizens, and were conducted to the city auditorium, where three thousand people had gathered to meet and receive them.

Secretary Alger made a short speech thanking the people for their courteous reception. He said, with reference to charges of mismanagement:

"That some mistakes have occurred I admit, but that the medical department, thte commissary department and the quartermaster's department have done their full duty I affirm."

Miss Davis' Body Removed.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 23.—The sorrowful journey of Mrs. Jefferson Davis to Richmond, Va., with the body of her daughter, Miss Winnie Davis, was undertaken under favorable circumstances at 10.20 yesterday morning.

A detail from Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., acted as escort to the railroad station, and the casket was deposited in an apartment of a special car, while the party accompanying it were conducted to another section of the same vehicle, which, at Kingston Junction, was attached to the colonial express for New York.

Atlantic Coaling Station.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Rear Admiral Belknap, retired, who lives in Brookline, Mass., is in Washington in consultation with the naval authorities in regard to the establishment of coaling stations along the Atlantic coast, from Maine to Port Royal, S. C.

He was president of the board which examined sites and made a report on the chain of stations which the navy department believe should be maintained.

It is possible that Secretary Long's estimates will contain the item of coaling stations.

The Striking Shoe Lasters.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 23.—The striking shoe lasters were still maintaining their firm attitude yesterday, and the manufacturers generally seemed equally determined in the fight over prices. Conferences, however, were in progress with several firms during the morning, and the union claimed to expect settlements on terms acceptable to the strikers.

Gen. Greene and His Staff Arrive.

San Francisco, Sept. 23.—The steamer China, from Hong Kong and Nagasaki, is in the harbor. Major General Merritt was not on board.

The China showed a clean bill of health and was not put in quarantine. Brigadier General Greene and his staff were on board.

Lieut. Peary's Expedition.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Friends of Civil Engineer R. E. Peary have received advices from him dated Cape York, July 25, in which he reports that all is well and the prospects of success excellent.

The Peace Commissioners.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, has offered the peace commissioners the use of the foreign office for their meetings, which commence on October 1.

GRAVE CRISIS IN PARIS

Conflict Between Civil and Military Authority Aggravates.

DICTATORSHIP IS POSSIBLE

Gen. Zurlinden's Unexpected Action in Prosecuting Col. Picquart Indicates That He Has Come Forward as the Defender of the Army. Henri Rochefort Declares Picquart Was Bribed.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The situation here is generally admitted to be grave by both press and people. The conflict between the civil and military authorities is becoming acute. The sudden and unexpected action of General Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris, in prosecuting Colonel Picquart on the charge of forgery and using forged documents assumes a grave aspect on account of the circumstances attending the intervention of the military authorities in a civil court.

At the present moment, when the political atmosphere is surcharged with dangerous electricity generated by the Dreyfus affair, the general who has just quitted the cabinet defies civil authority and takes, without consulting his successor or the premier, an important step.

In ordinary circumstances the military governor is empowered to act independently, but now that the Dreyfus case has become a great national matter, every proceeding in the affair has state importance. General Zurlinden's action in ignoring this fact is very significant. He comes forward as the defender of the army, the prosecutor of its supposed calumniators and the resolute opponent of a revision of the case.

From this to an appeal to the public in the line of the establishment of a dictatorship is not a long step.

The Soleil says that owing to yesterday's events the cabinet, at an informal conference, discussed General Zurlinden's action.

The Fronde asserts that the premier, M. Brisson, disavows the measures taken against Picquart, which, he adds, were instituted without the knowledge of the cabinet.

The Radical makes a bitter attack on the general staff, which it charges with aiming at the moral assassination of Picquart through a secret military trial.

Henri Rochfort, in his paper, the Intransigeant, declares Picquart was bribed by a syndicate or by Germany to save Dreyfus.

Jauros, the Socialist deputy in the Petite Republique, maintains that the general staff of the French army cannot now escape the full light of a revision of the Dreyfus case.

Colonel Picquart was transferred yesterday afternoon to the military prison of Cherche Midi.

The Matin affirms that it has authentic information to the effect that the name of Dreyfus was never once mentioned in the mass of documents brought against him. It adds that the only serious document is the so-called bordereau.

The documents in the case, it appears consist entirely of fragments of letters referring to everything except Dreyfus and the whole matter, the Matin adds, constitutes such a fairy tale that no sober minded person would dream of accepting it.

Barring the Chinese.

Washington, Sept. 23.—The secretary of the treasury has made an important ruling in which he holds that Chinese consuls in foreign countries are not authorized to issue certificates to privileged classes of Chinese entering this country.

In a circular issued to all officers of the United States, attention is called to an opinion of the acting attorney general in which it is held that "there is no authority in existing laws under which consular officers of China in foreign countries may issue to Chinese subjects of the exempt classes the certificates prescribed by section 6 of the act approved July 5, 1894, relating to the exclusion of the Chinese.

The effect of this ruling will be to prohibit the entry into this country of the privileged classes except upon presentation of certificates issued by the imperial Chinese government and in view of the fact that the government has never issued certificates of this character it is believed that few Chinese even of the exempt classes will apply hereafter for admission.

Cervera in Madrid.

Madrid, Sept. 23.—Admiral Cervera has arrived here. There were no incidents worth noting in connection with his arrival at the capital.

In an interview the admiral said he had a clear conscience regarding Santiago. But, he added, nations grow great by their victories and not by their defeats, however glorious they might be.

Spain, he continued, had lived in a dream and now she had to face the reality.

The Spanish admiral added that his warships were not destroyed in battle but were destroyed by fire.

General Toral, the Spanish commander who surrendered his forces at Santiago de Cuba has also arrived here. He did so without attracting any attention and is now sick in bed.

Camp Haven Deserted.

Camp Haven, Niantic, Conn., Sept. 23.—The First regiment, Connecticut volunteers, broke up camp yesterday and took a special train in two sections for their homes on a thirty days' furlough.

The camp here is now practically deserted, only a guard detail remaining to take care of the property left behind.

Another "Terrible Turk."

New York, Sept. 23.—Another Turkish wrestler has come to this country to take thte place of Yousouf, the Terrible Turk, who was one of the passengers lost on the ill-fated French line steamship La Bourgogne.

The newcomer is Abdul Halil. He is 30 years old, weighs 30 pounds and is about 6 1-2 feet tall.

Mr. Martine and the Senatorship.

Whenever there comes a time in the course of political events in Union county that there is an office vacant and there is no Democrat who aspires openly and above-board for the nomination to it, it always seems to behoove the political reporters of New Jersey to connect the name of James E. Martine, of this city, with the nomination. Just now the reporters in their anxiety to name some Democrat for the vacancy in the Senatorial seat to be resigned by Mr. Voorhees, have, as usual, struck the name of the "Farmer Orator" as a probable candidate.

We have no knowledge of Mr. Martine's intentions in the political field and possess no authority to speak for him, but we think that he has no more idea of becoming a candidate for Senator from Union county than he has of going to the Klondike. As a matter of fact, the genial "Farmer Orator" has lately eschewed politics as a part of his activities. Mr. Martine is one of the largest real estate owners in Plainfield and has a world of details to look after if his property is made a paying investment. Since the early summer months he has been paying strict attention to these personal affairs, and has given but little thought to furthering political ambitions.

Mr. Martine is not the man, however, that can become passive in political affairs during a campaign, and he will no doubt do his share of the work for the Democrats in the approaching contest for the Gubernatorial chair, but so far as accepting a nomination for Senator from Union county we think it is the furthest of the "Farmer Orator's" aspirations.

The Nomination of Voorhees.

The duty of the Republican State convention at Trenton yesterday was merely a perfunctory one in naming Foster Voorhees for their candidate for Governor, for the fact of his becoming the standard-bearer of his party in the approaching campaign was a foregone conclusion long before the delegates were even chosen.

The naming of Mr. Voorhees is the most gratifying thing which the Republicans of Union county have ever experienced. Identified with its affairs ever since he first entered the world to make his own way, mingling democratically among its citizens, honored as greatly as the county could honor with positions of trust and importance, popular among all classes for his personal charms, Voorhees was a favorite son in all that appellation implies in the political vocabulary.

Now that the nomination has actually been accomplished the Republicans certainly feel that they have the strongest candidate that could have been named and the Democrats are assured of the fact that they have a foe worthy of their best mettle. The selection of a man for the chief executive of New Jersey such as Mr. Voorhees is will necessitate the Democrats bringing out their very best Gubernatorial timber, and this, of course, ensures the commonwealth an administration for the next three years that will at once advise the people of good government, no matter which party wins at the polls.

A Good Thing All-around.

Dunellen people evidently anticipate great things from the trolley in that place, judging by the enthusiastic reception which they gave the first car as it made a trip over the route last night. The operation of this line of the Brunswick Traction Company, however, not only means a splendid improvement for the towns it passes directly through, but it is also an auspicious event for Plainfield.

The opening of this new line of transit for suburban county will mean increased business for the Plainfield merchants. While it does not offer an entirely new business territory to Plainfield it certainly will afford better facilties for the residents of the section to come to this mart with trifling inconvenience and slight expense. That will make the visits of the suburban population more frequent and as the trolley will be a mighty contributing force for the building up of the surrounding country with which it is in touch, the consequences will mean not only a permanent but an increasing traffic to Plainfield as the metropolis of the whole of Somerset county and a very large section of Middlesex county.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee.

Since the beginning of the war up to the time of the operations which closed the Santiago incident a change came over the foreign spirit in its way of viewing American character and affairs. We must take the definition of that spirit from the tone of the daily and weekly journals, assuming that these organs fairly embody the drift of public sentiment. The French papers, with the exception of one, the Debats, uniformly took their cue at first from the childish diatribes of the Spanish press. Coarseness and violence of invective, far alien to the usual Gallic esprit and lightness of touch which often make even thinness of substance sparkle, marked all their utterances. Had we been at war with France itself there could not have been exhibited more petulance and ill temper. But as the logic of events shaped things more clearly there was a marvelous difference in these ebullitions, not that the inner spirit of hostility was less pervasive, but style and phrase indicated that a profound respect had begun to dignify the feeling toward the United States. Manifestation of American sagacity, energy and power—above all, realization of the enormous resources of this country—had driven home conviction like a wedge into the heart of the oak. The evolution in the German press was different in this, that it had recognized from the first what the end was sure to be. But the earlier dicta of the Teutonic "able editor" were still somewhat contemptuous in tone, indicating that there would be a swift shortening of the American tether when Europe took the matter in hand. Finally German polysyllables no longer thundered with this vague threat, for the end grew near and lightning had not shot from the bosom of the cloud.

The most amusing instance of a new point of view, however, has been that of the London Saturday Review. This was one of the few English papers which at the outset found no abuse and satire too severe with which to load its weekly gun. One of the latest expressions of opinion reads as follows: "The weary Titan that Matthew Arnold spoke of, with every muscle strained by the weight of empire, challenged on this side and on that by new competitors, menaced now and then by a combination of envious enemies, suddenly finds standing by his side a stalwart son, who, though he has his own place in the world and his own ambitions, yet seems inclined to say that the old Titan shall always have at least a fair field and perhaps, if the worst comes to the worst, some little favor. And that is the way we Britons feel about America."

It gives one the headache to realize such a marvelous somersault. It is an acrobatic feat almost without peer.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Vaudeville, comedy and opera seem to be the reigning fad this season, and Manager Maze Edwards has been particularly fortunate in his selection of companies who make this their forte. One of the best organizations traveling this season, is Al Reeves famous big company of black and white performers, who make their appearance at Stillman Music Hall tomorrow night and present a programme of comedy, minstrelsy, vaudeville and opera that will be unexcelled by any company that has been seen here. In all, 25 whites and 25 blacks appear, making a total number of a chorus of 50 voices, introducing such people as Harry Emerson, Mitchell and Joss, Cope Sisters, Barton and Ashley, Miss Fanny Fern Thatcher, DeGraff Sisters, Unique Quartette, late of Primrose and West's Minstrels, Alice Gray, phenomenal lady cornetist, Miss Zoe Ball phenomenal contralto of her race, and last but not least, the world's greatest banjoist and comedian, Al Reeves.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden text:—No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. Psalm lxxxiv: 11. Sept. 25, 1898.

Lesson I.—The Kingdom Divided (I Kings xii, 16-25). Golden Text, Prov. xv, 1, "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." Because Solomon turned away his heart from the Lord and worshipped the gods which his wives worshipped, allowing his wives to come between him and his God (chapter xi, 4, 9), therefore the Lord divided the kingdom, rending away ten tribes and leaving to his son only the tribe of Judah (chapter xi, 36), with which seems to have been identified the tribe of Benjamin.

Lesson II.—Elijah the Prophet (I Kings xvii, 1-16). Golden Text, I Kings xvii, 16, "And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the Lord." In contrast to Solomon and his divided heart here is a man with a whole heart for God, ready to stand before kings or to hide himself by Cherith, or in the widow's house at Zarephath, a living witness to the living and true God, obedient to him and depending wholly upon him.

Lesson III.—Elijah on Carmel (I Kings xviii, 30-39). Golden Text, I Kings xviii, 39, "And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces, and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God." The desire of Elijah was that all might know that the Lord God of Abraham was the God of Israel and that he was his servant (verse 36). So the desire of David was that the Lord of hosts might be magnified (I Sam. xvii, 45).

Lesson IV.—Elijah's Flight and Encouragement (I Kings xix, 1-16). Golden Text, Ps. xxxvii, 7, "Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him." Seeing only the Lord, Elijah was strong and fearless, but when he saw Jezebel and her anger he was weak indeed and fled for his life. Truly the fear of man or woman bringeth a snare, but looking up steadfastly into heaven (Acts vii, 55) takes away all fear. We must not think that we are essential to God, lest he appoint out successor (chapter xix, 16).

Lesson V.—Naboth's Vineyard (I Kings xxi, 4-16). Golden Text, Ex. xx, 17, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house." Here is a man the very opposite of Elijah and the God of Elijah—as man who lived only for himself and to obtain what he desired no matter who suffered. He is in the line of Cain and related to antichrist, of whom we read that he shall do according to his will and exalt and magnify himself above every god, and sitting in the temple of God, will show himself that he is God (Dan. xi, 36; II Thess. ii, 4). The Christian magnifies Christ.

Lesson VI.—Elijah's spirit on Elisha (II Kings ii, 6-15). Golden text, Luke xi, 13, "How much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." For salvation we do not need to cling to Christ. When once we have received him he clings to us and will never let us go.

Lesson VII.—The Shunamite's Son (II Kings, iv, 25-37). Golden Text, Ps. lv, 22, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee." The boy restored to his mother from the dead would be much more to her than if she had never lost him. God, who gave her this son, would be more to her, also. She now knew the joy not only of the gift of a son, but of the restoration of a son from the dead. Oh, that we may know the Son, God's Son, and the power of his resurrection! (Phil. iii, 10.)

Lesson VIII.—Naaman Healed (II Kings, v, 1-14). Golden Text, Jer. xvii, 14, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me and I shall be saved." All the greatness and honor and might of Naaman was marred by the fact that he was a leper. All the greatness of earth is marred by sin, and there is only one who can deliver, the God of Israel, Israel's Messiah, the Son of God, our Lord Jesus Christ. As a little child was the means of directing Naaman to the healer, so may every boy and girl who knows Christ direct others to him.

Lesson IX.—Elisha at Dothan (II Kings, vi, 8-18). Golden Text, Ps. xxxiv, 7, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." When people take counsel with each other against God, or against his servants, they are sorely blinded and deluded by the devil. Our God sees and knows everything and has all power and can do everything (Ps. cxxxix; Job xlii, 2; Math. xxviii, 20). Let us ever rejoice in his presence and power and in the ministry of angels and gladly serve him without care or fear.

Lesson X.—The Death of Elisha. (II Kings, xiii, 14-25). Golden Text, Ps. cxvi, 15, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Though Elisha had a double portion of the Spirit, yet he was permitted to die, while Elijah was taken without dying. Either way it is a gain. They do rest from their labors and their works do follow them. The bow and arrow incident suggests that limitations in the service of God come from us rather than from God. The coming to life of the dead man makes us think of the power of his resurrection who died for us.

Lesson XI.—Sinful Indulgence (Amos vi, 1-8). Golden Text, Isa. xxviii, 7, "They also have erred through wine and through strong drink are out of the way." Ease and self indulgence are not becoming in a child of God, for "even Christ pleased not himself." It is our privilege to have quietness and peace and rest, but these only in order to serve him who said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," and "I must be about my Father's business."

Lesson XII.—Captivity of the Ten Tribes (II Kings xvii, 9-18). Golden Text, I Chron. xxviii, 9, "If thou seek him, he will be found of thee, but if thou forsake him he will cast thee off forever." Every word of God is true and shall be literally fulfilled. The Lord testified against Israel and their sins, warned them of the results, earnestly and lovingly entreated them to return to him, that he might forgive and heal and bless them; but they would not hear. Therefore he did unto them as he had said (II Kings xvii, 23). "Every one of us must give account of himself to God" (Rom. xiv, 12). Our works will be approved and rewarded or rejected, and we suffer loss (I Cor. iii, 14, 15).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Sept. 25. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Barren Fig Tree.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Luke xiii, 6-9, "Why cumbereth it the ground?"

A fruit tree that bears no fruit is of little value. It must soon go to the wood pile and stove. We don't grow fruit trees for ornament nor for timber, but for fruit. Men are profitable only as they show intelligent integrity.

Why are so many worthless folks permitted to live? How pleasant this world would be if only the good were permitted to live! But this is not that kind of a world. It never was and never will be. Barren fig trees have appeared on all its hillsides and valleys. They still grow. The more barren of righteous fruit the more flourishing some people seem to be. Why doesn't God cut them down? Wealth, beauty, wit, genius, gracefulness, learning, all the natural advantages of soil and sunshine, seem to be theirs, but they produce little for the world's hunger. We look to them in vain in our famine. How often we grieve over them! How much good they might do if they would! We are attracted toward them by all they are. We cannot commend them nor defend them because of what they are not.

God doesn't hasten to remove them. We have no right to do so. What can be done? Try a little digging and cultivation. Put some time and effort into it. Study their nature, their surroundings, their troubles and hindrances. See what is the cause of the barrenness and study how best to remedy it. If it is a removable cause, take it away. Use tact. Many a person who has been morally and spiritually useless in the world needs only a little special care and cultivation to become perennially fruitful of all Christian graces.

This presence of barren trees in the Lord's orchard is a source of helpfulness. It is a warning to those who do bear fruit that they may need pruning and care lest they fall into the same condition. It is also helpful in keeping ever in remembrance the real value of life as fruitage and not mere foliage. It gives opportunity for the exercise of Christian care and affectionate assistance, blessing the one rescued and more deeply benefiting the one who gives the help.

Let them grow, Master, and give us grace and strength to dig a little more about them.

Rev. M. C. B. Mason, D. D.

The great numbers of colored people in the membership of the Methodist Episcopal church have led many to desire a colored bishop and many others to believe it would be wise to have such a one. Whether there ever will be such in this church is uncertain, but it is clear that there is no prejudice on account of color which prevents the church advancing to any office one who is fitted to occupy it efficiently. The election of Dr. Mason by the last general conference as one of the secretaries of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society was gratifying to the church at large. He is of the negro race and manifests no disposition to apologize for the fact. He is every inch a man, great hearted, strong of body and mind, cultured and devoted. In public speech he is full of wit of the brightest kind, logical, polished, forceful and magnetic. He is a true orator of the best style. He moves people to do the right. No man appears before the annual conferences who is more cordially welcomed and more gladly heard than this "brother in black." "Long may his bow abide in strength!"

REV. M. C. B. MASON, D. D.

Not Dead Yet.

The church, like plants and trees, has periods when it shows no signs of growth. But to suppose it to be dead would be a great mistake. Springtime will come and will show that no leaves or owers or fruit were borne. The church of Jesus Christ is not now dead, though to some eyes it is not making the gain desirable. When Colonel R. Ingersoll a few years since, in lecturing, predicted the speedy extinction of the church, Chaplain McCabe, who was then assistant secretary of the Church Extension society, telegraphed him, "We are building two churches a day, colonel. Halleluiah!" This was literally true. This one denomination was advancing with such rapidity. Other churches were doing but little less.

Watch.

Watch, ye saints, with eyelids waking.
Lo, the powers of heaven are shaking!
Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning,
Ready for the Lord's returning.

Kingdoms at their base are crumbling.
Hark! His chariot wheels are rumbling!
Tell, oh, tell, of grace abounding,
While the seventh trump is sounding.

Nations wane, though proud and stately;
Christ His kingdom hasteneth greatly;
Earth her latest pangs is summing.
Shout, ye saints, your Lord is coming!

Lamb of God, thou meek and lowly!
Judah's lion, high and holy!
Lo, Thy bride comes forth to meet Thee,
All in blood washed robes to greet Thee.

—Phœbe Palmer.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 25. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"What is true success?"—Math. xvi, 21-27.

Worldly success is often not true success. Few people in the world really have correct ideas as to what success is. To many to succeed means to lay up an immense fortune; to others it means to reach some high position in the social or political world; to others, again, it has no other meaning than the satisfying of the appetites and desires of life, no matter in what direction they may run. To achieve what we start out in life to achieve, no matter what the object of life may be, is the highest idea that most people have of success. But, alas, how many do that and then at the end of life feel that life, instead of having been a success, has been a miserable failure! The goal of life is won, but as we touch the crown it withers and fades, and we say to ourselves in deepest remorse: "This is not what we thought it was. This is not success. This is failure."

Christ's solemn words here suggest two things about true success.

1. True success comes from giving, not from getting. This may seem paradoxical, but it is true. "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it." This is Christ's principle of success. To find the highest and truest life, which alone can be called success, we must lose our lives, we must sacrifice them, for Christ's sake and for the sake of humanity. True success lies in making the most of our lives for God and for humanity, and we can never do that if we are sordidly laying up gold, selfishly seeking for office or eating ourselves with the pleasures of life. Self must be eliminated to achieve success. Humiliation leads to exaltation. The cross is necessary to the crown.

2. True success is eternal, not temporal. Temporal success is an illusion. It has no reality. He only succeeds in life who has so used this world as to assure himself a safe entrance into eternal life. "What is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul" or the higher life of the soul in eternity? And if the gaining of the whole world would not compensate us for the loss of our souls how much less will it pay us to lose our souls for the trifling part of the world that we may gain. The world is not the true judge of man's failure or success. "The Son of Man shall come in the glory of His father, with His angels, and then He shall reward every man according to his works." This award will decide the success or failure of our lives, and it will prove that he who lost his life here for God, for Christ, for humanity, has found it, or, in other words, has succeeded.

Bible Readings.—Josh i, 8; Eccl. ix, 11; xii, 13, 14; Zech. iv, 6; Math. vi, 33; xxv, 14-30; Mark viii, 34-38; Luke xiv, 26-29; John xii, 24-26; I Cor. x, 31; xv, 58; Col. iii, 17; II Tim. iv, 7, 8; Rev. ii, 10; xxi, 7.

Responsibility.

A sense of responsibility not only holds one in check, but tends to develop what is good in him. Put a person in a position where trusts are committed to his care, or under conditions where he is expected to be good and to do good, he is all the more apt to display his character and aptitude to the best advantage. Men of worth are what they are because they have been put upon their mettle. People have trusted them, or parents and friends have shown that they expected something worthy of them, or conscience has in some way been aroused within them, or existing condition has forced them to do and to dare, and they have responded to the demands made upon them promptly and fully, to their own and others' benefit. —Presbyterian.

A Danger.

We shall be tempted to forget, but we must not forget, that we have for a quarter of a century been leading the way toward the new achievements of peace, that we have been preparing for the time when all controversies between nations shall be settled without resort to war. If we forget that, the imminent danger will be that we shall fall in love with war, and that, deluded by the phantom of military and naval glory, we shall seek new opportunities to use our strength and display our prowess as a dictator among the nations.—Christian Register.

Kindness From the Old.

Kindness seems to come with a double grace and tenderness from the old. It seems in them the hoarded and long purified benevolence of years, as if it had survived and conquered the baseness and selfishness of the ordeal it had passed—as if the wind which had broken the form had swept in vain across the heart, and the frosts which had chilled the blood and whitened the thin locks had no power over the warm tide of the affections.—Churchman.

Reserving Religion.

It is a pity that many reserve their religion for the still hour of worship, but fail to display it in the active duties of daily life. In the one case there are the bowed head, the gentle tone, the reverent feeling; in the other there are the scowl, the harsh temper, brute force and greed. Yet God is not the God of our worshiping hours only. He is the God of our hours of work as well.—Jewish Messenger.

Those Who Succeed Best.

The men whom I have seen succeed best in life have always been cheerful and hopeful men, who went about their business with a smile on their faces and took the changes and chances of this mortal life like men, facing rough and smooth alike as it came, and so found the truth of the old proverb that "good times and bad times and all times pass over."—Exchange.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Der Kassirer der eingeschriebenen Hilfskasse für Uhrmacher und Mechaniker in Glashütte, Kuhnt, unterschlug 1612 Mark und wurde vom hiesigen Landgericht zu zehn Monaten Gefängniß und drei Jahren Ehrverlust verurtheilt. — Der Generallieutenant z. D. B. v. Tettau, der sich im deutsch-französischen Kriege vielfach auszeichnete, ist hier, fast 80 Jahre alt, gestorben. Er besaß das Eiserne Kreuz 1. Klasse.

Freiberg. Der Gutsbesitzer Geißler ist auf dem Feld vom Blitz erschlagen worden.

Plauen. Es wird beabsichtigt, hier eine große Tüllfabrik zu errichten, um die Vogtländische Spitzen- und Stickereiindustrie von dem Bezuge englischer Tülle mehr unabhängig zu machen. In den ersten sechs Monaten dieses Jahres wurde nach Deutschland Rohtüll, meistens aus England, im Werthe von 5,878,000 M. eingeführt.

Zwickau. Das Landgericht verurtheilte den Grünwaarenhändler Walther wegen Verkaufs verdorbener Bücklinge zu zwei Monaten Gefängniß und die Gutsbesitzersehefrau Bräunlich in Seelingstädt wegen Verabreichens von Fleisch zweier an Rothlauf verendeter Schweine an ihr Gesinde zu sechs Wochen Gefängniß.

Thüringische Staaten.

Eisenach. Der Gemeinderath bewilligte zum Bahnhofumbau 500,000 Mark.

Hildburghausen. Der Hausverwalter Küchner von der hiesigen Irrenanstalt wurde wegen Verdachts, Unterschlagungen begangen zu haben, verhaftet.—In der Nähe der hiesigen Station sprang der praktische Arzt Edmund Helbing aus Bremen aus dem Eisenbahnzug. Er erlitt so schwere Verletzungen, daß er verstarb.

Weimar. Der Schulvorstand hat sich grundsätzlich mit der Anstellung von Schulärzten einverstanden erklärt und die Errichtung eines Jugendheims für solche Kinder beschlossen, deren Eltern tagsüber von der Wohnung abwesend sind.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Bei Steinwerder fand in Gegenwart zahlreicher Sachverständiger die Vorführung der Aufsehen erregenden Erfindung eines Böhmen, Alexander Quintus aus Eger, statt. Es handelt sich um einen Rettungsanzug, nicht unterscheidbar von gewöhnlichem Loden, auch nicht schwerer, ein völlig modernes Kleidungsstück, das den schwersten Träger über Wasser hält. Die Tragfähigkeit nimmt räthselhafter Weise zu, je länger der Anzug im Wasser ist und je mehr er sich vollgesogen hat. Die Anzüge bestehen wesentlich aus Rennthierhaar. Der Preis beträgt 60 bis 80 Mark. Quintus benennt seine Erfindung „Wellenfürst."

Bremen. Hier wurde der Agent Ingelmann zu vier Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt. Er hatte an den Kaiser geschrieben, daß er wichtige Aufschlüsse über eine Welfenverschwörung machen könne, es stellte sich jedoch heraus, daß es auf eine ganz gewöhnliche Gelderpressung abgesehen war.—In Bremerhaven brannten das Holzlager von Moebius und acht Wohnhäuser ab. Der Schaden beträgt ungefähr 1,000,000 Mark. Ein Feuerwehrmann wurde vom Rauche erstickt.

Lübeck. Bei den mehrfachen Seeregatten auf der Lübecker Bucht ist den hiesigen leitenden Kreisen von Seiten des Kaisers und zahlreicher Hamburger und Kieler Segelfreunde nahe gelegt, man möge auch in Lübeck, ähnlich wie der Norddeutsche Regatta-Verein in Hamburg, eine Vereinigung zur Wahrung der Interessen des Segelsports gründen. Diesem Wunsche ist jetzt durch Gründung eines Yachtklubs entsprochen. Dem neuen Verein sind sofort 87 den angesehensten Kreisen Lübecks angehörende Personen als Mitglieder beigetreten.

Oldenburg.

Oldenburg. Die Stadt Friesoythe wurde durch eine große Feuersbrunst heimgesucht. Zwölf Häuser sind niedergebrannt.

Mecklenburg.

Wismar. Hier wurde ein etwa 70jähriger Arbeitsmann, Namens Köhler, während er bei dem Fuhrmann Göffel vor dem Poeler Thor mit Mähen beschäftigt war, vom Hitzschlag getroffen und starb auf der Stelle.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Lilac, dear, I want to speak to you. Can you give me a moment?"

A fortnight had pased since the meeting between the Californian girl and Mark at the railway-station at Liverpool, a fortnight during which Lilac had felt happier than she thought it possible to be without Roy. For Mrs. Mowbray, a dear old lady, with one of the most kindly and sympathetic of faces and the most beautiful of silvery hair, was, as her son had said, quite different from Lady Garth, and she did all she could to make the girl forget that she was among strangers. Lilac could not help thinking how differently she might have acted had Roy's mother been like her; but it was best, of course, that she should know in which direction the Baronet's interests really lay, and she felt no resentment against his mother for having shown it to her so plainly. Although Mrs. Mowbray, on the other hand, had not said so in so many words, it was quite clear that she wanted Lilac for a daughter-in-law.

Lilac put down the newspaper with its columns of vacant situations of all sorts, and crossed the room to take a seat by the old lady's side.

"Well, my dear, have you found the situation you want?" she asked, taking the girl's hand in her own; and Lilac sadly shook her head. She was becoming very hopeless as to getting anything to do by which she could support herself, and every day was laying her under greater obligations to Mark.

"No, Mrs. Mowbray, I have not found it yet—or, rather, I have found a good many, but they all require qualifications that I have never possessed. I do not know what there is that I am fit for."

"I think, dear, that you are more fit to be mistress of a house like this than anything else," said the elder lady; and Lilac reddened but did not reply. "Mark has said nothing to you about it, has he," asked his mother, "since the evening that he came here with you?"

Lilac shook her head.

"He has been very kind," she said.

His mother returned enthusiastically—

"He always is. He will never bother you again about his love until you give him permission. But I cannot keep silent," she went on. "You see I am an old woman, my dear and I have only my son to live for; and it pains me very much to see the unhappiness that he will not admit but which he cannot hide from me. Lilac, dear, why do you not make him happy?"

The girl's eyes had filled with tears.

"I cannot, Mrs. Mowbray. It would be wrong to him when I cannot give him my love. That is all that I think of."

"Is that all? Are you quite sure?"

Quite sure, Mrs. Mowbray."

"Then why will you not take the opinion of an old woman who has seen a great deal more of life than you have, dear? Mark has told me as much of your love-story as you have imparted to him, and I think it would be best for your own happiness, dear Lilac, as well as my boy's, if you became his wife. No—don't interrupt me! I have been thinking the question over very deeply, and my experience teaches me that you would grow to love your husband in time, and be very much happier than if you lived out your life entirely alone, as you think of doing."

"I was not thinking of my own happiness," said Lilac, "but of Mark's; and I do not see how it can make him happier to give him my hand without my heart. It would be doing him an injury."

"It might be if he did not love you, dear," said the old lady sagaciously; "but while you remain unmarried he will never be able to forget you or reconcile himself to your refusal; and it will spoil his whole life, I am afraid. Take my word for it that you would be doing right to marry him."

"But, Mrs. Mowbray," cried Lilac, when the old lady interrupted her.

"Do not answer me now, dear, but think it over. Remember that I ought to be a good judge of anything that concerns my boy's happiness."

As she spoke she pressed a kiss upon the girl's forehead, and then rose to leave the room before Lilac could raise a protest against her arguments.

In the adjoining room Mrs. Mowbray found Mark marching restlessly backwards and forwards.

"I cannot stand this any longer, mother mine!" he said, with determination in his musical voice. "I thought that I was stronger than I am. It maddens me to see her every day and not be able to make her love me! I shall go abroad again. You will look after her for me, won't you?"

"Of course, dear. I feel towards her as though she were my daughter; but, if I were you, I would not go away just yet. Perhaps she will change her mind."

"She has been saying something to you?" he questioned, excitedly.

The old lady shook her head.

"No; I have been saying something to her. If Lilac is the girl I take her for, I think it will make her alter her decision." She spoke very hopefully.

Meanwhile Lilac sat and pondered, wondering what she ought to do. It was impossible for her to go on enjoying the hospitality of the Mowbrays and giving nothing in return. At the end of an hour she retired to her room and dressed herself for travelling. Then she went in search of Mrs. Mowbray, who was rather startled by the sight.

"You are going out, dear?" she asked.

"Yes—I am going on a journey."

"You will let Mark accompany you?" she said, anxiously. "It will only be safe while that ruffian-like cousin of yours is at large. I am sorry that you did not appear against him and have him sent to prison. Mark thinks that he saw him this morning, watching the house. You had better let Mark accompany you."

"I should be glad if he would see me to the station, then; but I must make my journey alone. When I come back, I will give you the decision that you asked me for.

"You are going to Delverton then?" said the quick-witted old lady.

And Lilac nodded.

"To see Sir Roydon Garth?"

"No; I want to see Lady Garth—his mother—if I can."

"Very well, dear. And you will give Mark his answer when you return."

Mrs. Mowbray said no more, but she went in search of her son, to warn him not to speak of his love to Lilac on their way to the station, or to press her for permission to accompany her any farther.

"To-night, when she returns, I think that she will promise to marry you," she said; and Mark, who had rarely found his mother at fault, derived fresh hope from the prophecy.

Lilac had a very definite idea as to what her purpose was in visiting Delverton, but she had only the most hazy ideas as to how she was to achieve it without meeting Roy, the very thought of which was enough to set her trembling. Although she had told herself again and again that all chance of her marrying Roy was past, she could not quite conquer the idea that, after all, she might have made a mistake, and that Roy's love for her might be as true as hers for him.

It was to kill this last flicker of hope that she had determined to visit the Hall and see Lady Garth. Evangeline she dared not meet any more than Sir Roydon himself, but she knew that with Lady Garth she would stand in no danger of breaking down and revealing love which, for Roy's own sake, she was so anxious to disguise. Even if she did, Lady Garth could be trusted to keep the secret which, if revealed, might make her son hesitate about fulfilling her fondest hopes by marrying Evangeline.

She would question Lady Garth and learn what had happened since her departure from the Hall—whether the Baronet had gratefully acepted the surrender of her love, or whether, after all, he had shown that his love was very deep. If the latter was the case, her ladyship could hardly fail to tell her, for the aristocratic old woman's first and foremost thought was most assuredly her son's happiness. Lilac herself was so truthful and honest that he could not imagine that Lady Garth might deceive her to serve her own purpose; though possibly it was some dim suspicion which made the girl determine to interview Lady Garth personally instead of trusting to a letter, in spite of the difficulty of doing so without risking the meeting with Roy which she dreaded.

When she reached the Hall she walked up the stone steps at the entrance to the house with a quickly-beating heart and an excitement that was half hope and half fear. She was wondering whether she would be fortunate enough to find her ladyship alone, when an exclamation behind her made her turn, and she saw Lady Garth herself coming towards her from the garden.

The way in which the old lady hastened forward made Lilac think that she was anxious to welcome her, until she caught sight of her ladyship's face, which expressed nothing but consternation. To Lilac's astonishment, she hurried past her without even a word, to open the door noiselessly and beckon her into the house with every sign of secrecy.

"Come up stairs to my room, Lilac," she said, speaking for the first time when they were in the hall, where as yet no servant had appeared in answer to the girl's timid knock. "We shall have no fear of interruption there.'

The old lady scarcely seemed to breathe until the door of her dressing-room was closed behind them. Then she shook hands with her guest and explained.

"I left Roy in the garden talking to Evangeline," she said, "and did not wish them to see you. Although my son is reconciled to your departure"—Lilac's heart sank—"still it would be disturbing for him to see you before he has quite recovered from his illness. He has had so much anxiety and worry that following so soon upon his accident, it has made him quite ill, and he is up for the first time today. But what is the object of your visit, Lilac? Of course it is very kind of you to call and let me know hoy you are getting on; but do you not think that it is a little injudicious just at present? After the sort of half-engagement that existed between you, it would surely be rather uncomfortable for you both to meet so soon, especially now that he is engaged to his cousin! But tell me about yourself now that you are here. You are not married yet to this Mr. Mowbray—eh?" She raised her gold pince-nez as she spoke and surveyed the girl critically.

Lilac's face was quite pale, and her lips were tightly compressed as she answered.

"We are to be married soon. I am staying with his mother in Liverpool."

"And she is pleased to have you as a daughter-in-law?"

"Very pleased, Lady Garth."

"That is most gratifying, then," said her ladyship, with a sigh of contentment. "The whole turn of affairs is very satisfactory, is it not?"

"Very satisfactory," said poor Lilac through her white lips.

"But you have not told me the object of your visit?" Lady Garth went on; and Lilac hesitated for a few moments. Then she said, speaking quite calmly—

"I simply wished to ascertain, before taking any final step, that Sir Roydon's happiness would not suffer. It is unnecessary to keep up any disguise with you, Lady Garth, and I think you understand already that I did not consult my own happiness in going away."

"I guessed something of the truth, dear, and admired you for it. Of course it was much nobler of you to consider my son's and Evangeline's happiness before your own. I think that it was altogether for the best, and I am glad to know that you are still to make a marriage which I understand will be a very good one for you."

"Although I am breaking my heart over it," said Lilac coldly. "I came here to ask you, Lady Garth, whether my sacrifice has really given him happiness to the man I love. You say that he is already engaged to his cousin?"

She looked straight into her companion's eyes, and her ladyship flushed a little. She turned her head aside to escape the girl's scrutiny, and looked down into the garden, where she saw something which encouraged her to speak the truth.

"I was not right, perhaps, in saying that they were actually engaged," she said, turning to face Lilac again; "but I have no doubt that they will be shortly. Just before your arrival my son informed me of his intention to ask Evangeline to be his wife. See—they are in the garden together now, and I expect he is carrying his purpose into effect."

As she spoke Lady Garth drew the girl to the window, and there, half hidden behind the curtain, Lilac looked down upon a sight that for a moment took away all power of movement. The Baronet and his cousin were walking slowly across the lawn, Roydon looking very pale and weak after his illness, and leaning heavily on Evangeline's arm, but talking to her with great earnestness. Suddenly, as she looked, Evangeline turned, and, throwing her arms around the sick man's neck, kissed him on either cheek.

A deep sigh of relief from her companion recalled Lilac to a remembrance of where she was, and she turned away at once.

"Is that enough?" said Lady Garth, with a smile of satisfaction which she could not conceal.

Lilac bowed.

"Will you help me to leave the house without being seen by anybody, please?" she said, calmly still, although she wondered how she could think or speak at all. "I should not like them to hear from the servants that I had been here."

"Of course not, dear," said her ladyship, whose graciousness and friendliness increased as her fears grew less. "I will take you through the drawing-room, and nobody will be the wiser. I am glad that you came, and I shall always feel a great admiration for you, Lilac."

Her ladyship advanced as though to kiss her, but Lilac drew away, and held out her hand.

"Thank you for assisting me, Lady Garth," she said. "Everything, as you say, is very satisfactory."

Her voice trembled a little as she spoke, in spite of the restraint she was placing upon herself to remain calm; and fearing lest the girl might break down before she left the Hall, her ladyship led the way at once noiselessly down the broad staircase, through the drawing-room where Evangeline had sung so hopelessly of her "Robin Adair," through one of the tall French windows into the garden, and so by a narrow garden-path almost to the gates of the drive.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, Sept. 1, 1898, at 2:30 p. m.

All members were present except Freeholder Hulskamper—1.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read; some discussion arose relative to the offer of Louis Quien, C. E. in reference to the widening, etc., of Westfield avenue, and on motion of Freeholder King it was ordered that the portion of said minutes referring to Mr. Quien's offer be stricken out.

The minutes were then approved as read.

PETITIONS, COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From Wm. J. Fryer, stating that he was a taxpayer in New Providence, Union county, and owned residence properties on the road from New Providence to Townley bridge; said road, nearly three miles in length, was a mud road, and in spring and fall was almost impassable; there was much teaming and transportation over said road to market in Newark; the condition of the road made it prohibitory for pleasure driving, even in summer. He petitioned to have said road macadamized, as the petitioner was informed that the Morris county authorities would continue said road in a like manner beyond Townley bridge.

The reputation of Union county for good roads could not be maintained while such a road existed in the county.

The communication was received and placed on file.

From the Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Co., as follows:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: The Elizabeth City Horse Raiload Co has executed a bond for the faithful performance of its proposition to construct, maintain and operate a street railroad from Elizabeth to Plainfield, which has been approved by Mr. Justice Van-Syckel. The company has also obtained nearly all the consents of property owners required in the city of Elizabeth and the township of Union, and will have the remainder necessary in a few days.

The company will make application to the City Council of the city of Elizabeth at its next meeting, to be held on the 6th inst., and to the Town Committee of Union at its next meeting, for permission to construct a street railroad on Orchard street and Westfield avenue, as proposed in said city and township.

The company therefore requests your honorable body to take such action as may be necessary to secure the land required to widen the avenue from Orchard street, in Elizabeth, to the Cranford line. The company will therefore proceed at once with the construction of the road.

The Elizabeth Street Railway Co., now owning and operating by horse power a line from Broad street, in Elizabeth, to Staten Island Sound, will make application to the next meeting of the City Council of Elizabeth for permission to reconstruct and equip that line for operation by electricity, so that it may be connected with the line to be built by the Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Co., and as soon as such permission is granted the work of reconstruction and equipment will be commenced.

Dated Sept. 1, 1898.

Signed, Respectfully,
The Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Co. By John Kean, President.

On motion of Freeholder Roll received and placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the Committee on Bridge street bridge at Rahway:

Elizabeth, Sept. 1, 1898.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen: Your committee on new bridge over the Rahway river at Bridge street, Rahway, would respectfully report that in accordance with a resolution adopted June 16th last, the contract for the iron work at said point for a plate girder buckle plate bridge was awarded to William T. Kirk at his bid of $4,649, and for mason work on said bridge awarded the contract to Robert Brown at his bid of $3,400, total, $8,049, said bids being the lowest ones presented for said bridge

Signed, Chr. Ehrlich, John Farrell, Benjamin King, Jacob Brucklacher, Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Burnett received and placed on file.

Freeholder Roll, chairman of the county road committee, reported on the complaint of W F. Brower, New Providence, relative to the stoppage of a culvert on the county road in said township, that the committee had visited the locality in question, and after investigating the matter found that there was no cause for action by this board; the flow of water on the county road was not obstructed, and the only trouble existing could be remedied by the local board of health.

The report was received.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Burnett:

Resolved, That James G. Moore's bill, amounting to $425 for work on Faitoute avenue and Long avenue bridges, in Union township, be paid when the work has been approved by the committee in charge, and the bill properly audited.

Freeholder Miller moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Burnett:

Resolved, That Dennis Long's bill, amounting to $62 50 for work on Long avenue bridge, be paid when the work has been approved by the committee in charge, and the bill properly audited.

Freeholder Farrell moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll-call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Higgins:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to ascertain the advisability of building a bridge over the small creek crossing Fourth avenue, Roselle, near the Episcopal church.

On motion of Freeholder Swain the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Higgins, Roll and Farrell.

By Freeholder Brucklacher:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed with power to examine, repair and reset the stone work and iron railing on the two parapet and wing walls of the Rahway avenue bridge at Elizabeth, at price not to exceed $175.

Freeholder Farrell moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll-call it was unanimously adopted.

The director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Brucklacher, King and Miller.

By Freeholder McCandless:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed with power to examine, repair and connect culvert to sewer now in course of construction on Sayre street, near Morris avenue, at Elizabeth, N. J., the cost of same not to exceed $250.

Freeholder Brucklacher moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

The director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders McCandless, Robison and Adams.

By Freeholder Miller:

Resolved, That the committee on county roads be and they are hereby authorized and requested to employ some proper person or persons to ascertain the terms on which each piece of land may be obtained necessary to widen Westfield or North avenue, from Orchard street, in the city of Elizabeth, to the boundary line between Union and Cranford townships, and to make report to the Board as soon as practicable.

Freeholder Farrell moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That the committee on public grounds and buildings be hereby authorized to provide necessary booths and ballot boxes for the new election districts created within this county during the past year.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That the amount due the county of Union from John and Wm. F. Connolly for the support and maintenance of Margaret Connolly at the State Hospital be released, and the amount of such indebtedness be cancelled, and that the county collector is hereby directed to cancel the bond given by said John and Wm. F. Connolly.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, which was duly seconded.

Freeholder Farrell, speaking in support of the resolution, said that John Connolly was the husband of Margaret Connolly; he was now an old man, and had always been a hard-working and respected citizen of Rahway; during the years when Mr. Connolly was able to work he had paid for the maintenance of his wife at the State Hospital (asylum).

Mrs. Connolly had been an inmate of the hospital for thirty five years, and doubtless would end her life there.

Mr. Connolly was now old, in ill health, and unable to longer support his wife; he had a little property, but if the bond held against him he would lose the same and be without a home.

Mr. Farrell believed that if the resolution prevailed it would be acknowledged as an act of justice by all who were familiar with the circumstances.

Freeholder King vouched for the upright character of Mr. Connolly, after which the resolution was on roll-call unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Brucklacher:

Resolved, That the committee on county roads and the county attorney be and are hereby authorized to prepare a draft of contract to be executed by the Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Company, after the same has been duly approved by this board, said contract to specify the conditions, etc., under which the said railroad company are to lay and operate said road.

On motion of Freeholder Roll the resolution was adopted without dissent.

Freeholder Farrell moved that when the board adjourns it stands adjourned to meet Thursday, Sept. 15th, 1898, which was so ordered.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read, and on roll call unanimously adopted:

Freeholder Farrell moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, September 15, 1898, at 2:30 p. m.

S. RUSLING RYNO, Clerk.

COL. HAY IN NEW YORK.

The Coming Secretary of State Talks Briefly on Public Affairs.

New York, Sept. 23.—Colonel John Hay, former ambassador to England, is a guest at he Holland House. He was a passenger on he Teutonic, which arrived late Wednesday evening.

Colonel Hay was accompanied by his wife, his son, Clarence, and two daughters.

When seen yesterday he would talk only briefly on public affairs, being very busy.

He said in reference to an Anglo-American alliance substantially what was expressed by Lord Brassey in an interview here a fortnight ago, that the cordiality of England's feeling toward the United States was remarkable and not fully appreciated in this country, and that no formal treaty, but only a better understanding was needed between the two nations.

Colonel Hay was pleased, of course, at the outcome of the war with Spain, and said that his pleasure was shared by Englishmen generally.

On chief subjects of interest to Europe at present—Crete, Dreyfus, Kitchener and the Far East—the coming secretary of state's guarded comments gave promise of discretion in the office which he has returned to fill.

COL. JOHN HAY.

The czar's proposition for a general disarmament, he said, was credited with sincerity, but not believed capable of realization as yet; the Dreyfus case had enlisted England's sympathy; it was impossible to forecast the settlement of the Eastern question; Kitchener was a popular hero in England, and his campaign was being followed closely by all Europe, and undoubtedly the Cretan problem would be solved.

When questioned about matters of more vital interest to the American people, matters with which his policy as secretary of state would be concerned, such as our dispute with Canada, the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and the Nicaragua canal, the Turkish claims and the Philippines, Colonel Hay maintained a diplomatic silence.

The Grape's Curious Flower.

Ever notice the curious flower of the grape? Beatrix will wager her favorite bonnet that not one in twenty who eat grapes with gratitude every autumn could name the peculiarity of its diminutive bloom. The unopened flower looks like a little balloon. The balloon-shaped portion is the corolla; the calyx is a rim or disc at its base. When the flower opens the petals break away below, or at the base of the balloon. They cohere at the top, shielding the stamens, and thus the flower is said to be "hooded." When the flower is fully expanded this cap or hood falls off, leaving the five bare stamens.

Wheat for Chickens.

We have just received the choicest lot of wheat for this purpose that we have ever seen. It won't last long.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Henry Angerbauer, of East Third street, has purchased a new wheel.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown, of Clinton avenue, each have a Stearns wheel.

Again the rain interfered with the Y. M. C. A. bicycle run, and the run to Orange, scheduled for last night, had to be abandoned. This was to have been the last run of the season, and as the boys don't seem to take any interest in the runs, anyway, no more will be arranged for. Out of twelve runs this summer, nine have been interfered with by the rain. The runs to Summit and Newark occurred on clear nights and so did the one to New Brunswick, but at the latter place the boys received such a "warm" reception that they have been completely discouraged ever since. Whether a schedule will be arranged next season is not known, but the officers say that unless the members show more interest in them than they have this year, the scheme will be given up.

Walter Emmons, of Jackson avenue, is ill.

Fred Barker, of Newark, is visiting Plainfield friends for a short time.

Mrs. R. Frazee, of West Sixth street, has returned to her home after a very pleasant sojourn of six weeks at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I.

Jed M. Smalley, of the Borough, has accepted a position in Swift's beef house, Philadelphia, and will enter on his duties Monday next.

William Brant, Jr., of Elizabeth, who has been granted a months' furlough, spent Wednesday with Mrs. R. Frazee, of West Sixth street. He has been stationed at Camp Alger, and will return next week to Camp Meade, from there will go to Porto Rico. His experiences and hardships of camp life are very interesting.

Miss Edna Bowers, daughter of L. H. Bowers, of Basking Ridge, has taken up her residence at the home of Mr. Connelly, 35 Manning avenue, for the purpose of attending the Borough Public High School. Miss Bowers was graduated last year from the Basking Ridge school and she desires to complete her education in the borough.

YESTERDAY AT TRENTON.

delegates found much to hear from each other in that way, but the Union county group was particularly free from such affairs. Judge Cross was way in the lead for the Senatorial nomination to fill out the term left vacant by the proposed resignation of Voorhees. Voorhees intends to offer it at once, for he is confident of election and does not want to complicate matters by having two offices at once.

There was some feeling about to see just how Fowler stood for another term to Congress. There was a little effort against him in Hudson, while some of the Plainfield Republicans were rumored to be still sore over his choice in the race for the postmastership of the Plainfield office. Most of the Eighth district, however, expressed itself very strongly in favor of the present incumbent, and present appearances point that he will be renominated with but little if any fight.

The delegates from Somerset had much to think about. There were some who prophesied another collision between L. A. Thompson, the Somerville leader, and Senator Reed. Thompson did not put in his appearance and rumor said that he was waiting for the county convention. As a result, Senator Reed was made chairman of the delegation without contest and marshalled his forces in good order. There were several other matters to occupy their attention as well. Assemblyman VanDoren, of Millstone, was prominent in the delegation. His present aim appears to be the nomination for sheriff. George C. Cooper, of Somerville, is also mentioned for the same place. Both were carefully looking over the ground yesterday.

A story from the wilds of Somerset has it that Sheriff W. H. H. Wyckoff, of Somerville, and Assemblyman VanDoren are anxious to swap offices at the next election. Whether Wyckoff will make any fight for the Assembly nomination is a matter for conjecture. Another little boom for the latter coveted place was started by Edward Cooper, one of the little gathering of Republicans up in Warrenville. He is reported to be ready and waiting to have his name go up for the Assembly.

Now that the State convention of the Republicans is over, all eyes will be turned toward the Democratic party to see who will represent them in the fight against Foster Voorhees. The Democrats will hold their convenhere Wednesday of next week. Then convention and Inter-State Fair will divide the honors.

Wanted to lean Out the Place.

Late yesterday afternoon a colored pool player, named Gabriel Brown, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being disorderly at a local pool room. The police were called in just in time to prevent Brown from cleaning out the whole establishment. He was arrrested and after a hearing yesterday afternoon the Judge fined him $3.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Justice Mosher, who is always looking towards improvements in the aspect of his court, and continually making changes so as to make it resemble more and more the courts at Elizabeth, has just added another railing inside the railing which shuts off the court proper from the main room. The new railing surrounds the Justice's platform on which he sits when administering justice, leaving just room enough inside for His Honor, the witness and two reporters. For the latter he has reserved a small space, with desk room. Every one who has seen the change, says that it is a great improvement.

* * * * *

The ladies of the Town Improvement Association some time ago agitated the idea of the Central Railroad having low platforms built alongside their tracks so that it would not be such a high step from the ground to the car steps. If the company could not do this, then it was suggested at a meeting held last winter that all the brakemen carry small stools. Neither suggestion has been acted upon, and when Edward Martin, the porter, is not in attendance at the depot to carry out the two movable benches for the passengers, they have to take the long step. But yesterday morning when the 8:48 train came in Martin was busy elsewhere, and there was no one to carry out the benches. Two members of the Town Improvement Association, however, who wanted to take the train, decided not to board it without the aid of a bench, so carried out one themselves.

CHINESE GAME BIRDS

Something Interesting for American Sportsmen.

John Goodnow, the new Consul General at Shanghai, China, expresses an intention to fulfill the demands of American sportsmen by introducing various breeds of Chinese game birds into this country. When John O. Denny was Consul General at the port of Shanghai in 1881 he became deeply interested in this work, and it was he who first introduced the Chinese pheasant, now counted by hundreds of thousands in the forest lands of Oregon. The bird is now known as the "Denny" pheasant, and if Mr. Goodnow lives up to his promise we may yet expect to see a breed of birds thriving under the title of the "Goodnow grouse," for there are several species of this game bird in China that are susceptible of transportation into Minnesota territory.

Judge Denny's first experiment in 1881 was a failure. The next year he tried again, with success. Twenty-eight birds arrived at Portland, Ore., safely. They were immediately set free among the grain fields and brush-covered and woodless prairies at Judge Denny's brother's ranch in Linn county.

What happened was really very marvelous. Nothing was seen of the new bird for a year or two, and then, here and there, in different portions of the country, shy little coveys made their appearance, and before five years had elapsed the cucketting of the brilliant plumaged male birds was far more commonly heard than that of the native grouse. Through Judge Denny's instrumentality the Legislature passed a law protecting the new pheasant for five years, and at the expiration of this period the time was extended for another five years. At the end of ten years Oregon was literally alive with the Chinese pheasant, which delights the heart of every sportsman with its swift and rapid flight, and tempts the most epicurean palate by its delicate white flesh.

Last year the game warden of Linn county reported that over 13,000 birds of this family had been killed in the short open season now allowed in that county alone, and they are now numbered by the hundreds of thousands and cover four states in the Northwest. This prodigious increase is a problem for the statistician, and it will strike every one with wonder that twenty-eight birds in fifteen short years should have increased to countless thousands, but when it is explained that each mother bird during the spring and summer season lays from fifty to sixty eggs and hatches in three sittings almost as many youngsters the problem loses its mystery.—Minneapolis Journal.

THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN.

An Autocratic Ruler Who is Governed by the Will of His People.

The Ameer of Afghanistan, who was at first suspected of complicity with the Indian border troubles, but whose innocence is now well established, is one of the most autocratic monarchs in the world. Not the Czar of Russia nor the Sultan of Turkey is more absolute in authority. Yes he is, or makes himself, curiously subject to the will of the people in some respects. A few years ago he greatly desired to visit England and other European countries, and the British Government was anxious that he should do so. But he did not venture to do so without the consent of his people. So he took a plebiscitum on the subject. He sent a proclamation to every village in his empire, telling what he wanted to do, and explaining the advantages that would accrue to him and to the empire from such a tour, and asking the people to take a vote on the subject and let him know the result. So the question was submitted to universal suffrage. After a few weeks the returns were all in and were counted, and it was found that a considerable majority of the people were opposed to his leaving the country. He was disappointed, but acquiesced in the will of the people, and stayed at home, sending his second son to England in his place.—New York Tribune.

Subsidized Hotels in Norway.

Some people who have recently returned from a tour in out-of-the-way parts of Norway tell of a capital hotel system in vogue there, which might be adopted with advantage in some parts of Scotland and Ireland. In every village where no hotel exists some one of the more prominent inhabitants is subsidized by the Norwegian Government, and in return is bound to provide accommodation for not less than four travelers; he may take in more if he chooses, but four is the minimum. Norway owes much of her prosperity to tourists, and she certainly treats them well.—The Sketch.

A Few Palindromes.

Some person, with considerable amount of spare time on his hands, has compiled the following list of words that may be spelled backward and forward the same—palindromes, as they are called in learned language:

Anna, bab, bib, bob, bub, civic, dad, deed, deified, dewed, did, eve, ewe, eye, gog, gig, gag, level, madam, noon, otto, pap, peep, pip, pop, pup, redder, refer, repaper, reviver, rotator, sees, sexes, shahs, tat, tit, toot, tot and tut.

Temporary Bridge to be Built.

All difficulties regarding the bridge that is to be built over Union avenue, Bound Brook, for the trolley, have been settled and a temporary bridge will be placed in position by next week so that the trolley cars will be able to run from Dunellen through to Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan. The regular bridge will be started at once and completed as soon as possible.

Proud of His Good Memory.

When white people first went to live in Hawaii, their native servants, it is said, persisted in calling them by their Christian names. An English woman of strong will determined on her arrival in Honolulu that the servants should never call her Mary, and instructed them carefully in the presence of her husband. One day when she had visitors her cook put his head in at the drawing room door and politely inquired, "What vegetables for dinner to-day, my love?" He had heard her called that, and seemed proud of remembering not to say Mary.—Boston Transcript.

POLITICS WILL BE LIVELY IN SOMERSET.

Many Candidates For the County Nominations.

LEADERS MAY NOT AGREE.

ADDED INTEREST IN THE CONVENTION THE RESULT.

Former Senator Thompson and Senator Reed are Reported to be Not on the Best of Terms Politically—May Back Different Candidates for the Nominations of the County Offices.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Sept. 24—Two weeks from Monday night will see a lively fight in the Republican ranks throughout Somerset county. At that time the Republican primaries to elect delegates to the county convention will be held. The convention of the Republicans will be held in this city the Thursday following. The Republican convention a year ago saw the serious beginning of the breech between former Senator L. A. Thompson and Senator Charles A. Reed.

There was a time, and it was not so long ago, that these two men were particularly intimate in political circles. Thompson has long been looked upon as the Republican leader of this county while Senator Reed has, as one of his able lieutenants, risen rapidly to his present place in county affairs. At the last county convention, Thompson backed Surrogate Spencer for that nomination and the State Senator was credited with favoring George C. Cooper, of Somerville. Thompson's man was nominated.

At the gathering of the Somerset county delegation at Trenton Thursday, Thompson did not appear and Senator Reed was the leading star. As such he was made chairman of the delegation. It was rumored about, however, that there was a lively time in prospect for the coming county convention.

There are at present several candidates in the race after the Republican nomination for the offices of Sheriff and Assemblyman. Neither of the leaders have taken any active steps for any of them, so that it is rather difficult to see who are to be the principal rival candidates. George C. Cooper, of this city, is now mentioned as a candidate for the Assembly. So, too, is Ed. Cooper, of Warren. Assemblyman VanDoren is pointed out as wanting the shrievalty nomination, as also does George C. Snyder, of Franklin.

COUNTRY GIRL'S DOWNFALL.

Mattie Durling Now Traveling With a Disgraceful Show.

After eight years the mystery surrounding the disapperance of Mattie During, of New Germantown, has been cleared up. One morning in the fall of 1890, when she was eighteen years old, Mattie failed to appear for breakfast. It was said that she had gone away forever. Last week at the County Fair in Somerville, some New Germantown farmers saw at the theatrical tent a woman about twenty-five years old, who looked like Mattie Durling. They hunted up her father and told him they thought they had seen Mattie. The old man hurried to the tent. He begged his daughter to give up the life she was leading. She refused to go back to the old home, saying she could not take her old place in the village set.

FOR A PUBLIC PARK.

John Taylor Johnston Farm Suggested as a Suitable Site.

The borough correspondent of the Bound Brook State Centre contributes the following item this week:

Sometime in the next century, when all the short-sighted Jerseymen now roaming about here are in their last sleep, the citizens of Plainfield will be petitioning and demanding the purchase of the John Taylor Johnston farm for a public park suitable for the community. It contains 300 acres of land, running along Front street in Plainfield for nearly half a mile and thence back into Somerset county over First Mountain and into Washington Valley. Lakes and brooks abound and most of the property is now a park.

Soldiers Work for Furloughs.

GIVEN G. A. R. HONORS.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF LATE REV. H. F. F. SCHNELLENDRUESSLER.

Glowing Tribute of Words by Ministers to Their Dead Brother—At the Grave the Rites of G. A. R. Were Observed.

Very impressive were the funeral services of the late Rev. H. F. F. Schnellendruessler which were held from Trinity Reformed church yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The church was well-filled with friends of the departed. There was also a large delegation present from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which organization the deceased was a member.

The services were opened with Scripture reading by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, which was followed with a vocal selection, "Asleep in Jesus," by Miss Etta Krymer, Miss Minnie Williams, Horace J. Martin and Horace J. Martin, Jr., accompanied on the organ by David E. Titsworth.

Scripture reading was then continued by Rev. Mr. DeHart, of Raritan, after which Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, made a few remarks. In part he spoke somewhat as follows:

"You have seen our departed brother very often on the street; for more than a generation he has been a resident here. The scholars who attended the public schools about fifteen years ago remember his kindly and efficient instruction, and his patriotism was evidenced when the war broke out. For two years he served as chaplain of the Sixteenth N. Y. heavy artillery, U. S. Volunteers. In his death the church not only suffers a loss, but our denomination is a great loser, and this congregation also suffers. He was a student of God's word, and his mind was not easily swerved. Up to the very last he maintained his faith in God.

"He was a liberal man, far beyond his means. He gave more largely than 99 out of every 100 of the Christians in this city. The Lord has taken care of him even to old age, and has carried him along through the pathway of life over many rough places, and I commend to all these words of comfort."

The next speaker was Rev. Mr. Doolittle, of North Branch, a classmate of the deceased in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, who paid a glowing tribute to his character.

After Rev. Mr. Doolittle's remarks Rev. Augustus Todd, of Dunellen, offered a fervent prayer. This was followed with a selection, "Sleep on Beloved," by the quartette. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Koechli, of Somerville, a former pastor of the German Reformed church, of the borough.

Those present were then given an opportunity to view the remains, after which the body was borne from the church to the hearse by Deacon F. C. Adams, and Elders A. L. Force, Horace J. Martin, G. L. VanEmburgh and J. P. Laire.

At this time the members of the G. A. R. took charge of the services and interment was made at Hillside Cemetery. At the grave Commander E. C. Morse had charge and he was assisted in the services by Chaplain M. C. Dobbins, and Comrades E. D. Moffett, I. L. McVoy and Wm. C. Smith. The pall-bearers from the post were Comrades M. C. Dobbins, E. D. Moffett, James Clarkson and I. L. McVoy. During the services a usual volley was given by the firing squad consisting of Comrades Emmons, Compton, Sargeant, Sam. Moore, Wagoner, E. K. Allen, W. W. Coriell and Charles Willis.

The floral tributes consisted of several bunches of flowers, a large pillow from the G. 'A. R., and on the casket there rested a large American flag.

Among the floral tributes contributed to the memory of the departed was a sheaf of wheat and palms sent by A. D. Shepard, and a large bunch of roses sent by Mr. and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh.

Steve Brodie Furnished Bail.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Sept. 23.—Robert Hart, of Brooklyn, one of the men arrested for assaulting and attempting to rob G. V. H. Brinkerhoff at the Central station last week, was released on $250 bail by Judge Bartine. Hart is a brother-in-law of Stephen Brodie, the notorious bridge jumper, who came to Somerville and went on Hart's bond. The other crook, Flynn, is still in jail.

Election to Fill a Vacancy.

There was a meeting of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, last evening. One candidate was elected to membership. An election was held to fill a vacancy in the officers. Louis Morhing was made first sergeant and S. J. Robinson second sergeant.

COSTLY TUNE PLAYED IN A FANWOOD HOUSE.

Clever Ruse of a Sneak Thief to Get Into a House.

SLICK YOUNG MAN, INDEED.

DUPED THE SERVANT AND STOLE BOOTY WORTH $150.

While Mr. and Mrs. William Stanberry, of Fanwood, Were Away From Home a Young Man Posing as a Piano Tuner Visited the House and Was Admitted by the Servant Girl.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, Sept. 24—He came to tune the piano, he said, and thus gained entrance to the home of William Stanberry Wednesday afternoon, for the house servant suspected no harm. It was by far the most expensive tuning that Mr. Stanberry ever paid for. The prepossessing young tuner, after drumming on the piano for a time, quietly ransacked the house and then departed with some $150 worth of valuables.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanberry were away at the time and the servant was left alone. The stranger came, well-dressed and of gentlemenly appearance. Mrs. Stanberry had sent him to tune the piano, he told the servant. After working over it for a short time, he sent the maid on an errand. He then improved his opportunity and gathered in the jewelry that he could find. The maid returned and he soon departed, bowing himself out.

When the family returned later the theft was discovered and an investigation made. Mrs. Stanberry was greatly relieved to find that the thief had overlooked a chamois bag hanging on her dressing case and containing three gold watches and her valuable diamonds, valued in all at $500.

Mr. Stanberry notified the police of Plainfield and Elizabeth of the robbery and sent a description of the thief. The slick young stranger disappeared completely, however, and no trace of him has been found.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

A Field Day For High School Boys In Prospect This Fall.

Interest in general athletics among the boys of the Plainfield High School is on the increase. The annual meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was held at the schoolhouse Thursday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the year: President, Claude Edwards; vice-president, Roy H. Radford; secretary, Walter Squires; treasurer, Henry Cuming.

It was decided that the High School would not have an eleven in the contest for the football championship of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association. A committee, composed of Albert Schomp and Harry Cuming, was appointed to look into the advisability of holding a closed meet at the Crescent Oval this fall. They will report at the next meeting.

A Sick Soldier.

Willard Case, of Westervelt avenue, returned yesterday from Tampa, Fla., where he has been stationed, to enjoy a month's furlough. Case is a non-commissioned officer in the regular United States cavalry. He has been in hard luck ever since he was sent to the south. He was first kicked by a horse, and had barely recovered from the effects of that injury when he was taken with malarial fever. After recovering from that he succumbed to typhoid fever, and has now returned with his health generally impaired.

Too Heavy for a Wagon.

Captain William Hand, the truckman, has charge of the work of moving a sixteen-ton dynamo which the Electric Light Company has just bought, from the car back of the depot to the factory on Madison avenue. The dynamo is too heavy for any wagon or truck in this city, so it will have to be taken all the way from the depot to the factory on rollers. It will take about two entire days to do the work.

Should be Protected.

At the Plainfield Public Library there is on exhibition a beautiful coral brain, the gift of a friend. This costly piece of work is left on a small table entirely exposed. It should be placed under a glass case, and thus ensure its safety. Anyone so disposed can chip pieces off and thus destroy its perfectness.

Fireman Taken Suddenly Ill.

The fireman of the engine of the train from New York due here at 8:19 this morning, was taken ill just as the train reached this city, so Richard Titus, of Easton, the rear brakeman, mounted the engine and fired to the end of the run.

COUNTY ROAD PROPOSED

WOULD BE A SHORT CUT TO NEW MARKET.

Suggested That Middlesex Might Connect New Market With West Seventh Street and Then Macadam Road to City Line.

Anyone who has had occasion to want to reach New Market from Plainfield in a hurry and has attempted to take a short cut through West Seventh street or any other of the parallel thoroughfares has found the roads in terrible condition. Most of the traffic from New Brunswick, Stelton and neighboring towns, which passes through New Market en route to Plainfield, usually finds its way here by the way of Dunellen. It is considerably longer but the condition of the roads elsewhere make it rather imperitive.

It has recently been suggested that Middlesex county would do a good thing for its citizens and the rest of mankind if a macadam county road was built from New Market across to West Seventh street, and through that street to the city line. Then the city, in turn, might extend the macadam on West Seventh street a block further to connect with the county road. Such a connecting link between Plainfield and New Market would open up an entire new line of communication between Plainfield and the principal places in Middlesex county.

Such a road would find general favor with the great army of wheelmen that yearly pass between Plainfield and New Brunswick. The route would be shortened, and the disadvantages of riding close to the railroad track would be done away with. Horses easily frightened by the trolley would have no more trouble, and a new section of that part of Piscataway township would be opened up.

YOUNG CYCLIST HURT.

ROLAND CHANDOR HAD A NARROW ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS INJURY.

Was Upset by Horse and Then Two Wheels of Vehicle Passed Over His Leg—Mrs. William Smith was Driving.

Although two wheels of a carriage passed over his leg yesterday afternoon, Roland Chandor, of East Fifth street, is able to move around today. Young Chandor was riding his wheel on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon, when he encountered Mrs. William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, who was driving her carriage. The lad says that she was on the left-hand side of the street and so he supposed that she would turn out. Finding that she was not going to, he attempted to turn around and get out of the way. Then the horse struck him, and boy and wheel went down in a heap in the roadway.

Before any of the witnesses of the accident could reach him, the frightened horse went on and two of the wheels passed over young Chandor's leg. He was badly bruised but escaped serious injury. The wheel was wrecked.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

A Plainfield Young Woman Arrested in Elizabeth on a Serious Charge.

Lillian Wadsworth Smith, a well-dressed and pretty young woman, was arrested by Marshal John Crist, of Roselle, at the Central Hotel, on West Grand street, yesterday. She was taken to Roselle and arraigned before Justice Woodruff on a charge of larceny made by J. D. Moon, proprietor of the Van Court Inn. Miss Smith had been employed at the Inn. She disappeared from there Wednesday evening, and it is alleged took $10 and several articles of jewelry with her. She was held for the Grand Jury. Miss Smith is a resident of West Front street, Plainfield.—Elizabeth Journal.

First Trolley Accident in Dunellen.

(Special To The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Sept. 24.—Only one accident was reported yesterday, as the result of the trolley being in town. George Schenck's horse was hitched to a post in front of S. A. Richardson's house, on North avenue, when the car came along, and dashing across the road narrowly missed colliding with a tree. He was caught by William Sanderson who works for C. A. Coriell. Only a small break in the harness was reported as the damage done.

Opened His Daughter's Letters.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Sept. 23.—Philip Wesp, of Westfield, has been arrested by a United States deputy marshal, charged with obtaining at the Westfield post-office and opening letters belonging to his daughter, Julia Wesp Zimmermann. The warrant was issued by United States Commissioner John Whitehead, of Newark.

WINTER CLOTHING TRADED FOR BEER.

Bad Practices That Prevail in the Third Regiment.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE.

LARGE QUANTITY OF HEAVY CLOTHING ISSUED TO THE MEN.

Court-Martial of the Guilty Men Will Probably Take Place—Looks as Though the Third Regiment Would Stay at Pompton Lakes for Some Time Yet—Two Additional Companies Now There.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Pompton Lakes, September 24—Of late there have been a great many complaints among the men who have had articles of clothing stolen, and it reached such a pitch that a thorough inspection was made yesterday. Each company was ordered to hold its men in the company streets and each man was ordered to produce every article of clothing drawn. These were all checked off and many articles were missing. Numerous explanations were made for the loss; some had been sent home, stolen, etc. Major Shaller went on a search and brought into camp blankets, pouches, coats, sheets and other articles. The men were brought up to identify their goods and in some cases could not or would not do so. It was evident that the articles found had been sold by some of the men. One blanket was traded for a box of beer; others for similar articles.

Major Shaller is making a thorough investigation, which may mean court-martial for some of the men. There is no room for complaint here. This week every man has been supplied with an additional blanket, and a very large order of clothing has been received and is being issued. It includes suits, thick underwear and everything needed.

It looks as though the Third Regiment would be here for some time, word having been received at headquarters yesterday to allow the men floors and bunks for the tents. These are needed as the nights in the mountains are very cold.

The guard at the powder works was taken off last week, and this was taken as a sign that the men were about to move, but when the boys heard of the board floors ordered they changed their minds.

Companies C and K arrived here Wednesday from Fort Wadsworth. A large detail had been working all the week preparing ground for the two new streets.

The camp looks well, and it is doubtful if a healthier camp can be found in the United States. The tents have all been moved to new ground, a large new hospital tent has been put up this week, and the fact that but few men occupy it vouches for the healthfulness of the camp.

The men are now being allowed forty-eight hours furlough, ten men going from each company at a time.

ACCUSED OF STEALING A BARN.

The Jury Awards $5 Damages to the Plaintiff.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Sept. 24—Mrs. Margaret Casey was the defendant yesterday in a case tried before Justice Collins. The suit was brought by the American Building and Loan Association. Mrs. Casey was charged with having stolen a barn. The barn was on property on Senior street, formerly owned by her, but mortgaged to the loan association, which secured possession under foreclosure. It is charged that Mrs. Casey afterward removed the barn from the lot. She was charged with trespass and with taking the barn. The last charge did not lie and was not pressed.

The defense was that the mortgage deed contained a reservation permitting the removal of the property. Mrs. Casey broke down on the witness stand. The jury awarded only nominal damages of $5 to the plaintiff.

Second Crop of Strawberries.

C. Erkeson, of Woodland cottage, Mt. Bethel, father-in-law of William VanWinkle, of the borough, has a curiosity in his garden in the nature of a second crop of strawberries. A bunch of the ripened berries was sent to The Press office today.

Break in Fire-Alarm Wire.

Yesterday afternoon there was a break in the fire-alarm system in the borough, and Electrician Julius J. Stahl succeeded in locating the trouble on Grandview avenue, where the wires were crossed by an electric light wire.

POLITICAL POT-POURRI.

MUCH GOSSIP BUT NO CERTAINTY ABOUT SENATORSHIP.

A Cranford Man Now in the Field—A Bit of Gossip About Union County Sentiment Among the Democrats.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Sept. 24.—A boom for Colonel Jim Ferguson, of Cranford, for State Senator, to succeed Foster M. Voorhees, has been started among the Republican delegates from Union county on their way back from Trenton. Colonel Ferguson says he is in the fight and will try to win if possible. His campaign is in charge of former Freeholder George W. Littell, of Cranford, who intends stumping the county to secure delegates for the Colonel.

Ex-Speaker Joseph Cross is also a candidate, but the Republicans outside of Elizabeth say this place wants too much, and should be satisfied with the Governor and Congressman.

The Cranford people think that the townships are entitled to some recognition, and so does Freeholder J. Martin Roll, of Springfield, who has his weather eye on the secretaryship, and will feel pleased if it comes his way.

Among the Democrats there is a strong sentiment in Rahway for an Essex county man, and Mayor Seymour, of Newark, seems to be the favorite. In Elizabeth Senator Daly is likely to capture some delegates, but the feeling of a majority of Democrats here is in favor of either Seymour or Prosecutor Elvin W. Crane, of Newark. The only Democratic daily newspaper in this city came out strongly yesterday for Prosecutor Crane.

There does not appear to be much of a General Donnelly sentiment anywhere in the county except it may be in Plainfield. Farmer James Martine, the Democratic leader of that section, has not yet openly come out for any particular candidate. Mr. Martine may seek the Congressional nomination this fall, it being the only office, he has frequently declared, that he really would like to fill.

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT.

Rev. Mr. Gardner Married.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Perch River, N. Y., Sept. 24.—The marriage of Miss Charlotte May Phelps, of this place, to Rev. George Willis Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, was celebrated Thursday at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. Chamberlayne Phelps. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. After a short honeymoon the bride and groom will return to North Plainfield to live.

Stopped by a Tree.

An exciting runaway was noticed on Watchung avenue in the borough yesterday afternoon by Marshal Schenck. It was a two-wheeled rig and a fractious steed. In the gig there was seated a man and woman, and as the horse ran at full speed towards the mountains the man could be seen holding onto the reins with all his might. The horse was finally run into a tree. The occupants were not thrown out, but the gig suffered slight damage. The occupants refused to give their names, and after recovering their senses proceeded on their journey.

DEMOCRATS WHO WILL GO TO CONVENTION.

Primaries Held in Various Wards Last Night.

FAIR ATTENDANCE AT ALL.

BOROUGH ALSO SELECTED DELEGATES LAST NIGHT.

The Biggest Attendance Was in the Fourth Ward, Where There Was a Discussion About Holding the Primaries at a Later Hour Hereafter—In Second Ward Daly Was the Favorite.

The Democratic primaries in the various wards of the city and in the borough were held last night. The attendance was very fair, considering the lack of an efficient organization of the party in the city. The delegates go uninstructed in every instance and in none of the primaries was there any very outspoken stand in favor of any particular candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination:

FIRST WARD.

The voters of the above ward met and selected M. J. DeCourcy as secretary and John Rafferty as chairman. Those selected to represent the ward at the State convention as delegates were Councilman Walter L. Hetfield and John Rafferty. The delegates will go unpledged, but the sentiment prevailing seemed to favor Senator Daly as the choice for the Gubernatorial nominee.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary was held in the Bryant schoolhouse. There were fifteen present and the officers were James Martine, chairman, and Hezekiah Hand, secretary. The delegates chosen were Wm. K. McClure and James Guttridge.

An informal discussion was held afterwards, in which the prospects of the various candidates were spoken of. The Democrats in the Second ward are almost unanimous for Senator Daly, but did not give their delegates any instructions as to how they were to vote. It is likely though that they will cast their ballots for Daly.

THIRD WARD.

The primary in the Third ward was held at the Revere House. There were six present, including two newspaper representatives. James Clark was made chairman and F. M. Bacon secretary, and these two were also made the delegates to the State Convention and given power to fill their own vacancies.

FOURTH WARD.

About fifty voters gathered in T. A. B. Hall at 7:30 and at once proceeded to business. The meeting was called to order by Michael R. Flynn, who was made chairman. Elmore D. Moffett was elected secretary, Ira G. Hurlbut, judge, and James Kane, clerk. There being three voting districts in the Fourth ward they were entitled to one delegate from each district, three in all. E. D. Moffett was nominated from the First district, James Kane from the Second, and Ira G. Hurlbut from the Third. There being no opposition the secretary was authorized to cast the ballot for the three named and they were declared elected.

The question of alternates was then discussed, and after some remarks pro and con it was finally decided to empower the chairman to fill any vacancies that may occur in the delegation.

Some question was raised as to the idea of changing the hour of meeting from 8 o'clock, as heretofore, to 7:30, as it was argued that a great many voters in the ward did not read the papers and consequently did not know of the change in hour. It was proven later, when the primary was about over, when a great many voters made their appearance and said that they supposed the meeting was to be held at the usual time.

BOROUGH DEMOCRATS.

The Democrats of the borough met last evening in the basement of the public school for the purpose of selecting two delegates from the borough and one from the township to attend the Gubernatorial convention to be held in Trenton next Wednesday. There were about the same number of voters present that attended the Republican primary early in the week. The meeting was called to order by Andrew E. Kenney, and J. H. Trewin was made chairman. The secretary was David Bodine.

The delegates selected from the borough were John Emmons and Harry M. Cooke, while W. H. Smith was selected from the township. The secretary cast the ballot, and the delegates were empowered to fill any vacancies. One of the voters present was of the opinion that the borough was entitled to three delegates, but

ENTOMBED IN A MINE

Eight Dead and Nineteen Are Still Unaccounted For.

TWENTY-SEVEN ESCAPED

Terrible Accident at Brownsville, Pa. An Explosion of Gas the Cause of the Disaster. Searching Parties Make Brave Efforts to Find the Entombed Men.

Brownsville, Pa., Sept. 24.—Fifty-four men were entombed in the Umpire mine of Snowden, Gould & Co., a quarter of a mile below Brownsville, by an explosion of gas at eight o'clock yesterday morning. Two dead bodies were taken out soon afterward. They were James Hall and John Bennett. Five more bodies were recovered at 10 o'clock.

Twenty-seven of the entombed miners returned to town at 1.30 o'clock, having escaped by traversing a mile and a half of underground passages, coming out at an opening near Lynn station on the Red Stone branch of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Another body, that of Robert Davis, was recovered at this time, making eight dead. Nineteen miners are still unaccounted for.

Searching parties are making frantic efforts to reach the entombed miners, but their progress is slow, and there is great danger of another explosion, which might bury them also under tons of rock and earth.

Immediately following the explosion of gas there was a second explosion of fire damp. There were 140 men in the mine at the time of the explosion, work having been begun for the day a short time previous. Of these 58 were in entries Nos. 9 and 10.

Four men, Jacobs, Davis, Whetzell Walker and a Hungarian, were near the mouth of the entries. The others were far in.

When the explosion came these five men made a rush for the main heading, which they succeeded in reaching, though all were more or less injured. They finally crawled out to the open air.

Intelligence of the disaster soon spread, and crowds gathered around the mouth of the mine. Terrible scenes were presented. Wives and children of the entombed men were frantic with grief, and their shrieks and wails were frightful to hear.

Notwithstanding the great danger, the rescuing parties are working bravely, but their efforts have so far been fruitless.

GERMANY AND MANILA.

Government Warned of a Conspiracy With Aguinaldo.

San Francisco, Sept. 24.—A man of this city who formerly had a large interests in the Philippines and who has correspondents there and in Germany declared that the Germans are planning to help Aguinaldo by furnishing him with Krupp guns, rifles and skilled gunners, and that when they have made him so formidable that the Americans will be forced to retire, then Germany will take the islands and throw Aguinaldo over. What gives plausibility to his story is that the teller of it was the first to warn President McKinley of German designs on the Ladrones, which led to sealed orders to the Charleston to take those islands.

It will be remembered that the first intimation of the Charleston's mission came from this city, and at the same time the informant gave the first suggestion of German intermeddling in the Philippines, and with his knowledge of that Government's policy predicted serious complications. He told how he had seen Germany's officials in the guise of traders supplying arms and ammunition to Filipinos for years with the deliberate design to harass Spain until she would be glad to part with the islands at any price.

In spite of repeated disavowals by Germany of any such designs, time has proved that the Government's informent knew what he was talking about, and every few days since then Germany has made some move that plainly indicated her determation not to let the coveted Philippines slip away from her. Plans have been completed whereby the policy inaugurated under Spanish rule in the islands will be continued more vigorously, now that they are under American control. Germany is determined to have the Philippines, and Aguinaldo will continue to be the catspaw to rake in the chestnut. He has been beguiled by Germany into the belief that he will be permitted to assume the government in exchange for valuable concessions and commercial advantages that he can bestow upon the Germans, but Germany does not expect to retain him even as a figure head.

GEN. WOODFORD'S RESIGNATION.

Will Not Go to Madrid When Diplomatic Relations Are Resumed.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Officers of the administration admit that Gen. Stewart L. Woodford has tendered his resignation as United States minister to Spain, but are not able to give any particular reasons for that action other than that General Woodford practically relinquished his diplomatic post when his passports were tendered to him by the Madrid government last April. He has not been drawing any salary for more than two months.

The tender of his resignation means, of course, that General Woodford will not return to Madrid when diplomatic relations between the United States and Spain are resumed.

GEN. WOODFORD.

There is a report in administration circles that General Woodford wants to be United States senator from New York and has resigned in anticipation of a campaign to that end. He expects to become a member of the peace commission, and some surprise was created among his friends when he was not appointed, as they had been made to understand that he was one of the first men selected by the president.

Decision as to Dreyfus.

Paris, Sept. 24.—The Dreyfus revision commission has reached a decision in the matte of evising the tial, but its conclusions have not yet been communicated to the minister of justice.

Le Soleil publishes a letter from M. Trarieux, senator for Gironde, and formerly minister of justice, in which he assures Colonel Picquart of his continued affection and moral support and expresses himself as convinced that Picquart's judges will be compelled to recognize his innocence.

It is learned that it was General Chanoine and not General Zurlinden who actually transmitted to the military government after the adjournment of the cabinet council on Tuesday the dossier forming the basis of the fresh charges against Colonel Picquart. These papers he received from General Zurlinden.

Le Rappel declares that General Chanois was trapped into ordering the institution of military proceedings against Colonel Picquart, the order for his prosecution having been surreptitiously slipped in among a lot of important documents placed upon the minister's desk to be signed.

Battleships Nearly Ready.

Brooklyn, Sept. 24.—Preparations for the long trip of the Oregon and Iowa to Honolulu are rapidly nearing completion at the navy yard. Gangs of men are busily at work upon the decks of the Oregon, putting the finishing touches to the new planking which has been laid over the steel decks.

A few minor repairs of a like nature to the Iowa is all that is necessary to put both vessels in proper shape for their journey.

Officers on both the Iowa and Oregon deny that wholesale desertions are taking place aboard their ships since the orders to proceed to Manila have been received. There have been a few men, they said, who overstayed their leave, but the number was no greater than usual.

Forty seamen arrived aboard the receiving ship Vermont Thursday night to take the places of the short term men on the Iowa and Oregon. The recruits are from Boston, having been enlisted in that vicinity.

Rumored Cabinet Changes.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Rumors of forthcoming cabinet changes are flying thick and fast in the vicinity of the White House.

Every "cabinet maker" in the Capital city is working over time to help the president get rid of Secretary Alger and fill his place with more desirable timber.

Those persons who talked with the president yesterday ciuld discover no traces of a prospective reorganization of the cabinet.

King Menelek at Fashoda.

Berlin, Sept. 24.—A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from St. Petersburg says that it is regarded as possible, in the light of recent information, that not only the French expedition under Major Marchand but a force of Abyssinian troops is at Fashoda.

It is expected that King Menelek will refuse to relinquish his old claim to the Nile border of his empire, and accordingly may plant his flag and assemble a considerable force of troops opposite Fashoda.

Turkey Still Contrary.

Constantinople, Sept. 24.—The Porte has addressed another circular to the four powers controlling affairs in Crete protesting against the disarmament of the Mussulmans in that island unless the Christians are also disarmed simultaneously.

There have been a great many arrests of Mussulmans here within the last few days. The motive for the arrests is not known.

Ex-Secretary Sherman Better.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Ex-Secretary Sherman has so far recovered from his illness that his physician, Dr. Frank Hyatt, has left the city for a few days. On his advice, Mr. Sherman has abandoned his speech making plans in the state of Ohio.

AN EMPEROR DEPOSED

Ruler of China Not Dead as Rumored but Shorn of Power.

DOWAGER EMPRESS REIGNS

His Imperial Majesty Is Said to Desire Foreign Aid. The Emperor Now Only a Tool and Li Hung Chang Will Have More Power Than Ever. The Text of the Decree.

London, Sept. 24.—A dispatch to the Central News from Pekin, dated yesterday, says that the emperor is in good health, but is much disturbed at the realization of the existence of a conspiracy against him. The emperor issued an edict yesterday morning ordering the guards of the palace to patrol with extra care. The guards at the doors and elsewhere within the precincts of the palace have been strengthened.

The European community in Pekin believe that the life of the emperor is in danger. He is no match for the wily dowager empress and is sadly in need of foreign protection in his emergency.

Englishmen think that the present state of affairs is England's opportunity.

A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that the report of the death of the emperor of China is not confirmed. It seems, however, that his life has been endangered. The Taotai (governor) of Shanghai yesterday offered a reward of $2,000 for the arrest of Kung Yi Jei, the leader of the Reform party, who is accused of being the leader of a plot to murder the emperor, but whether there was an actual attempt to kill him is not known. The authorities are now searching vessels arriving here from the north in the hope of arresting Kung and his confederates.

Pekin advices received in Shanghai say that the city gates were closed on Thursday to prevent the escape of Kung, whose arrest had been ordered. Search was made for him throughout the city, but without success. The execution of the sudden order to close the gates probably gave rise to the rumor of the emperor's death.

Whether Kung was a real plotter against the emperor's life or is only made a scapegoat to shield others from the consequences of their intended crime, is not known. It is certain, however, that there has been a violent eruption in the palace at Pekin. The empress and the dowager empress are in violent opposition to each other, the empress being highly displeased at the reforms which the emperor inaugurated. She is desirous now that Prince Kung's grandson shall be placed upon the throne, with herself as the guiding spirit, and acting under the advice of Li Hung Chang.

A dispatch from Shanghai to a local news agency says that the imperial decree issued Thursday appoints the empress dowager nominally to assist the emperor in the direction of the government, but it practically amounts to the regency of the empress.

The emperor henceforth will be a mere tool, and Li Hung Chang, who will direct the Tsung-li-Yamen (foreign board), will have greater power than ever.

The Decree.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The Chinese minister, Mr. Wu Ting Fang, has received a cable dispatch from the Chinese foreign office at Pekin giving the text of the edict issued by the emperor committing to the empress dowager the direction of the vast affairs of the empire. The edict, freely translated, from the cipher code, is as follows:

"Now that China is disturbed, and there is need that all business shall be well done, we, the emperor, agitated from morning to evening for the welfare of all affairs, and fearful lest errors may occur, observing from the beginning of he reign of Tung Chi that the empress dowager had twice given instructions to the emperor, each time with signal ability and success, so we now, considering the important interests of the empire, have begged the empress dowager to give the emperor the benefit of her wide experience and her instruction. The dowager empress has been pleased to accede to this request.

"Therefore it is to the good fortune of the whole empire that this auspicious event is brought about. From today the empress dowager conducts the business in the imperial apartments, and on the eighth day of the present month (Chinese calendar, meaning today, English calendar), we will take all the princes and ministers to perform the ceremony in the Ching Cung palace. Let the yamen (foreign office) prepare that the ceremony may be performed with fitting honors."

A Proclamation Against a Prize Fight.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 24.—Governor Bradley, upon receiving a telegram conveying the report that arrangements are making to have the Corbett-McCoy fight in this state, near Cincinnati, issued a proclamation yesterday warning all persons not to attend the same, and directing the peace officers of the state to take steps to suppress the fight if attempted in Kentucky.

Denies Our Right in Luzon.

London, Sept. 24.—A special dispatch from Madrid says that ministerial authority has declared that the United States government has no right to a protectorate over any of the islands of the Philippine group, and that the Spanish peace commission will energetically defend Spain's right to their possession.

SHAFTER TALKS TO VETERANS.

Tells His Old Comrades About the Santiago Campaign.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—A special dispatch to the Tribune from Constantine, Mich. gives the following speech made by General Shafter at that place, where he went to attend the reunion of the 19th Michigan regiment, of which he was colonel during the civil war.

General Shafter said that when the fleet at first left Tampa it was intended to land it twenty-five miles from Havana and march on that city. When, however, the fleet put back because of the reported proximity of a Spanish squadron, word was received from Admiral Sampson that Santiago could be taken in twenty-four hours, and the army sailed for that port. General Shafter then described the campaign at Santiago.

"A lot has been said about lack of supplies," he said. "Men who go to war expect to be short rationed sometimes. You old soldiers here have often had much less to eat than the soldiers ever did at Santiago. My command during the civil war often drew corn on the cob for a meal.

"It was not a question of having supplies, when, if we had a thousand wagons, the fearful roads would not have let me take it to the front. But the men had coffee, bread and meat. Some of the men complained, but they are good soldiers in spite of that, and fought like heroes when they were called on.

"Tents could not be put up because the men were in the trenches and tents could not be pitched on the firing line.

"People say we should not have made that campaign in summer. What else could be done? We had to end the war and end it quickly. There was less loss of life by the experiment than by any similar invasion.

"Our campaign would have been frightfully disastrous if it had been long."

COLD COMFORT FOR FILIPINOS.

May See the President as Individuals but Not as Officials.

Washington, Sept. 24.—It is probable that if Agoncello and Lopez, the two representatives of Aguinaldo, who arrived Thursday at San Francisco, call at the White House on their way through Washington to Paris, they will be admitted to see President McKinley, but only as individuals, and not as representatives of any government.

The president doubtless would be glad to hear any views these Filipinos might care to set forth, being fresh from the islands and thoroughly acquainted with the wishes of the insurgents. But, it would be plainly inconsistent for the president at this date, and pending the conclusion of the peace conference at Paris, to allow it to be understood, by according a formal reception to the delegates, that he had recognized the Philippine government as an independent nation.

As the Filipinos have repeatedly by public declaration sought to convey the impression that the United States representatives in Manila have at some time during the progress of the war recognized Aguinaldo as an independent ally and entered into formal co-operation with him, it may be stated that the government at Washington is unaware that any such thing has happened.

Admiral Dewey, who was in command of all the United States forces during the most critical period, expressly cabled the navy department that he had entered into no formal agreement with Aguinaldo.

ARMY REORGANIZATION.

Only Four Corps to Be Maintained After Mustering Out is Completed.

Washington, Sept. 24.—There will be a reorganization of army corps, divisions and brigades as a result of the mustering out of volunteer regiments already completed, and the proposed muster out of additional troops.

There are now seven corps, one of which, the Sixth, has existed on paper only.

Officers attached to it have been on fictitious duty only, and the corps has been one of the general myths of the army administration, a place to put officers who were of no use or who had influence enough to make the wearing of a uniform and a drawing of a salary their military duty.

It is likely that there will be not more than four corps, one in the Philippines, one in Porto Rico and two in Cuba.

Peck Praises Cambon.

Washington, Sept. 24.—The French press has commented very favorably on the speech of the United States commissioner to the world's fair, Mr. Ferdinand Peck, in which he linked the names of Lafayette and Cambon, the present ambassador at Washington, in the following words:

"Lafayette and Cambon. The knight of liberty of the eighteen century and the wise diplomat of the nineteenth century. The fraternity inaugurated by the immortal Lafayette more than a hundred years ago, is again cemented by the friendly diplomacy of the ambassador of France in promoting the blessings of peace that have come after our recent struggle with a foreign foe."

Omaha Exposition Successful.

Omaha, Sept. 24.—The exposition has been a noteworthy success in many ways, but its financial triumph is a fact little dwelt upon.

When the gates were opened June 1, the management was under an indebtedness of $330,000. By September 14 this was entirely wiped out.

A million and a half of people have passed the turnstiles since the opening and it is estimated that three million will have visited the grounds by October 31, when the exposition is to close.

Vessels at Hampton Roads.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 24.—Since arriving in Hampton Roads, temporary repairs have been made to the engines of the monitor Amphitrite, and it is thought that she can proceed under her own steam to Boston, where, it is reported, she has been ordered. It is further reported that the repairs will cost $40,000.

The United States collier Sterling passed out of the Virginia capes at 12.30 o'clock yesterday, bound to New York, it is said, to join the battleships Iowa and Oregon to their trip to Honolulu.

EVACUATION AT ONCE

Hurry Orders to Our Commission in Cuba.

NO FURTHER DELAY THERE

Spaniards in Porto Rico Proceeding Everywhere in Good Faith. Preparing for the Ceremony for Raising Our Flag at San Juan.

Washington, Sept. 24.—A peremptory message of instruction has been sent to the Cuban military commission and by them made the basis of a note to the Spanish commissioners. The authorities in Washington will not make public the terms of the note, but its general tenor is that the United States will not be satisfied with any further delay in the evacuation of Cuba. It is to the effect that the terms of the protocol called for the "immediate" evacuation of Cuba, and that Spanish sovereignty must be relinquished. The American commissioners have been informed that the evacuation cannot be delayed.

San Juan, Island of Porto Rico, Sept. 23.—Everything regarding the evacuation of the island of Porto Rico by the Spanish troops is proceeding satisfactorily. The Spaniards are acting in perfect good faith, and are turning over everything as they quit the various towns.

Preparations are making for an elaborate and impressive ceremony when the American flag is raised over San Juan. The military commission has adjourned until next Monday.

The lights on the northern coast, which were extinguished when the war began, have been re-established except at San Juan, where the lighthouse was destroyed when this place was bombarded by the fleet under Admiral Sampson.

The lights of the city warn mariners approaching the port. The United States bears the expense of the maintenance of the coast lights.

United States Consul Hanna is flooded with letters from fortune hunters. He strongly advises all of them to remain at home until the Americans are in complete control.

The Santiago Garrison.

Washington, Sept. 24.—General Lawton, in command of the forces in Santiago, has made a number of recommendations in regard to the department. A cavalry force, he says, will allow him to control a large section now without garrison. He favors a rural police system, and says that a force of this kind, composed of ex-Cuban soldiers of good character, would be invaluable.

Native regiments can be successfully organized and mustered. The Cubans, he says, are tractable and easily controlled. With pay and clothing under good officers their loyalty would be assured.

International Commission.

Quebec, Sept. 24.—The international commission, after an hour's sitting yesterday, adjourned at 12.30 o'clock until next Tuesday.

This adjournment was necessitated by the stage which the negotiations have assumed after the exchange of written statements.

The members of the sub-committees in the meantime will meet in joint session daily. The written statements exchanged by the Americans and Canadians deal with twenty questions.

Gen. McCook Will Serve.

Washington, Sept. 24.—It was announced at the White House yesterday that General Alexander McDowell McCook, retired, had accepted a place on President McKinley's investigating commission.

The commissioners will meet at the White House this morning at ten o'clock, and after an interview with the president, proceed to the war department, and enter upon the discharge of their duties.

Resignation of Assistant Surgeon Pierce.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Passed Assistant Surgeon N. H. Pierce, one of the volunteer officers of the navy, has resigned.

He has a large practice in Chicago and is desirous of returning to it. At the outbreak of the war he was a member of the board which examined candidates for enlistment in the navy along the Gulf coast. During the war he was attached to the Kanawha.

Buffalo Bill Critically Ill.

Kansas City, Sept. 24.—Colonel W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," has been taken very ill and has been removed from his private car to St. Joseph's hospital.

He is suffering from typhoid fever, and his physicians say his condition is serious. He has been ailing for ten days.

To Resume Service.

New York, Sept. 24.—The International Navigation Company announces the resumption of its fast express service between New York and Southampton commencing with the sailing of he St. Louis on October 12, to be followed by the St. Paul on October 19, and the Paris on October 26.

Lecturer and Novelist Dead.

Baltimore, Sept. 24.—Richard Malcolm Johnston, the lecturer and novelist, died in this city yesterday morning after an illness of several months.

As an author Richard Malcolm Johnston is best known by his dialect stories. The first of these were published in the Southern Magazine at Baltimore in 1870.

Mr. Curzon a Peer.

London, Sept. 24.—Mr. George M. Curzon, the newly appointed viceroy to India, has been elevated to the peerage as Baron Curzon of Kedleston, Ireland.

Chili and Argentine Agree.

Buenos Ayres, Sept. 24.—It is reported that an amicable agreement between the Argentine and Chilian governments has been signed.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

The Reports for Three Weeks Have Been Larger Than Last Year.

New York, Sept. 24.—Europe will have to consider possible American demands for money much more anxiously in the future. Doubtless there has been for many years a feeling that the new continent could not be put off with promises. But the control of this country over money markets in the old world is coming to be that of a master. Our banks lend over there heavily when it is the most convenient market for them, but they draw on Europe whenever they want money and no longer have occasion to limit their drafts. The August return of foreign commerce shows another heavy balance on merchandise and specie account in favor of this country, and the exports from New York for three weeks have been five per cent. larger than last year, and although the imports have been 18 per cent. larger, the trade balance in September was last year so great that there is sure to be a heavier balance for this month than in August. In addition the growing foreign confidence in American investments has materially affected the movement of specie, and probably will affect it more decidedly in the future.

This country is not drawing on Europe as largely to pay for bread stuffs as it did a year ago, and yet wheat exports for the week, flour included, have been 3,963,204 bushels from Atlantic ports, against 3,677,868 last year and 543,417 from Pacific ports, against 1,094,893 last year, making for three weeks 10,203,941 from both coasts, flour included, against 15,569,129 last year. Prices have risen sharply, about four cents for the week, and the exports of corn, though not as large as last year, have been heavy in comparison with any other year. The price slightly advanced.

The reports from different cities disclose a wonderful activity at the chief centers of western trade, the dispatches from Chicago, St. Paul and St. Louis being specially significant.

The iron and steel trade expands with a rapidity which throws into the shade all expectations, with a steel famine in Germany, and Great Britain in the market for ten thousand tons plates, and the American works are crowded for months ahead.

The deliveries of boots and shoes have been about 9,000 cases larger than in any previous year, and 27,000 cases or ten per cent. larger than in the year 1892 to date.

The textile industries are not sharing the general improvement to a full extent, in part because the heavy decline in cotton, with large stocks of goods accumulating, makes the mills disposed to wait for future developments, and in part because the price of wool is higher than the mills are at present disposed to pay.

Failures for the three weeks ending September 15 have been $3,529,350, against $5,621,518 last year, and $18,019,232 in 1895.

The Generals of the Army.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Nothing definite has been determined regarding the muster out of various general staff officers, although the list is being prepared.

General Wheeler will be in command of the cavalry division when he reaches Huntsville, Ala.

The impression seems to be that General Wheeler will resign his commission in order to re-enter Congress.

General Greene, who arrived at San Francisco Thursday, it is supposed, will tender his resignation after a report has been made.

Two major generals in the volunteer service, General Graham and General Coppinger, will soon retire under the army regulations. General Graham is now in command at Camp Meade.

The suggestion has been made that even after he retires as a regular army officer he could be retained in the service under his volunteer commission and still remain in command of Camp Meade. The law in the case is being looked into.

Yellow Fever Situation Better.

New Orleans, Sept. 24.—The yellow fever situation is now regarded as favorable. No new cases have been reported since Wednesday, all the patients are improving and the fever is of a very mild type.

The Louisiana state board of health has quarantined against New Orleans and Jefferson parish, which is just opposite the city.

It advises a liberal construction of the Atlanta regulations as to passenger traffic and freight, because the infection is very small and removed from the commercial district and the danger from freight traffic remote. There have been seventy cases of fever at Franklin to date and two deaths.

Plans of Spain's Commission.

Paris, Sept. 24.—It is said here that the Spanish peace commissioners will leave Madrid on the evening of September 25, and that a preliminary meeting of the joint commission will be held on September 27 at the Quai d'Orsay. The meeting will be wholly informal.

Madrid, Sept. 24.—El Liberal understands that the government has appointed Senor de Ojeda, Spanish minister to Morocco, secretary of the Paris peace cimmission.

Soldiers May Vote at Sea.

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 24.—The Twentieth Kansas regiment, now stationed at San Francisco, and soon to start for Manila, will have a chance to vote for state officers and congressmen, but the polling place is likely to be on ship board, near the middle of the Pacific ocean.

Secretary of State Bush is preparing the ballots, which will be sent to Colonel Funston at San Francisco to-day.

More Gold Engaged.

New York, Sept. 24.—Imports of gold yesterday amounted to $350,000. Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. reported the engagements of $600,000, and Kountze Brothers $200,000. This brings the total gold movement thus far up to $13,775,000.

Campania Near Queenstown.

Queenstown, Sept. 24.—The steamship Campania, with the American peace commissioners on board, passed Old Head at one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

New Brunswick Not In It.

The editor of the Plainfield Press is to be commended for his civic pride, but he should not allow it to obscure his mental vision. He is rash enough to assert that Plainfield is in regard to population in the same class as New Brunswick. What nonsense! The population of this city is over 20,000, while that of Plainfield, according to official figures, is less than 14,000. Probably The Press includes North Plainfield, a separate municipality, in its estimate, but if the annexation business is tried and New Brunswick's suburbs included, we could easily claim a population of over 30,000. Plainfield is a very pleasant village for New York people to roost in, but it can never hope to possess the throbbing, hustling, progressive, industrial elements which characterize this city.—New Brunswick Home News.

The varying moods which the editor of The Home News has to assume towards New Brunswick must be making grey hairs settle thickly on the top of his cranium. One day he is exploiting the terrible things that the old Dutch city is subjected to in the way of a sluggish set of people and the crafty practices of its politicians, and the next he is sounding the praises of the town sky-high. It's a terrible trying thing for the New Brunswick editors to try and cope with the contradictory facts that their town develops.

True, according to statistics, Plainfield has only about 14,000 population, but those figures that The Home News man dotes on are three years old. Plainfield is without doubt 2,000 better off in population now than it was three years ago. Add to this the borough's population, and the only separation the borough has from the city is merely an imaginary county line running through the center of the town, and you have considerable over 20,000 population. Take in Dunellen, New Market, Washingtonville, a part of North Plainfield township, Scotch Plains and Fanwood, all of which are essentially of Plainfield in a business and even social way, and the population would not come far from 30,000, too.

There never was nor never will be a time when New Brunswick will be in it with Plainfield.

Mayoralty Talk.

The lack of spirited interest in the Gubernatorial campaign has caused an early discussion of candidates for the municipal election to be held next December. From the mutterings of discontent heard concerning the Republican administration of affairs in the city the Citizens' movement is likely to receive a strong impetus this year, and will undoubtedly be even more powerful than it was a year ago.

Dr. Cornelius D. Leveridge has been mentioned as a good candidate for Mayor for the Citizens', and the members of the Asbestos Club, of which he is one of the shining lights, are urging him to enter the canvass for the office with all the persuasive powers they possess. Mr. Leveridge is averse to the step, however, and says that he will not become an aspirant for the Mayoralty. During his long residence at Cranford he filled many of the local offices with benefit to the town and credit to himself. One of the considerations that induced him to remove to this city, he says, was to escape those public duties, and now he doesn't propose to diverge from his resolution.

The name of Robert D. Cook is heard as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination of Mayor. Though he has only recently become a resident of the city, formerly residing in the borough, his friends urge that he has a ready knowledge of city affairs and needs, and that his well-known capacity as a business man would commend him to a large number of voters.

LORD BRASSEY.

Lord Brassey, K. C. B., governor of Victoria, New South Wales, is on a visit to the United States. Lord Brassey is a recognized naval authority. He speaks in high praise of the conduct of our navy during the war with Spain. While approving generally of the style of our ships, he pays our men a compliment by saying: "Good men are better than good ships."

Prohibitionists on Hand.

Meeting year after year with no hope of victory to encourage them on, but just as resolutely following out what they consider their line of public duty, the Prohibitionists are a great example of perseverance. It appears that the Prohibitionists recently held a meeting in Somerset county, but for an item which appeared in a column of other temperance notes it is not likely that the nominations made by the cold water people would have ever seen the light of day.

It appears that the convention was held at Bound Brook Sept. 17th, and resulted in the following nominations being made:

Assembly—John H. Rhodes, Boycefield.
Sheriff—Geo. H. Murphy, Bound Brook.
Coroners—Wm. H. Lunger, North Plainfield, and Samuel Dutcher, South Bound Brook.

Wm. H. Eache and John Voorhees were re-elected county chairman and secretary.

The Prohibitionists are always optomistic if anything. Some years their candidates poll more and some years less votes than at previous elections, but somehow or other they are always feeling that the future holds out great things for them in the way of embodying their principles into the political institutions of the country. A Somerset county correspondent says of the situation in that bailiwick:

The outlook for prohibition work is better than it has been for years. Every township should be represented in the list of workers. Public meetings will be held throughout the county, literature will be scattered and an aggressive campaign made against the saloon and saloon politics.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The lesson that valuable railroad franchises should be sold for what they are worth and not given away, has manifestly been learned by the Plainfield Common Council. That body has for some time past been dallying with the "Elizabeth and Westfield Railway Company," granting it certain valuable franchises and considering the company's applications for other. Be it known that the said railway company is not the county trolley line; it is not the one which has offered $250,000 for the Westfield avenue franchise, it is the one which set out to tear up and ruin the Westfield avenue pavement and build its trolley line thereon without paying the county or the people a single dollar for the valuable privilege. When it could not get Westfield avenue it concluded to take any old thing, and has already secured the consents of the Westfield and Plainfield Councils for certain parts of streets in these places other than Westfield avenue. Certain other streets in Plainfield were greatly needed by this company in order to connect with streets in which they are already privileged to lay their tracks, and by a fair process of reasoning the Plainfield Common Councilmen reached the conclusion that the new franchises asked for were valuable. They therefore rescinded all ordinances and acts hitherto passed, and decided to commence considerations anew. Now, it is said, they will grant no privileges unless the company will pay for them. This will be a good thing for the city of Plainfield, but it will be a terrible blow to the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company. Meanwhile the broadening and improving of Westfield avenue will be continued as rapidly as possible.—Elizabeth Journal.

Elston M. French, Assessor of North Plainfield, is being urged by his friends to run for Assembly on the Democratic ticket. Mr. French is very popular in North Plainfield and having carried that Republican township once, can probably do so again if he should receive the nomination. He ought to poll the full Democratic vote in the other townships, which would elect him.—Somerville Democrat.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

A great programme of novelty and merit is promised in the performance of Al. Reeves' Famous Big Company of white and colored performers at Stillman Music Hall tonight, and lovers of genuine entertainment should bear this in mind. Al. Reeves is a famous performer himself. He is considered one of the greatest banjo experts in America and has had great experience in the managerial line. His companies are always accorded highest praise. They are composed of the best talent and this season it is said to be superior calibre. In the choruses the full strength of the company will be heard, and the minstrel first part will be a feature long to be remembered.

"Have You Seen Smith?" is the title of the very latest farce-comedy, which will be seen here next Friday night at Music Hall, prior to its presentation in New York, where it is booked for a run. Competent critics say it is "a battle of sparkling effervescent humor," delighting all who have the good fortune to see it. The entertainers in "Have You Seen Smith?" include Dolan and Lenharr, Williams and Tucker, Daly and Leonard, Murray Woods, Joe Natus, Bobby Mack, Fred Wenzel, A. H. Fritz, W. H. Scott, W. H. Raymond, J. W. Hyde, Fred Perkins, Harvey Sisters, Sylvia Holt and Gertrude Gilson.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Wood Wright, of New York, has been visiting Plainfield friends.

Miss Elinor Cooley, of Westervelt avenue, has gone to Swarthmore College.

Miss Charlotte DeMeza, of West Second street, has resigned her position at White's dry goods store.

Mr. and Mrs. George Homan have returned from their honeymoon and are residing on Hillside avenue.

Miss Emma Stevens, of Grandview avenue, has been home from the Trenton Normal School for a few days.

Miss Edna Cooley, of Westervelt avenue, has returned to her studies at Wellesley College, after spending part of her vacation at home.

Cut Loose

from the world of work for a day or two. Every good machine is better for a rest now and then. To idle wisely is to discount future drafts on health.

Besides, the brain needs quickening. Never see, never learn. Your neighbor may be distancing you, and you none the wiser. A hint from your rival strengthens your armor.

The moral of it: at the Great Inter-State Fair you find amusement and instruction. You are recreated (spell it re-created, and you have the meaning), and you pick up hints how to do things better.

The dates are September 26th, 27th, 28th and 30th.

—Charles Stanley, the North avenue florist, has a special sale the balance of September of a large stock of choice plants at low prices.

—Rev. Dr. Snodgrass will deliver the address in connection with the special rally-day exercises at the Congregational church tomorrow afternoon.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, September 24.—Alphonse Hould, a blacksmith, in the employ of Benjamin Elliott, was arrested and brought before Judge Clark Thursday evening charged with disorderly conduct. Mr. Elliott had only recently employed Hould as a helper and up to Friday evening had found him a very quiet and peaceable workman, but Hould before coming to Eliott had been employed by a blacksmith in Plainfield by the name of Stevens. Stevens called on Hould Thursday afternoon and had some conversation with him in an undertone. Hould shortly afterwards told Elliott he was going to leave and wanted his money. Elliott refused to pay him as his week was not up. Hould told him he would have it or take it out of his hide, and made preparations to proceed to business, but was prevented before doing any harm. Elliott immediately went before Judge Clark and swore out a warrant for his arrest. Judge Clark after hearing both sides of the case, imposed a fine of $5 and costs or thirty days in jail. Hould concluded to take the $5 and costs.

In the contract case of Brown against Schenck, before Judge Clark Wednesday, judgement was rendered for the plaintiff for full amount and costs.

John Miller has resigned his position with John Cook, and has engaged in the oil business.

INSTANTANEOUS RELIEF

FROM ASTHMA

Has Been Afforded Many Sufferers in Plainfield.

If there was doubt in the mind of any sufferer from Asthma in this city as to the truth of the claims made for Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure, that doubt no longer remains, provided he was among those who called at L. W. Randolph's Drug Store last Thursday and obtained a free sample package. A great number who have already tried the same declare in positive terms that relief was immediate; that the wretched spasms were checked; that free expectoration was induced; that a reclining position was readily assumed and gratefully maintained; that the sleep which followed was restful and unbroken, and that the morning brought a clear head and a feeling of delighted thankfulness which no words are too strong to describe.

Abundant voluntary testimonials prove that Dr. Schiffmann's Asthma Cure not only gives instant relief in the worst cases, but has positively cured thousands who were considered incurable. The remedy is now sold by all druggists in packages at 50c. and $1.00, thus bringing it within the reach of all. Should any reader be unable to obtain it of his druggist, it will be sent, postpaid, by sending to Dr. R. Schiffmann, 316 Rosabel street, St. Paul, Minn.
